Frontispiece. (Volume I) NANDA TEMPLE, PAGÁN.

Frontispiece. (Volume II) GOLD REPOUSSÉ PLATE FROM MYINPAGÁN.
Neg. 455 (1906–07). Find-spot not stated.

The haloed Buddha, with ūṇā, flame-tipped uṣṇīṣa, flaming nimbus, shoulder-ray gnomons and cushioned reredos, sits in padmāsana on lotus, touching Earth. On either side his aggasāvakas, right and left, Sāriputta and Moggallāna, kneel facing him in adoration, offering each a flower. Above, two crowned Devas stoop through the clouds, with both hands offering lotus buds. Branching sprays of the Bodhi tree behind.

In 1906–07 only one site at Pagán appears to have been excavated: Sità stupa (Pl. 210 d), “5 ft. S.E. of the Abeyadana temple”. But this gold plate is not mentioned in the list of finds there (ASB 1907, pp. 9–10). The plate was deposited at Pagán Museum; but later it was stolen, and never recovered.

Frontispiece. (Volume III) A BODHISATTVA RIPE FOR BUDDHAHOOD.

Plates 1 to 3. VIEWS OF PAGÁN.

Plate 1. Pagán area. View to the S.E.
Phot. Tin Oo.

Looking S.E. from Gawdawpallin temple near the river. In the foreground the road going S. to Myinpagán and Thiripyitsaya. On the left, Tharaba Gate is just visible. Then, as the eye moves S. across the middle distance: Shwegu-gyi – Nanda – Thatbyinnyu, with Ngā-kywè-nâdaung and Nat-hlaung-gyaung to right of it – Pâthothâmya in front, Dhammayan-gyi behind, city-wall and moat between – Shwéhsandaw – Minnanthu and Pwazaw in the distance – Tuywindaung on the horizon.

Plate 2. Pagán city. View to W.NW.
Phot. Tin Oo.

Plate 3. View from the N. to the S.E., across Pagán city and the river.

Near the top right of the print is Mt. Tan-kyi and its pagoda across the river. On the near side, moving S. along the river-bend: Mahâbodhi temple and Bu Paya. Then Gawdawpallin. More inland, Shwegu-gyi. Then Thatbyinnyu and Nanda temples. S. of these, Shwéhsandaw and Mingalazedi stupas.

Neg. 7914 (Pl. 4); 7909 (Pl. 5 a); 2208 (Pl. 5 b); 7913 (Pl. 5 c); 2206 (Pl. 5 d); 2207 (Pl. 5 e).

U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 12 (a, b) and pp. 15–16.

Ref. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 12 (a, b) and pp. 15–16.

Height of complete tablet: about 2 ft. 7 in. Breadth at base: 1 ft. 6 in. Thickness at base: 4½ to 6 in. Depth of rim: 4 in. or less.

Maung Di pagoda (Pl. 75) is ½ mile S.W. of Khābin, between Twanté and Rangoon. Built by Aniruddha, perhaps c. 1050 A.D. The two upper octagonal terraces were lined with his largest, and probably earliest tablets, now all in fragments. Squared below, arching to a point above, they show single ETB on throne in shrine crowned with sikhara-stupa, with 7 stupas and foliage on each side. Incised on front of lower rim is the follg. Pali inscription in Mon script (first read by Duroiselle): – eso bhagavā mahārāja sri aniruddha-devena kato vimuttatatham sahaththenvā ti

"This Blessed One was made by the great king, Śrī Aniruddha the divine, with his own hands, for the sake of Deliverance."

Plate 6. Single Earth-touching Buddha. Pagán, near Seinnyet.

(a) Text, pp. 16, 98, 133–134.

Height 4¼ in. Breadth at base 2½ in.

Found in main relic-chamber of encased stupa close to ruined temple (No. 441) near Seinnyet pagodas, S. of Myinpagán. Rimless tablet squared below, arching to a point above. Beaded border all around. ETB with high ‘flame’-uṣṇīṣa and shoulder-nimbus, sits on double lotus between pellet pillars, with squared base, capitals and abacus, supporting a beaded trefoil sikhara-arch with stupa finial and streamers. Behind are 3 diminishing horizontal roofs, with branching peepal tree. 2 clear lines of mixed Pali/Sanskrit in high relief and fine Nāgarī script – the usual Buddhist ‘Creed’. Read by Mon Bo Kay as follows: –

\[ ye dhammā hetuprabhavā hetu(m) teśā(m) tathāgato hyava-[dat = teśā(m)] ca yo nirodha evamvāđī śri aniruddhadēva \]

The plate in U Mya’s article (XCIX a, b, c, d) deserves study. It shows not only the tablet, but also the encased stupa where he found it; the Khābin (Twanté) pot also found there (our Pl. 452 b); and a Lokanātha tablet (our Pl. 54 c). Aniruddha was probably responsible for all of these. Note also his unique spelling of his name, Anuruddhā. Elsewhere he always writes Aniruddhā.

Ref. ASB 1917, Pl. II B. Mem. ASI, No. 56, Pl. I 1.

Rimmed tablet almost identical with (a), and from the same site. Cracked.

At Mandalay Archaeological Office there is another good, but cracked specimen, with deep rims broken across the Nāgari inscription at the base. I read the marking “I 4 (?)”. If this should be I 44, it would refer to the same site, near the Seinnyet. Another rimmed specimen, marked I 230, is complete except for the top rim.

(c) Single Earth-touching Buddha. Pagan, Shwehsandaw.

Text, pp. 15-16, 98, 134.

Neg. B 638 (1957-58). U Mya, VTB I, Pls. 4 and 5, and p. II.

From relic-chamber of Shwehsandaw pagoda, Pagán. Rimless beaded oval tablet. The Buddha, with large usṇiṣa, sits between pellet pillars supporting a beaded trefoil arch, with umbrella above (no śikhara). 2 stupas, large and medium, on each side of the arch, with peepal sprays above. On either side of the double lotus are 2 broken lines of Sanskrit/Nāgari in high relief, and 2 full lines below it. Mon Bo Kay reads:

\[
\text{may} = \text{ānิ ruddhade} | \text{vena kr̥taṁ | sugatasa[ṇc]a} | \text{tena maitreya sarhbo | dho labheyan} = \\
\text{nirvṛtto padaṁ}

“By me, Aniruddha the divine, has been made this mould of the Blessed One. By this, may I obtain the path to Nirvāṇa when Maitreya is fully enlightened”.

(d) 3 similar tablets from the same site.

Similar specimens of Aniruddha’s Seal, marked I 197 and I 15, with the same Nāgari inscription, have been found at the Shw6hsandaw (Pl. 22 a). For a specimen with a Mon inscription on the Reverse, offered by “Lord Nawur,” see Pl. 22 b. Another, marked I 47, comes from “a small four-faced temple S.W. of Sōmin-gyi pagoda”: see Pl. 22 d.
left holds the stalk of lotus before the body. The lotus is seen in bud over his left shoulder, and another bud rises above his right. His head is tilted to the left. His crown of plaited hair (jaṭāmukūṭa) holds the figure of Amitābha Buddha seated in dhyānamudrā. He sits between two rounded pillars, with torus base and bead-hung abacus. They support a trefoil arch, crowned with a ‘tongued’ śikhara, stupa-finial and streamers. On each side, in tiers, are 2 stupas, large and medium, with a small stupa between the medium one and the śikhara, and a minute one leaning in towards the finial at the peak. Beaded border at the sides. Round the 3 sides of the base runs a line (or two) of Nagari inscription in high relief – the usual ‘Credo’, read by Mon Bo Kay as follows: –

\[ \text{ye dhamā he(tu) prabhavā hetu(m) teśā(m) hetu tathāgato (hyavadat = teśāṁ ca yo nirodhō evanāvādī) mahāśamana} \]

Since there was not room at the bottom of the tablet, the final word is written above, outside the trefoil arch: mahā on the left side, samana on the right. For 2 other specimens found at Kanbè, E. of Twanté, without the underrim inscription, see Pl. 54 a, b.

(b) the same. Inscription on the underrim, 3 lines of Pali in Mon script: –

\[ \text{ eso lokanātho mahārā jā sirī aniruddhadevena kato | vimuttattham sahatthenevā ti} \]

“This Lokanātha (Lord of the World) was made by the great king Sirī Aniruddha the divine, with his own hands, for the sake of Deliverance”.

(c, d). Similar green-glazed, rimmed tablet (top half only) found on the image-throne of Shwegu-gyi, Pagan. Now at Pagan Archaeological Office.

Height 3 in. Breadth 3 in. Thickness 1 in. Lower half lost.

(c) Obverse identical in detail with that of Pl. 7 (a), but nothing left below neck of the Bodhisattva. Note rich green glaze (perhaps the oldest glazed work at Pagan).

(d) Reverse. Parts of 3 lines of Pali inscription visible: –

\[ \text{ eso bha|gavā mahārā | .sirī aniruddha | . . . . . . . .} \]

“This Blessed One, the great king Sirī Aniruddha . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . .”

Plates 8 a, b. 5 seated figures (Pagan). Aniruddha’s Seals.

(a) Neg. 3112 (1928-29). U Mya, VTB 1, Pls. 6, 7, and p. 12.

Ref. ASI 1929, p. 111, item 6.

Height 5 in. Breadth at base 3 in.

2 rimless tablets, squared below, arching to a point above. Found in relic-chamber of E. mound in Aung Hla’s field S.W. of Htilominlo temple. With high ‘flame’-uṣṇīṣa and beaded shoulder-nimbus, the ETB sits on ‘leather’ mat, double lotus, and recessed throne with chevron beading. Two rounded pillars, with torus and capital hung with beads, support a trefoil arch above him. Three horizontal roofs are just visible behind, and bead-edged floral śikhara with stupa-finial and streamers. In tilted nimbus-arches 2 Bodhisattvas (Lokanātha and Maitreya ?) sit in lalitasana to right and left of him, their outer legs hanging. The double lotuses on which they sit, spring from independent roots. Above them, in floral arches sit 2 small ETBs. Between them and the śikhara are peepal sprays, 2 starry bosses, and 6 small stupas leaning inwards. At the base are 2 lines of Sanskrit/Nāgari in high relief, read by Mon Bo Kay as follows: –
om. deyadharmo'yaṁ saccadānapatiḥ maḥārāja śrī aniruddhadevasya

“This is the pious gift of the donor of truth, the great king Śrī Aniruddha the divine”. – Is sacca (or sañca, a possible reading) a mistake for sañca-caka-, i.e. ‘donor of the mould’? Cf. Pl. 12 a.

(b) Similar rimless tablets, marked I 120, found in relic-chamber under throne of seated Buddha in shrine of Kyazin temple, Myinpagan.

Neg. 3444 (1931–32).

Ref. ASI 1930–34, Part I, pp. 187–8, with U Mya’s reading and account of the temple; Part II, Pl. CVI c.

Height 5\textfrac{1}{2} in. Breadth at base 3\textfrac{3}{4} in. Thickness \textfrac{1}{4} in.

Similar seals of Aniruddha, marked I 373 and 374, were discovered in 1936–37 at Pagan, 2 in a ruined temple in Po Saw’s field S. of Nagayon, 2 in a mound N. of Nagayon. See Pl. 71 c for a similar seal in the Indian Museum, Calcutta. Cf. ASB 1913, p. 16, for 2 tablets “found at Pagan during the year, the legend of which is:

sadharma‘yaḥ saccadānapati mahārāja śrī aniruddhadevena….”

Plates 8 c. Trilokavatamsaka’s Seal (Pagán).

Text, pp. 74, 84, 98, 99, 192–193.

Neg. 3471 (1931–32). U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 42 (a, b) and p. 31.

Found in relic-chamber of the northern of the two stupas in Po Saw’s field, S.E. of Nagayon. See U Mya’s plate, where (b) shows the ‘central stupa’ where the tablet was found, and (c) a miniature stone stupa found within it. There were also “bricks marked with Pyu letters.” The donor was a queen of Kyanzittha, mother of Rājakumār. Only 2 of the tablets were discovered, and both are lost. Only the photograph remains. U Mya tells me that, so far as his memory goes, the tablets were about 6 inches high and 4 inches broad.

Tablet squared below, arching to a point above. ETB sits on lotus throne under śikhara-arch resting on turned pillars, crowned with stupa and umbrella. Bodhisattvas (Lokanātha and Maitreya?) sit in lalitāsana on lotus seats to right and left of him; 2 ETBs above them; and 2 small stupas between them and the umbrella at the apex. Below are 2 lines of Pali in Mon script in high relief, read by U Mya:

eso bhagavā trilokavatamsakā mahādevīya kato vimuttattham sahatthen‘ eva ti

Text, pp. 17, 98, 131.

(a) Neg. 3107 (1928–29).

Ref. ASI 1929, p. 111.

Height 5\textfrac{1}{2} in. Breadth at base 3\textfrac{1}{2} in.

central Buddha sits on mat, double lotus, and recessed throne with chevron beading. 2 rounded pillars, with torus and capital hung with beads, support a trefoil abacus-arch above him. 3 horizontal roofs just visible behind, and bead-edged floral śikhara with stupa-finial and streamers. 5 smaller ETBs sit on lotuses in a line below, and 2 more on each side in tiers – 10 altogether. The 2 smallest, at the top, sit in floral trefoil arches. The others have merely a lace-like background of nimbus-tracery. 3 stupas in tiers on each side separate the side and central Buddhas. There are 2 more small stupas and branching peepal sprays on each side of the śikhara. 1 line of compressed Nāgarī at the base in high relief. Mon Bo Kay reads the mixed Pali/Sanskrit ‘Creed’ as follows:

\[(\text{ye) dhamā hetuprabhāvā hetu(m) teśā(ṁ) hetu(m) tathāgato hyavadat = teśāṁ=ca yo nirodh(o) eva(ṁ)vādi mahāśamaṇa}\]

(b, c) Lower half of 2 similar tablets, only the 2 lowest rows of Buddhas, and line of Nāgarī at the base. Provenance unknown.

(d) Obverse, heavily gilded, of a similar deep-rimmed tablet, showing 10 ETBs. Found by Saya U Thaung, Inspector of Schools, near a tank W. of Chantha village, Yé-u township, Shwebo. Now on loan at Mandalay Archaeological Office. 1 line of Nāgarī inscription below.

Height 6 in. Breadth at base 5 in. Depth of rim 2 in.

(e) Reverse of (d), with 4 lines of Pali in Mon script:

\[\text{1 eso bhagavaḥ mahārajaśri aniruddhaḥ vena kato vimuttaḥ tathāṁ saharThinneva ti \n“This Blessed One was made by the great king Sirī Aniruddha the divine, with his own hands, for the sake of Deliverance”}\]

(f) Similar deep-rimmed tablet (not gilded) showing 10 ETBs. Found at Nwätélë (Nwatélë) deserted village, a mile from Nga-o on the river Shweli, in the far north of Mōng Mit State, about 15 miles from Katha, and 20 from In-ywa at the Shweli mouth – the northernmost point where Aniruddha’s Seals have so far been recovered.

Text, pp. 17, 28.

U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 68 a and p. 51.

Height 6½ in. Breadth at base 5½ in. Rim 2 in. deep.

(g) Reverse of (f), with 3 lines of Pali engraved in Mon script. Reading as in (e.)

\[\text{Neg. 4665 (1947–48). U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 68 b and p. 51.}\]

Cf. also Pl. 14 a, b, c, from Pagán, Myinpyagu. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 11 and pp. 14–15. At ASB 1938, p. 7, Duroiselle mentions “a broken terracotta votive tablet bearing numerous effigies of the Buddha, with a line of writing in Nāgarī characters which is the usual Buddhist formula: ‘ye dharmā hetuprabhāvā’ etc. On the under-surface of the lower rim the well-known Anoratha’s seal in Pāli in Burmese characters: ‘eso bhagavaḥ mahārajaśri aniruddha’ etc. It was discovered on the 2nd terrace of the Shwehsandaw pagoda, Pagán’.
Plate 10-11

Plate 10. 31 seated figures. West Hpetleik.

Ref. ASB 1907, p. 27 (Nos. 443–445).

Height about 7 in. Breadth 4 in. Thickness 1 in.

(a) Rimmed tablet found at W. Hpetleik pagoda, Thiripyitsaya. Rim mostly lost except at base. Right side slightly damaged. Tablet squared at base, arching to a point above. Beaded border at sides, but not at base. The large central ETB, with beaded shoulder-nimbus, sits on mat, double lotus, and indented and recessed throne. Rounded pillars, with torus and abacus (no beading), support a trefoil arch over him, and a bead-edged floral śikhara with stupa-finial. Streamers and peepal-sprays to right and left. On either side of the throne sit Bodhisattvas with outward-tilted heads, in lalitāsana, their outer legs hanging, their outer hands resting on knee in varada mudrā, their inner hands raised before the body, holding the curling stems of flowers. The one on the left of the throne is Lokanātha, the one on the right probably Maitreya. Around these 3 figures are grouped the 28 ETBs. in 5 rows: top row 4 with 2 stupas at each end; 2nd row 6; 3rd row 6; 4th row 4 (and the 2 Bodhisattvas); lowest row 8. Each Buddha sits erect on lotus-mat within his beaded shoulder-nimbus. At the base is a line of Sanskrit/Nāgarī in high relief, read by Mon Bo Kay:–

om. kṛtirīyaṁ rājāṁ śrī aniruddhadevasya

“This is the work of the monarch Śrī Aniruddha the divine”.

(b) Underrim inscription engraved on the same, or a similar tablet from the same site – 3 lines of Pali in Mon script. Reading as in Pl. 9 e.

Neg. 7632 (1957–58). Cf. Neg. 443 (1906–07), where the same underrim inscription is shown, together with another from the same site, not so perfect. See also Pl. 11 h, i.

A similar seal, deep-rimmed, almost complete except for the bottom right rim, is at Mandalay Arch. Office. It is marked I 332, from Pagán. The underrim inscription is incomplete; but . . . (ni)ruddhadevena is clear.

(a) Lower left corner of a similar tablet, marked I 88, from Pagán. Part of the central Buddha is visible, the two Bodhisattvas, and 2 of the Buddhas of the lowest row but one; and the lowest row and line of Sanskrit/Nāgarī almost complete. This line, stamped in high relief, reads as in Pl. 10 a:–

om. kṛtirīyaṁ rājāṁ śrī aniruddhadevasya

(b) Underrim inscription on (a) – 3 lines of Pali in Mon script, almost complete. Readings as in Pl. 9 e. Cf. Neg. 1113 B (1912–13). I.B., Pl. V 568 a, tablet from Shwéhsandaw pagoda, Pagán.

(c) Lower right corner of a similar tablet, marked I 343, from Pagán. The central Buddha, 1 Bodhisattva (Maitreya), and 13 other ETBs in 4 rows are visible; also part of the line of Nāgarī below them:–

. . . . . . . . jñāṁ śrī aniruddhadevasya

(d) Bottom fragment of a similar rimmed tablet from Pagán, showing the lowest row and line of Nāgarī complete.
(e) Top part of a similar tablet, marked I \text{361 (?)}, from Pagán, showing only the top 4 rows.

(f) Lower left corner-fragment of a similar tablet, marked I \text{209}, from Pagán. Most of the lowest row is visible, and the line of Nāgarī in high relief:

\text{om. kṛṣṭirīvāṃ rājñāḥ śrī anirūḍha(ddha). . . .}

(g) Underrim inscription on fragment (f) – 3 lines of Pali in Mon script, incomplete at the far ends. Reading as in Pl. 9 e.

(h) Lower half of similar rimmed tablet, marked “\text{30}” in Burmese. It shows the bottom two rows and line of Nāgarī complete:

\text{om. kṛṣṭirīvāṃ rājñāḥ śrī aniruddhadevasya}

(i) Underrim inscription on fragment (h) – 3 lines of Pali in Mon script, complete. Reading as in Pl. 9 e.

Note that (h), (i) are identical with Pl. \text{10 a, b} – all that remains of this fine W. Hpetleik seal.

Note. Duroiselle (\textit{ASB} 1912, p. 19, para 59; cf. \textit{1911}, p. 27, para 71) reported votive tablets, apparently similar, from Paunglin, Minbu: – “2 terracotta tablets were found in an old pagoda at Paunglin, Salin Subdivision, Minbu district. On them was depicted the 28 Buddhas, with Gautama in the middle in the state of attaining enlightenment. In the 4th row, Gautama is flanked by \text{Mañjusiri}, a being unknown to the southern school of Buddhism, who sits in the \text{lalitamudrā} (with the right leg hanging down). Below the 5th row of the Buddhas is a legend in Sanskrit, which has been deciphered and translated by the learned Government Epigraphist as follows: – kṛṣṭir-iyam rājā śrī aniruddhadevasya. ‘This is the work of the glorious king Aniruddhadeva’. On the lower rim of each tablet is an inscription in Pali, whose interpretation is: ‘This votive tablet was made by His Majesty Aniruddhadeva with his own hands, with a view to attain Nirvāṇa’ . . . .”

For other seals of Aniruddha from Minbu, see \textit{ASB} 1906, p. 10, para 36. Tablets with 31 figures signed by Aniruddha were also found by Duroiselle at “a small ruined pagoda near the Mingalazedi on the road to Myinkaba” (\textit{ASI} 1927, p. 169). Another signed by Aniruddha (\ldots \text{yanh rājāḥ śrī aniruddhadeva} . . . .) was reported by Duroiselle at Hsameikshē, Meiktila district (\textit{ASB} 1922, p. 10; \textit{ASI} 1922, pp. 90–91; 1937, p. 165).

Plate 12. \textit{50 Earth-touching Buddhas.}

Text, pp. 17, 98, 131.

Tablet marked I \text{191}, from Pagán, with deep rims broken at top and bottom; squared below, arching to a point above. Almost complete. It shows 3 umbrellas in the apex, above 50 ETBs, all of one size. Each Buddha sits on double lotus in beaded panel, with a small stupa between his nimbus and those of the Buddhas next to him. There are 6 rows: 6 Buddhas, flanked by 2 small stupas at each end, in the top row; 8 in the 2nd row; 9 in each of the 4 lower rows: total 50. Below, is 1 line of Pali in Nāgarī script, high relief, read by Mon Bo Kay:

\text{om. sa(ñ)cakadānapati mahārāja śrī aniruddhadevena kato bhagavo}

“This Blessed One was made by the great king Śrī Aniruddha the divine, donor of the mould”.

Plate 13-14

(b) Similar deep-rimmed tablet with "124" (?) faintly inked on the back. Complete except for rim at the top. A comparison of (a) and (b) enables one to estimate the size of the complete tablet: - Height approx. 7 in. Breadth 5 in. Thickness 1\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

c) Underrim inscription on (b) - 3 lines of Pali in Mon script. Reading as in Pl. 9 e.

\[\text{Neg. 7637 (1957–58).}\]

d) Similar deep-rimmed tablet, with top right half lost. Marked I 209, from Pagán.

e) Detail of the last row of Buddhas in (d), including the line of Nāgarā. Reading as in (a) above.

(f) Underrim inscription on (d).

At Mandalay Arch. Office there are 2 such rimmed tablets, marked I 209, fragments, but both have underrim 'seal' and line of Nāgarā on obverse more or less complete. A small underrim fragment, marked I 255, from Pagán, bears the usual Pali/Mon 'seal' of Aniruddha; the obverse, in the Burmese register, is stated to show "many Buddhas". "Tablet G", as described by Duroiselle at ASB 1915, pp. 36–37, is also of this type. It appears to come from Pagán.

(a) Lower half of similar rimmed tablet, marked I 210 (1926), from Pagán Shwëhsandaw pagoda. Shows the lowest 2\(\frac{1}{2}\) rows of ETBs, and line of Nāgarā almost complete. Reading as in Pl. 12 a.

(b) Underrim inscription on (a) - 2 lines of Pali in Mon script. Reading as in Pl. 9 e.

c) Lower third of similar tablet, from Pagán, without legible number. Shows the 2 lowest rows of ETBs., and line of Nāgarā complete.

(d) Underrim inscription on (c) - 3 lines of Pali in Mon script. Reading as in Pl. 9 e.

\[\text{Neg. B/137 (1953–54).}\]

(e) \[\text{Neg. 452 (1906–07). U Mya, VTB, I Pls. 70, 71 and p. 52.}\]

Bottom fragment of similar tablet from Minbu (probably Paunglin), showing the lowest row of Buddhas, and the line of Pali/Nāgarā complete. Reading as in Pl. 12 a.

(f) Underrim inscription on (e) - 3 lines of Pali in Mon script; beginning of line 3 damaged. Reading as in Pl. 9 e.

\[\text{Neg. 453 (1906–07).}\]

Fragments of Aniruddha's 50-Buddha tablet were also discovered by General de Beylié and others, in the interior of Bawbawgyi pagoda, Śrī Kṣetra, with parts, at least, of the Pali/Nāgarā inscription at the base. This was first correctly read by Venkayya, then misread, then finally corrected by Duroiselle with the help of 2 similar tablets from Paunglin, Minbu district. See ASI 1908, pp. 41–42; 1912, p. 144 and Pl. LXVIII, fig. 2; ASB 1912, p. 13; 1913, p. 16.

Plate 14. Aniruddha's Seals. Reverses and underrim inscriptions, etc.

(a, b, c) An Obverse and 2 Reverses of fragmentary tablets marked I 206 A, from Myinpyagu temple, Pagán. When complete, they showed 10 ETBs. (cf. Pl. 9). (a), the Obverse, shows most of the last row of Buddhas and the line of Nāgarī at the base. (c) is the Reverse of (a). (b) is a similar reverse from the same site. Readings as in Pl. 9 e, but incomplete.

Cf. ASB 1922, App. G, p. 44, Neg. 9, 10 (3 or 2 lines of Pali, by Aniruddha, at Myinpyagu). Text, p. 49.

(d) 2 'seals' from reverse and underrim of tablets found at Pagán Shwéhsandaw. Each has 3 complete lines of Pali in Mon script.

Reading as in Pl. 9 e.

Neg. 356 (1905–06).

(e) Neg. 1113 A (1912–13).

Seal of Aniruddha on the underrim of a broken tablet marked on the back I 72 (1930–31), from Pagán. The Obverse (not shown) illustrated the 50 Buddhas. Now only the 3 lower rows and line of Nāgarī remain. On the underrim there are 3 slightly damaged lines of Pali in Mon script. Reading as in Pl. 9 e.

Underrim inscription – 3 clear lines of Pali in Mon script. Reading as in Pl. 9 e.

(g) 2 fragmentary underrim seals of Aniruddha, now at Mandalay Arch. Office. The upper seal, marked I 84, is part of a 50-Buddha tablet from Pagán Shwéhsandaw. Pali in Mon script. Readings as in Pl. 9 e, but incomplete.

Plates 15 to 21.

OTHER SEALS OF ROYALTY.

Plate 15. Śrī Bajrābharana. Mergui (Pali inscr.). Pagán, Mandalay, Tagaung, Kanthida (seals).

Text, pp. 26, 28, 36, 46, 49.

Top fragment of a stone inscription (Pali, in Mon script) found near Mergui, perhaps in Maunglaw-kwin. It was originally set up by an early king of Pagán, Śrī Bajrābharana, probably the king now known as Sawlu. For its discovery (probably by R. Grant-Brown) and description by Lunet de Lajonquière and Finot, see Text, ch. II, note 100, and ch. III, p. 46; also my article “Some old references to the south of Burma and Ceylon” in the Siam Society's Felicitation Volumes of S. E. Asian Studies, Vol. II, Nov. 7th 1965, pp. 272, 279–280. The stone was placed in Rangoon Phayre Museum, and later in the hall of Rangoon University Library, where it was blown to bits in the destruction of that building by the Japanese. The print shown here, though smaller, is fuller than the rubbing photographed in I.B. In the top arch of the stone, above the line of beading, there is a fine relief-carving of ETB, seated on 'leather' mat and lotus seat amid a giant forest of coiling lotus.
Plate 15

(b) Text, pp. 46, 98, 292.

Height 8½ in. Breadth at base 6 in.

Terracotta tablet, marked I 135, found at Myinpyagu temple, Pagán. Now in 3 fragments at Mandalay Arch. Office. Deep-rimmed and squared up to the shoulder-wings, then arching to a point. The rim-faces are patterned in arabesque. Within the rims the sides are beaded up to the peak. At top centre is an umbrella between sprays of peepal. Below these are 6 rows of ETBs., all of one size: 6 Buddhas in the top row, with a small stupa at each end; 8 Buddhas in the 2nd row; 9 each in the 4 lower rows; total 50. As on Aniruddha’s 50-Buddha tablets (Pls. 12, 13), there is a small stupa between the beaded nimi of each pair of Buddhas. The line of Sanskrit/Nāgarī at the base is read by Mon Bo Kay:

ōṃ rājñaḥ śrī vajrāharaṇadevasya...

(c) Underrim inscription on (b) – 3 lines of Pali in Mon script:

eso bhagavā mahārāja siri bajrāḥ bharanadevena kato vimuttattham saha |ṭhenevā ti

“This Blessed One was made by the great king Sirī Bajrābharaṇa the divine, with his own hands, for the sake of Deliverance.” Cf. Neg. 3512 (1931–32).

(d) Neg. 4738 (1949–50). U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 38 and p. 27.

Ref. ASB 1948–52, Pl. I (fig. on right side), and p. 7, where the reading is wrongly given as: etakā mahātā naraṇanda vanpalaḥ 1 (see infra).

Height 5½ in. Breadth at base 3½ in. Thickness ½ in.

Tablet squared below arching to a point above. Beaded border all around. Found at a ‘Thein’ at Nan-u-taik, S. of Mandalay. Shows ETB seated on lotus throne between turned pillars supporting trefoil arch, śikhara and stupa-finial. Streamers and peepal leaves at sides. Lotus ‘trees’ in the lower corners, with 2 medium and 1 small stupa on each side. 1 line of Nāgarī writing at base.

A similar tablet, with top right corner broken, has also been found at Tagaung, Ōdōk pagoda (Text, p. 28). On hearing from Mon Bo Kay that these were votive tablets of Sawlu, we wrote to ask U Mya to verify the reading given above. The gist of his reply (in Burmese) is that the ASB reading, based on a single plaque faintly inscribed, is wrong; that since then, many similar plaques have been found at Kathīda Old City, Katha district, as well as others from Ōdōk pagoda, Tagaung; and that Mon Bo Kay is right in reading the title Śrī Bajrābharaṇa. – This king, doubtless Aniruddha’s son Sawlu, appears to have reigned at least from Katha in the north to Mergui in the south. Mon Bo Kay’s reading, confirmed by the Government Epigraphist for India, Dr. D. C. Sircar, is: – mahā śrīmad = bajrābharaṇadaveśva bhiraḥ

“The load (of offerings?) of the great and glorious Bajrābharaṇa the divine.”

(e) Similar tablet of Śrī Bajrābharaṇa from Ōdōk pagoda, Tagaung now in the possession of Prof. Daw Thin Kyi, Rangoon University. Phot. Tin Oo.

(f) Detail of line of Nāgarī at base of (e). Reading as in Mon Bo Kay’s version of (d). Phot. Tin Oo.
Note. After enquiries, Col. Ba Shin informs me that the old walled city of ‘Kanthida’, mentioned under (d), is “in the Forest Reserve near Pyindaung village, Inywa circle, Katha township.” – The site should be worth excavating, together with the neighbouring Nwatele site where Aniruddha’s northernmost plaques (Pl. 9 f, g) were found.

Plate 16. Śrī Tribhuvanāditya. 50 Earth-touching Buddhas. Pagān.

Text, pp. 52, 98, 131.

Ref. Duroiselle, ASI 1927, p. 170 and Pl. XXXIX (d).

Height $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. Breadth at base $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. Thickness at base with rim $1\frac{5}{8}$ in.

(b) Detail of lowest row of (a), and line of writing below it.

(c) Similar tablet, broken at top left corner, but otherwise complete with rims. Found in ruined stupa E. of Mingalazedi pagoda. Neg. 3513 (1931–32).

(d) Underrim inscription on (c) – 3 lines of Pali in Mon script:

(sr)i tribhuvanādityadhammarājena attano a|tthena buddhabhāvāya aggita patimā i|mā

Pe Maung Tin translates: – “This image, of burnt (clay), (has been made by) Śrī Tribhuvana-dityadhammarāja for his own benefit, for the attainment of Buddhahood.”

Plate 17. Śrī Tribhuvanāditya. 50 Earth-touching Buddhas, cont. Pagān.

(c) 2 fragmentary underrim inscriptions formerly stored at Kyanzittha Ōnhmin, Pagān. The upper one is under tablet (b) supra, and is clearly identical with Pl. 16 d, though damaged at the end of the 2nd line. The lower one also has 3 lines of Pali in Mon script:

1 sīri tribhuvanāditya(dha)....|na attano hatthe buddha(bhā) . . .itā patimā imā
"This image of burnt clay (?) (has been made) by Śrī Tribhuvanādītya... with his own hand, for the attainment of Buddhahood."

(e) Fragmentary Pali inscription in Mon script on underrim of (d) supra: - ....(t)yadhammarājena a...āṅgītā....

Note. Lu Pe Win (ASB 1941, pp. 31, 32) reported: - "A terracotta tablet bearing Kyanzittha's seal in seven lines was discovered in a Mon temple No. 418 (gha) on the west of the main road a mile south of the Lokananda Pagoda." - Can the learned author have confused Kyanzittha's title with Narathu Kulagya's? For the latter's tablets, see infra, Pl. 19.

Plate 18. Śrī Tribhuvanādītyapavarā. 100 Earth-touching Buddhas, Pagān. Pakhan-ngè.

Text, pp. 84, 98.

Rimmed tablet, squared at the base, arching to a point above, beaded at the sides up to apex. Found in an encased stupa with square basement in Po Saw's field S.E. of Nagayon. It is the first to show 100 ETBs. There are 10 rows of them, all of one size, under umbrella and sprays of Bodhi trees in the apex: in the top row, 5 Buddhas with a stupa at each end; in the 2nd row 9; in the 3rd row 9, with a stupa at each end; then 7 rows with 11 Buddhas in each: total 100. Each Buddha sits on double lotus mat within beaded nimbus-arch with abacus at shoulders. Background plain (no umbrella or stupa). Below, there is 1 line of Pali in Mon script, in high relief: - śrī tribhuvanādītyapavarādhammarājā dānapatī

This is the royal title of Alaungsithu, grandson and successor of Kyanzittha.

(b) Enlarged photograph of a similar tablet dug up somewhere at Pagān, presented to the Burma Arch. Dept. by Mr Konrad Bekker of the U.S.A. Embassy, Rangoon, He also supplied the photograph.

(c) Pali inscription of 4 lines, finely engraved in Mon script on the Reverse of the lower half of a similar tablet, marked I 156, found in a niche in an encased pagoda S. of Myinkaba village: - ....(saha)ssabuddharūpaṃ ... dhammarājaṇapāṇiḥ tena kāritaṃ vimutta ṣhattratthenā ti i0|| "(This) image of a thousand Buddhas was made by... Dhammarājaṇaṇḍita, with a view to Deliverance".

At the base of the Obverse is a faint inscription identical with those shown in (a) and (b) of this plate. See Neg. 3130 (1928–29); the fragment was found in a mound W. of Sōmingyi pagoda. Another fragment, marked I 213 (1927–28), is said to come from a mound N. of Sōmingyi pagoda. A broken specimen (5½ in. broad) with only the top lost, comes from "a mound with temple and encased ceti S. of Myinkaba village (1931–32).” These fragments are now at Mandalay Arch. Office. Recently Col. Ba Shin has found a fragment with the pavara signature S. of Pakhan-ngè village, Magwé district, 8 miles S. of Salé.

Plate 19. Śri Tribhuvanādityavara. 100 Earth-touching Buddhas. Pagán.

Text, pp. 98, 117–118.

(a) Height $8\frac{3}{4}$ in. Breadth at base $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. Thickness $1\frac{3}{4}$ in.

Rimmed tablet (rim damaged at the top), marked I 320 on the reverse, from Pagán. Squared at the base, arching to a point above, it is beaded at the sides up to the apex, where there is an umbrella between sprays of the Bodhi tree. Below, there are 10 rows of ETBs, all of one size: 5 in the top row, with a stupa at each end; 9 in the 2nd row; 9 in the 3rd row, with a stupa at each end; then 7 rows with 11 Buddhas in each: total 100. Each Buddha sits on double lotus, within beaded nimbus-arch with abacus at the shoulders. Background plain (no umbrella or stupa).

The arrangement is identical with that of Pl. 18, except that there is no writing at the base of the Obverse. Perhaps the son used unstamped tablets prepared for the king his father, and engraved his own inscriptions on the reverse.

(b) The Reverse of (a), marked I 320, with 6 lines of Pali inscription incised in Mon script:

“Śrī Tribhuvanādityavara dhamma[rāja] lord of the points of the compass, made this Buddha-image, for the sake of attaining perfect Buddhahood. (Signed) Śrī Tribhuvanādityavara dhammarājā the donor.”

(c) Similar tablet from Pagán, with rim at base somewhat damaged, otherwise in perfect condition. Now at Rangoon University Library. – Obverse. Phot. Tin Oo.

(d) The Reverse of (c), with 7 lines of Pali inscription in Mon script, almost the same as in (b). Phot. Tin Oo.

Note. Cf. Neg. 2300, 2301 (1922–23) – obverse and reverse of a similar tablet from Myinkaba. Also I.B., Pl. V 568 b, c – obverse and reverse of a similar tablet found in a mound S.W. of Sōmingyi pagoda. 10 or more similar tablets are to be seen in Mandalay Arch. Office. One is said to come from a pagoda near the Myazedi on the north; one from a small pagoda E. of Abēyadana; one (I 218) from a mound W. of Sōmingyi pagoda; one (I 217) from the Myinpyagu; one (I 215) from the westernmost of 3 ruined pagodas S.W. of Myazedi; one (I 329) “from Pagán”; one, marked 1955–56, is “from a pagoda mound on the E. side of the branch road from Pagán to Taungbī”; one is numbered I 172. There are several minor variants or mistakes in the Pali inscriptions on the reverses. Another, from U Pyant’s field E of Seinnyet, is described at ASB 1938, p. 8. A tablet found near Abēyadana is shown at ASI 1906, Pl. LIII, fig. 5 and p. 133. I have not got the volume; but it is probably of the same type.

Cf. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 43 (a, b) and pp. 31–32. He attributes these tablets to Alaungsitthu. Those with inscription on the reverse I attribute to Im-taw-syaṅ (Narathu Kulāgya).
Plate 20. Mon tablets from Mōkti pagoda, Tavoy.

Text, pp. 26–27, 100.

(a) A specimen tablet recently recovered from the site – 6 miles S.S.E. of Tavoy – by Mr David Steinberg of the Asia Foundation. A deep-rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. It shows ETB seated on double lotus, under beaded trefoil arch with abacus resting on rounded pillars. The arch is crowned with umbrella (no śikhara). 3 (or more) stupas in tiers on each side. – Obverse. Phot. D. Steinberg. Cf. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 79 and pp. 59–60.

(b) Reverse of (a), with 7 lines of Old Mon inscription written vertically up the plaque:

\[ \text{kyāk buddha tirley wo’ dik tirla’ poy gna smīi sri|tribhovanādityadhammarāc sumbeñ| y(añ =)khī ma mañ dawāy ma lāt kā|l tirla poy das kyāk (ci ey)| dik or go’ das a(rhan)| twās tirla’} \]

“This Lord Buddha was stamped by me, servant of our lord His Majesty Sri Tribhovanādityadhammarāc, the sumbeñ Yañ Khī (?), who guards Tavoy. When our lord becomes a Buddha, may I be enabled to become a saint, disciple of my lord!” Phot. D. Steinberg. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 80 and pp. 59–60. Cf. ASB 1959, Pl. 31.

Reverses of two other votive tablets found “in a paddy-field near Mokti village, Tavoy, not far from Mokti pagoda”. One shows 6 lines of Old Mon inscription, written vertically up the plaque:

\[ \text{(...)} kyāk buddha tirley|wo’ dik tirla poy gna| smriñ sriñ tribhovanāditya|dhammarāc sarīmbēñ (anan)tajeṣya|bhikrān ma m(añ dawāy ma)| lāt busac t(uy)} \]

“This Lord Buddha has been stamped and dedicated by a servant of our lord His Majesty Srih Tribhovanādityadhammarāc, the sambeñ Anantajeṣyabhikrān, who guards Tavoy.”

(d) Neg. 2435 (1923–24).

Reverses of 2 other tablets from the same site, with 5 lines of Old Mon inscription:

\[ \text{kalan pwo}|a ma lāt kyek kon| brow phun phlañ ma kandam ti’} \]

Ref. ASB 1924, pp. 38–40, para 41. “About 300 terracotta votive tablets, each measuring about 4½ inches in height, of which about 150 are said to be in a good state of preservation.” Duroiselle was sent 8 of these, but only four “were pretty well preserved..... They are all in Talaing..... The writing is cursive.....”

Plate 21. Seals of Queen Ci’peh.

Text, p. 98.

(a) Upper half of a tablet marked I 74 (1929–30), from a mound at Tawya-gyaung, S. of Myinpagan. It shows the Buddha, probably touching Earth, within a beaded trefoil arch, below umbrella and peepal sprays. There are 2 stupas, large and small, on each side of the arch. The tablet, probably oval in shape, has a beaded border at the sides up to the apex. – Obverse.
(b) The Reverse of (a), with 4+ lines of Old Mon: –

\[\text{wo' ey ci pe lāt kyā'[k wo' kin.....s...} \]

"It is I, Ci Pe, who stamped this Buddha (and made ?). . . . . ."

(c) U Mya, \textit{VTB I}, Pl. 33 and p. 25.

(d, e, f) U Mya, \textit{VTB I}, Pl. 34 (a, b, c)

\textit{Ref. ASB} 1959, Pl. 29 (a, b, c).

Old Mon inscription engraved on the Reverse of (c) – 5 lines, continued with 1 line on underrim, and 1 on the right side rim: –

(d) \text{imarh bu |ddhapaṭi [for paṭimaṭa] ci |pe ti nāme|na raño ma |hesiyā}

(e) sa’ha-

(f) tthena akitarh

"This image of the Buddha was made, with her own hands, by Queen Ci Pe, the Chief Queen."

(g) Obverse of another tablet similar to (c) \textit{supra}.

(h) Reverse of (g) – 4 lines of Old Mon, engraved: –

\[\text{wo’|buddharūpām |g(na)’kyāk | ci’ peh} \]

"This is the Buddha-image of Queen Ci’peh."

Height \(3\frac{4}{6}\) in. Breadth at base 2 in.

\textit{Ref. ASB} 1959, Pl. 30.

\textit{Note.} U Mya (\textit{VTB I}, Pls. 32, 31 and pp. 34–35) attributes another tablet to Queen Ci Pe, namely our Pl. 25 a, b: but what he reads \textit{cipe}, we read \textit{sīl}.

\textbf{Plates 22 to 49.} \textbf{SINGLE EARTH-TOUCHING BUDDHA TABLETS.}

\textbf{Plates 22 to 29.} \textbf{OVAL TABLETS WITHOUT ŠIKHARA.}

\textbf{Plate 22.} \textit{Seals of Aniruddha type. Nawur. Vrahmasin.}

\textbf{Text,} p. 100.

(a) Rimless tablet, a pointed oval, marked I 197, from Shwēhsandaw pagoda. Identical with Aniruddha’s tablets from the same site (Pl. 6 c), and bearing the same Nāgari inscription by Aniruddha himself at the base. – Obverse.

Height \(4\frac{4}{6}\) in. Breadth \(2\frac{5}{6}\) in.

(b) Similar rimless oval tablet without markings. Now at Mandalay Arch. Office. – Reverse, with 3 lines of Old Mon: –

\[\text{wo’ trā|p nawur ma|lāt} \]
“I, Lord Nawur, stamped (this image of the Buddha).” – Nawur may have been a courtier or minister of Aniruddha, very likely a Mon.

(c) Reverse of a similar tablet marked “46 A, 46 B” (the number in Burmese). It has 2 lines of Old Mon:

1 gyāk vṝhmasin

“The Buddha of Vṝhmasin (Brahmasena).”

(d) Lower part of another seal of Aniruddha, Obverse, with the same Nāgārī signature as on Pl. 6 c. It is marked I 47, and comes from “a small four-faced temple S.W. of Sōmin-gyi pagoda.”

(e) U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 56 and p. 46.

Ref. ASI 1930–34, Part I, p. 188; Part II, Pl. CVI b.

Height 5¼ in. Breadth 4¾ in.

Rimmed and pointed oval (‘fig-leaf’) tablet, marked I 121, from Kyazin temple S. of Myinkaba (1931–32). Found in the relic-chamber together with 5-figure tablets (Pl. 8 b) bearing the signature of Aniruddha. Here, instead of the usual 2 stupas, large and medium, on each side of the Buddha, there are 4 – one small one being added below each of the other two. “Small stupas of an archaic type may be noticed,” says U Mya, “and below the lotus seat is the Buddhist formula ye dharmā hetuprabhavi etc., in Nāgārī character of the 11th–12th cent. A.D. From the style of the principal figure and the stupas flanking it, and also from the type of letters in the Nāgārī legend, it may be assigned to Anoratha’s period. i.e. 1044–1077 A.D.”

(f) Detail of the 3 lines of Nāgārī inscription in high relief under (e). Mon Bo Kay reads: –

...mā hetu prabhāvā hetum teṣāṃ tathāgato hyavadat = teṣā(m) ca yo | nirodho evaṁ-vādī mahā(sa)maṇa(h)

Text, pp. 17, 98, 99, 100.

(a) Oval terracotta mould for making single ETB tablets, with 2 stupas, large and medium, on each side of the pellet-pillars. Beaded border. Mould broken below the Buddha’s lotus seat. Marked ‘51’ in Burmese.

Ref. ASI 1927, p. 163. L.A.P.N.B. p. 29 (No. 2728).

Height 4¾ in. Breadth 3¾ in. Thickness 1¼ in.

Pointed oval tablet with stepped rim, found in relic-chamber of Shwēhsandaw pagoda, where Aniruddha’s seal, Pl. 6 c, was found. The Obverse is similar to it, and to mould (a) above. Beaded border. Pellet-pillars, 2 stupas on each side. Perhaps 3 faint lines of Nāgārī at the base. – Obverse.
The Reverse, marked "Cha -13, I II", with 2 lines of Old Mon:

1 kyāk trāp mān|yas ma lāt ¶

"(This) Buddha was stamped by Lord Prince Yas."

Note the Burmese word mān 'Prince', and the Pali word yasa 'Fame', in this Mon sentence.

Fig-leaf' oval tablet with stepped rim and beaded border. Marked '43' in Burmese. Provenance unknown. Shows ETB seated on double lotus, between pellet-pillars and abacus hung with beading, below beaded trefoil arch and umbrella. He has a beaded shoulder-nimbus. Peepal leaves at sides of arch, and 1 stupa on each side below. The 2 lines of Mon writing below the lotus are clearer seen on the broken tablet (e):

1 trāp mān|yas ma lāt ¶

"Stamped by Lord Prince Yas."

"Prince Yassa the sambeñ, the king's favourite", or Śrī Vallabh = Yasa, occur again on Pl. 38 a, b (infra). The sambeñ Yasa probably recurs also at Pl. 64 b, d. See also Pl. 71 (a).

Height 5½ in. Breadth 4½ in.

Rimmed oval ‘fig-leaf’ tablet with beaded border. No markings. Identical, so far as it goes, with one of the tablets of Queen Ci Pe (Pl. 21 a, from Tawya-gyaung), but there the lower half is lost. Similar also to Aniruddha’s Shwēhsandaw seal (Pl. 6 c), but that has 2 quarter-lines and 2 full lines of Nāgarī at the base, including Aniruddha’s name, while this has 2 quarter-lines and 3 full lines, including only the Buddhist ‘Creed’ – ye dhammā hetuprabhava etc.

(b) Detail of the Nāgarī inscription in (a). The 2 broken lines at the sides of the throne are barely visible.

(c) Height 3½ in. Breadth 2½ in.

Small rimless oval tablet, similar to (a), including the 3 full lines of Nāgarī at the base, but with different arrangement of streamers and peepal leaves at the top, and a small stupa above each abacus.

A rimmed variety, marked I 48 (30–31), found at “a small four-faced shrine S.W. of Sōmingyi pagoda”, measures about 4 in. high by 3½ in. broad.

(d) Lower part of a similar rimless oval tablet, marked I 34, found near Tawya-gyaung, S. of Myin-pagán. This, too, has 3 full lines of Nāgarī at the base, as well as 2 quarter-lines above. It is clearly illustrated on p. 116 of Mon Bo Kay’s article, which shows that, apart from the Nāgarī inscription, the details of the rest of the tablet agree exactly with Aniruddha’s Shwēhsandaw seal (Pl. 6 c).
Plate 25. Seals of Aniruddha type. With Mon and Pali writings. Text, p. 100.

(a) Height $4\frac{1}{2}$ in. Breadth 3 in.
   Rimless oval tablet, with markings. Arrangement of streamers and peepal leaves similar to Pl. 24 c. Thick round columns support the arch. Besides the usual 2 stupas, large and medium on each side, there is 1 small stupa above each abacus, and 2 small ones in tiers below the large one. 3 lines of faint Nāgārī 'Credo' below the lotus-seat.

(b) The Reverse of (a), with 8 lines of Old Mon incised:

   "The precept (against) Adultery (?) – may I be fully aware of it!
   The precept (against) Stealing – may I be fully aware of it!
   The precept (against) Killing – may I be fully aware of it!"

(c) A rimless tablet of same type, broken above the neck of the image. – Obverse.

(d) The Reverse of (c), marked "11" in Burmese. It shows the last 3 lines of an Old Mon inscription:

   ....... | c pi wel ey | mik das kye | h
   "...three... indeed. I desire to become a Buddha."
   Two curious spellings, mik is a modernistic variety for the usual Old Mon mic = to desire. Kyeh must be a mistake for kyeh.

(e) Lower half (breadth $3\frac{1}{2}$ in.) of a rimless oval tablet, marked "I 124 (1931–32). From Maung Bala’s palmrya plantation E. of Shin Ōttama’s pagoda, Myinkaba." Shows the tall torso and arms of ETB (everything above the neck lost). He sits on double lotus ledger, between pellet-pillars and lines of hanging beads. A large stupa on each side, with 1 small stupa on the outer side of it, and 2 in a row below. 3 lines of faint Nāgārī at the base – Obverse.

(f) The Reverse of (e) with 1 line (incomplete ?) of Pali incised:

   metteyya samāga...... “the assembly of Maitreya”......

Plate 26. Seals of Aniruddha type. With Mon reverses. Śrī Bisannarāc.

Text, p. 101.

(a) Specimen Obverse. Similar to Pl. 24 a. Pointed oval tablet with stepped rim and beaded border. The ETB sits on double lotus ledger within trefoil arch resting on pellet-pillars. Umbrella and peepal sprays above. 2 stupas, large and small, on each side. 3 full lines of Nāgārī ‘creed’ in high relief below the lotus seat, and 2 upper lines divided by it.
   Tablets of this series were mostly found at Sha-hōk pagoda, W. of Sōmin-gyi pagoda, S. of Myinpagán. They are generally marked I 167; but also I 127, 128, 129, 130, 131. Owing to loss of old registers during the War, it is still difficult to identify these sites.
   Ref. I.B., Pl. V 606, shows about 20 specimen plaques of this series.
   Height 5 in. Breadth $3\frac{1}{2}$ in. Thickness $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

(b) Reverse, with 3 lines of Old Mon:

wo’ kyāk trā p srih bisannarāc ma laṭ na tey kum rup 50 mi tāney “This is the Buddha stamped by the lord Śrīh Bisannarāc with his own hand – 50 images a day.”

(c) Reverse with 5 lines of Old Mon: – wo’ wipā k sambeni srih bi sannarāc laṭ kye k wo’ or da ñ kyek “As the result of the sambeni Śrī Bisannarāc stamping (this) Buddha, may he become a Buddha!”

For a similar plaque, cf. ASB 1948–52, P1. 11 and p. 7. There is another with similar inscription in Rangoon University Library.

(d) Reverse with 5 lines of Old Mon: – wo’ wipā k sumbeñ srih bisannarāc c laṭ kyek jin p(i) n sarbba’sattā ku’ de watā guluñ “As the result of the sumbeñ Śrī Bisannarāc stamping (this) Buddha, he offers the merit to all living beings, including the Devatās.”

Neg. 3569 (1932–33).

(e) Reverse with 5 lines of Old Mon: –

U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 28 and p. 23.

(c) Another tablet of this series, in 3 fragments, the 4th fragment lost from the right side. Found at Kyaik Dé-ap (Bo-ta-htauang) pagoda, Rangoon. – Obverse, as at Pl. 26 a.
Height 5 in. Breadth 4 in. Thickness $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

(d) Reverse of (c), with 4 lines of Old Mon: –
|| wo’ wipāk |su(m)beṇ bisannarāc |... kyāk wo |... go’ das kyā(k).
“As the result of the suimmbein Bisannarāc (stamping) this Buddha, may he be enabled to become a Buddha.”

(e) Text, p. 102.
Height 4$\frac{3}{4}$ in. Estimated breadth when complete: about 3 in. Thickness (with rim): 1 in.

(f) Reverse of the fragment on the right in (e), with 2+ lines of Old Mon: –
....suimbeṇ a.... [. . .(n) ma(?) lā(t) . . .
“Stamped by the suimbeṇ A . . .(n).” – The name might possibly be Asakrheī. See Pl. 29.

Text, p. 101.

(a) Pointed oval (‘fig leaf’) tablet with thin rims, broken in two across the neck of the image, most of the right side lost. No markings. The ETB has strong square head, long arms and torso. He sits between pellet-pillars under beaded trefoil arch with umbrella-finial. Beaded border. Sprays of peepal at the top. Below, on either side, 3 stupas, large, medium and small. The small one is above the abacus, between the two others. Under the large stupa there may have been a lotus 'tree', now lost. 3 lines of Nāgarī in high relief at the base.

Height 5\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. – Obverse.

(b) Detail of the 3 incomplete Nāgarī lines of Buddhist 'Creed' below the lotus seat in (a).

(c) Reverse of (a) with 5 lines of Old Mon incised, the last 4 incomplete:

\text{kyāk ma i- . . . . . . (phu)moh | . . . (mbe)ñ asak rhe- | . . . . . . mic nibān | . . . . . . lāt ||}
\]

"(This) Buddha which . . . . , was stamped by the summbeñ (?) Asak-rhe(ñ), (who) desires Nirvāṇa."

(d) Central segment cut out from a tablet similar to the above, showing only the double lotus, the ETB seated on it, and the beaded trefoil arch and pellet-pillars enclosing him. No markings. – Obverse.

(e) The Reverse of (d), with 5 truncated lines of Old Mon incised (compare (c) supra)

\ldots \text{kyā . . . . . . . mo}h \text{ ma . . . . . . (go)h sumbe . . . . . . . . rheñ ma mi . . . . . . ma' lāt . . . .}
\]

Note that though this is a Mon inscription, the donor has a Burmese name or title, Asak rheñ, 'Long Life'.

Plates 30 to 33. OVAL TABLETS WITH ŚIKHARA.

Text, pp. 102, 131.

Height 4\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Breadth at centre 3\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Thickness \(\frac{1}{2}\) in.

Both tablets (probably from the same mould) are rimmed and pointed oval ('fig leaf') in shape, with beaded borders. In the centre of each is ETB seated on double lotus, between turned colonnettes supporting a trefoil arch with elaborate bead-edged and 'tongued' śikhara, crowned with stupa-finial. 2 peepal-sprays branch out behind. Apart from 2 damaged lines of Nāgarī in high relief at the base, all the rest of the plaque is filled with rows of tall archaic stupas: 11 rows of them, counting from the bottom 12, 16, 8, 10, 12, 11, 11, 11, 9, 4, and 4: total 108, corresponding doubtless to the 108 auspicious signs shewn on the Buddha-footprint.

On the left side rim of each there is 1 line of Old Man, the same on each, sufficient to prove that the tablets either came from Burma, or were left at Bodhgaya by a Burma monk on pilgrimage there c. 1100 A.D. Both read: –

\text{wo' kyāk mhādew}
\]

"This is the Buddha of Mahādeva."

Prints supplied by the Government of India, Department of Archaeology.

(c, d) 2 rimmed tablets, pointed oval ('fig leaf') within, set in a squared frame up to the shoulders, and roughly pointed at the top. Beaded border all around the oval, enclosing an ETB with large head and short body (not the Aniruddha type). He sits on a beaded and recessed pedestal between turned columns, supporting trefoil abacus-arch, elaborate bead-edged and ‘tongued’ šikhara, with stupa-finial, peepal sprays and streamers. 3 lines of Nāgārī ‘Creed’ in high relief below the pedestal-ledge. The rest of the plaque is filled with 6 rows of small elongated stupas, counting from the bottom 4, 10, 8, 10, 10 (12), total 52 (54). If the latter number is right, the two plaques combined would yield 108 – corresponding to the 108 Auspicious Signs. But Col. Ba Shin counts only 52.

Both tablets, now at Mandalay Arch. Office, are marked I 145. They were found in Po Saw’s field S.E. of Nagayon.
Cf. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 111 and p. 73.
Height 3½ in. Breadth at base 2½ in. Breadth at shoulders 2½ in.

Text, pp. 76, 102.
Neg. 2680 (1925–26). U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 54 and p. 46.
(a) Pointed oval rimmed tablet “found in a field belonging to Maung Chit Sa of Taungbi village.”
‘Chitsagon’ (‘Chit Sa’s mound’) is not near Taungbi, but S. of Pagán-hmyaw temple, E. of Nanda. The tablet, within its beaded border, shows ETB seated on double lotus, between turned and beaded pillars supporting a bead-edged and ‘tongued’ šikhara with stupa-finial and streamers.
Sprays of peepal are visible behind. 6 stupas on either side: 2 small stupas between the usual large and medium ones, and 1 small stupa outside the large one, and 1 below it. 3 lines of tiny Nāgārī in high relief below the lotus throne. – Obverse.
Height about 6½ in. Breadth about 4½ in. Once perfect, when photographed on discovery in 1925– 26, the tablet has now lost its right side. It is at Mandalay Arch. Office, marked I 180, “Pagán, from Chitsagon 1925–26.”
(b) Detail of 3-line Nāgārī writing at base (right side slightly damaged). The right side is now incomplete.
(c) Reverse of the tablet, as discovered in 1925–26, with 8 lines of Archaic Burmese – one of the oldest specimens of written Burmese extant.

men. If born as a spirit, (may I be) the object of worship by spirits. So often as I am born in Samsara, may I never be born to a mean existence (?)”
(d) Obverse as it now is, with right side lost.
(e) The Reverse (enlarged), as photographed in 1960 at Mandalay, with the left side lost.

Plate 32. Tablets from Chitsagon, Shwehsandaw, etc.
(a) 3 other complete rimmed oval tablets – 2 of them marked “cha (1925) from Maung Chit Sa Gôn, E. of the Ananda” – are now at Mandalay Arch. Office: height 6½ in., breadth 4½ in. The third, marked "Ja I 10", is shown as (a) on this plate. Though its rims are thicker, it appears to come from the same mould as (a) of the preceding plate.

(b) Lower half of similar rimless tablet, with 3 lines of Nāgarī 'creed'.

(c) A rimless pointed-oval tablet, damaged at the bottom, marked I 333, from Pagán. The Nāgarī inscription, if any, is lost. Roughly resembles Pl. 31 a; but here the sikhara-arch rests on pellet-pillars; the branching of the peepal sprays is not the same; and the 6 stupas on either side are somewhat differently placed. Height about 6*\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Breadth 4*\(\frac{3}{4}\) in.

Cf. U Mya, VTB II, Pls. 89, 90 and pp. 37–38, "from Hmawza" (i.e. Śrī Kṣetra); but here there are only 5 stupas: 1 large, 1 medium above, and 2 small ones between them, and 1 small one below the large one.

(d) A similar, but smaller, rimless oval tablet, marked "I 125, from Maung Bala’s field E. of Shin Ōtama pagoda, Myinkaba village." Has peepal sprays and pellet-pillars as in (c) above; also 2 or 3 lines of Nāgarī in high relief at the base, badly worn.

Height 4*\(\frac{3}{4}\) in. Breadth 3*\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

(e) Small 'fig-leaf' oval tablet, marked I 186, from Pagan Shw6hsandaw. Similar to the Chitsagon oval tablet (Pl. 31 a), but smaller; and it has only 4 stupas at each side, omitting the 2 small stupas between the large and medium ones. The sikhara, too, has not the usual pointed 'tongue' up the centre, but is crossed with horizontal recessions. 3 faint lines of Nāgarī at the base.

Height 4*\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Breadth 3*\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

Plate 33. Tablets from Pegu, Bodhgayā (?), and Taungdwingyi.

(a) Large rimless 'fig leaf' tablet (No. 100) in W. gandhakuti museum on platform of Shwémawdaw pagoda, Pegu. ETB sits between turned pillars, with a peepal leaf visible above abacus on each side. The sikhara is 'tongued' and has an āmalaka/stupa-finial. The peepal tree branches upwards. 2 small stupas in a row below each of the large side-stupas; and 2 more in tiers on the outer side of them. 3 lines of Nagari 'creed' in high relief below the damaged double lotus.

Phot. San Win.

Height 5*\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Max. breadth 4 in.

(b) "Indian Museum, Calcutta. Neg. No. 156/59. Locality: Burma. Terracotta votive plaques RN 3, RN 2" (Query PN 3, PN 2, from Pagán ?).

Both tablets are oval or fig leaf in shape, one rimmed, one rimless. Both are badly worn. They appear to be the same in design as (a) above, with 2 small stupas below, another 2 outside, the large stupa on either side, and 3 lines of Nāgarī below the lotus.

Compare R. C. Temple, Indian Antiquary, Vol. XXII, 1893, Pl. XV, fig. 2, "Votive Tablet from Buddha Gayā found in Pegu", and p. 360; Taw Sein Ko, ibid., Vol. XXI, p. 385. The tablet is said to be now in the British Museum. "In the Phayre Museum [Rangoon] there are 3 more such tablets: one from Pegu and two from Pagán... In Forchhammer's Report on the Kyaukku
Plate 34

Temple at Pagan, similar tablets are shown on Pls. VII and VIII, Nos. 15, 16 and 17, but not described."

(c) Rimmed oval tablet with thick squared base and high pointed top. Marked XII, which shows that it was found at Taungdwingyi. Beaded border all around. ETB sits between strong turned pillars supporting a trefoil arch, behind which one can just see 3 horizontal roofs receding to a broad, bead-edged and ‘tongued’ sikhara with amalaka finial. Peepal sprays branch upwards on either side. 6 stupas on either side: the usual large and medium, with 1 minute stupa below each, and 1 minute one on the outer side of each: total 12.

Height 6½ in. Breadth at base 4½ in. Thickness of rim 1¼ in.

(d) Detail of Nāgāri inscription with Buddhist ‘creed’ at the base of (c). The 3 lines are divided up the centre by a stalk, which opens to form the large double lotus on which the Buddha sits.

Plates 34, 35. TABLETS WITH SQUARED BASE AND NO SIKHARA.

Plate 34. Sīr Bāña (Pyu inscription).

Text, pp. 99–100.

(a) Tablet marked ‘I 153, from a mound E. of the Mingalazedi, N. of Myinkaba.’ Oblong rimmed tablet with top corners of rim chamfered and arching to a point. Beading on both sides up to the peak, but not at the base.

ETB sits on double lotus, between turned pillars supporting a voluted abacus and beaded trefoil arch, crowned with umbrella-finial and streamers. Below these, sprays with peepal leaves at the sides. Below these, on either side are 4 medium-sized stupas in tiers, with 1 small stupa on the inner side of the topmost one. 2 lines of Nāgāri ‘creed’ in high relief at the base.

Height 5¼ in. Breadth 3½ in.

(b) Similar oblong tablet with rims chamfered at the top, the rim damaged at bottom left corner. Marked I 229 and (in Burmese) 54. From Pagan.

(c) Neg. 2732 (1926–27). U Mya, VTB I, Pls. 29, 30, and pp. 23–24.

A similar tablet, but with rims thick and squared at the base, and arching and thinning to a point at the top. No chamfer. Marked 365. Within the rims, identical with (a) and (b), but not so well preserved. The 2 Nāgāri lines are said by Duroiselle to be the Buddhist ‘creed’ in mixed Pali and Sanskrit. – Found in relic-chamber of Shwehsandaw pagoda.

(d) The Reverse of (c), with 6 clear lines of Pyu incised in Pyu script. It begins:

1 0 1 yā bā: bhagava

“This (image of) the Blessed One.”

The donor (?) Sīr Bāña (or Bānano), is mentioned in line 3. He prays, it seems, that he may reach omniscience (?) in the presence of Metriya, when the latter becomes a Buddha.

Neg. 2733 (1926–27).
This precious tablet, now at Mandalay Arch. Office, is now in a shattered state. (e), the Obverse, and (b), the Reverse, are all that remained of it in 1960.

Plate 35. Hsameikshé, etc. Pin, the Judge.

Text, p. 102.

(a) Marked in Burmese 81/56. Deep-rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. Rather like the tablets of the previous plate, but badly worn. Branching of the peepal boughs is different. Umbrella above the arch. There are only 4 stupas in tiers on either side. No Nāgarī inscription under the lotus throne.

(b) Marked in Burmese 37 (30–31). Small narrow rimless tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. Beading at the sides up to the peak. Similar to the deeply rimmed tablet of Queen Ci’peh (Pl. 21 c). Shows the Buddha with abacus-halo seated on high indented and ribbed throne. No arch or śikhara. One tall stupa on either side of the throne. Peepal leaves above.

Height 2\(\frac{3}{4}\) in. Breadth at base 1\(\frac{1}{2}\) in.

(c) Rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. Found in a field at Nyaungbingan village, \(\frac{3}{4}\) mile W. of Hsameikshé, near Thazi, Meiktila district. Shows a large-headed Buddha seated on double lotus between turned pillars, under beaded trefoil arch crowned with umbrella and thick peepal sprays. Beaded border. 4 small stupas in tiers on either side. 2 lines of Nāgarī 'creed' in high relief below the lotus throne. – Obverse.

Height 5 in. Breadth at base 3\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Thickness 1\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

(d) Detail of the 2 lines of Nāgarī 'creed' at base of (c). Ye dhammā etc.

(e) The Reverse of (c), with 4 lines of Old Mon inscription incised: –

\[\text{kyak rtyāh su ūmbeñ pin na āni | s kyak wo' mi \mid c das kyak} \]

“This is the Buddha of Pin, the Law-sumbeñ. As the good result of (making) this Buddha, I desire to become a Buddha!” – Note the spelling kyak instead of the usual kyāk or kyek. Note also the spelling rtyāh (from Sanskrit r̥ta) – on its way into Old Burmese tryā, ‘the moral Law’.

Cf. Neg. 2273 (1921–22).

(f) One of several tablets marked “XVI 3, 4 specimens from Hsameikshé, near Thazi, Meiktila district”. Rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. Beading at the sides up to the peak. Not the same as (c) supra. This has a stupa, not an umbrella, as finial above the trefoil arch. The supporting pillars are thinner and have a pointed abacus at the top. The peepal leaves are few and large. There are only 3 stupas in tiers on either side. No inscription at the base.

Height 5 in. Breadth at base 3\(\frac{1}{2}\) in.

(g) The only old writings on the (f) tablets are the letters khu, gam and ſa (mason’s marks ?) on the underrim of 3 of them. The one illustrated has the letter ſa.

(a) Rimmed tablet, marked in Burmese “36”, squared at base and arching to a point above. Rim lost at bottom right corner. Beaded border on both sides up to the peak. Resembles other tablets marked I 185 from Shwéhsandaw, and I 252 from Myinpyagu.

The Buddha has double ‘flame’ usṇīṣa and bead-halo. The triple beaded sikhara-arch has a stupa-finial. On either side peepal sprays and leaves fill the upper half of the plaque. Below these, on either side of the turned and beaded pillars, there are 2 stupas, large and medium, in tiers, both with streamers. Floral fountain below the large stupas. Below the double lotus there are 2 lines of Pali in Mon script, in high relief.

Height 5\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Breadth at base 3\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Thickness 1\(\frac{1}{2}\) in.

(b) Detail of the lower part of (a), including the 2 lines of Pali in Mon script: – eso bhagavā vimuttaṭṭhāya (mayā kato ||) . . . . .

“This Blessed One was made by me with the object of Deliverance.....” U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 97 and pp. 64–65.

Height 6\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Breadth at base 4\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Thickness 1\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Text, p. 102.

Rimmed tablet squared below, arching above. Beaded border at sides up to peak. The Buddha sits on a low recessed and indented throne, between turned pillars supporting a trefoil arch with hamsas (?) perched on the abacus. Behind the arch rises an elaborate triple-tiered and ‘tongued’ sikhara, with beaded corners. Stupa-finial with streamers. 2 sprays of peepal near the top. 5 stupas on either side, large, medium, small and 2 minute – these last being under the base of the large one. 2 lines of tiny Nāgarī characters in high relief below the throne.

3 lines of Old Mon: –

wo’ kyā trā...|...sri...sri|nibān

“This is the Buddha” [kyā for kyāk] “of Lord [? trāp].sri......Nirvāṇa.”

(e) Height 4\(\frac{3}{4}\) in. Breadth at base 3\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

Marked I 358, from Pagan. Rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. The Buddha sits on double lotus, with indented and chevron-beaded throne below, between turned and beaded columns, under trefoil arch with ‘tongued’ sikhara and stupa-finial. Beaded border at sides up to peak. Lotus ‘trees’, rising from the throne, support 2 medium stupas on either side. 2 lines of Nāgarī in high relief below the throne, clear except where deleted on the left side.

(f) Lower fragment of a similar rimless tablet marked ja in Burmese, and I... , that is, from Pagan. Shows the 2 lines of Nāgarī ‘creed’ clearly, and details of the throne and lotus trees. For copy of the Nāgarī inscription, see Mon Bo Kay, Yin-kyé-hmu magazine, Vol. III, Part 9 (Feb. 1961), top of p. 120.
Plate 37. Heavily ornate type. Pegu Abhirūḍha etc.

Text, p. 99.

(a) Neg. 7678 (1957–58).

Rimmed tablet in W. gandhakuti museum on platform of Pegu, Shwemawdaw pagoda (No. 101). ETB sits on ‘leather’ mat, double lotus and low recessed and indented throne, guarded by lions at the corners. Massive pillars support a heavily ornate sikhara-arch above him. On either side near the top, a small stupa leans in towards the sikhara.

(b) The Reverse of (a), with 5 lines of Pali incised in bold Old Mon script: –

śī ṭaṁ buddharūpaṁ a bhī ṭiṁ nāma bhi ṭiṁ kkhunā saṁsāramuccaṁ naṁ saṁthāya sahaṁ theṁ naṁ kāṁritanti

“This image of the Buddha is being made by the monk named Abhirūḍha with his own hand, for the sake of release from Samsāra”.

The plaque on the left is a deep-rimmed tablet with squared base, showing ETB seated within a heavily ornate sikhara – archway, similar to that in (a). Lions stand on guard at the lower corners. The plaque on the right is an oval tablet without sikhara, showing ETB seated on double lotus below beaded trefoil arch resting on pellet pillars. Umbrella and peepal sprays above. 2 stupas, large and small, on either side. Beaded border. Rims lost. Probably several lines of Nāgarī writing at the base.

(d) Top part of a rimmed tablet found in 1928–29 S.W. of Htilominlo temple, and marked I 234 on the reverse. The Obverse shows a heavily ornate sikhara-arch, similar to that in (a).

The Reverse shows 2 incomplete lines of Pali inscription in Mon script: –

10 assattha... i.. [vā]sanāma...

Text, pp. 98, 99.

(a, b) Neg. 4732 to 4735 (1948–49). Cf. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 14 (a, b) and pp. 17–19.

Ref. ASB 1948–52, 1st plate, fig. on left, and p. 6. ASB 1959, Pl. 32.

Height 7 in. Breadth at base 4¾ in.

Two-plane tablet found at Pwazaw, S. of Pagán. It shows ETB, as in Pl. 37 a and c, seated under a heavily ornate sikhara-arch. Lions with tails rampant stand on guard at the bottom corners of the throne, with (possibly) an elephant-head supporting the centre. Below the throne, on the sunken plane within the beaded border that runs all around it, are 2 lines of fine square Nāgarī writing in high relief. Outside the beading, on the middle plane, runs a long line of Pali inscription in Mon script, also in high relief, originally stamped in verso, so that the base reads from right to left, then up the left side, and ends in the middle of the right side. – Two aspects are shown.
The 2 lines of Sanskrit/Nāgārī, as read by Mon Bo Kay, are:–

ye dhama hetu prabhava hetu(m) teṣā(m) tathāgato hyavadat = teṣāṁ ca |yo nirodhā
evamvādi mahāśramaṇā(h) dānapati śrī vallabh = yasa nāma |

“.....The name of the donor is Śrī Vallabh = Yasa.”

The line of Pali |Mon reads: –

i imaṁ buddhabimbam saṁbeṇ = maṁ = yassa nāma|rājavallabhena dānapatinā sabbāṅtataṅnavaram (paṭhantena) |kataṁ sadevako loko jānātū ti ||

“This image of the Buddha has been made by the donor, the king’s favourite, the saṁbeṇ named Prince Yassa, in his longing for excellent Omniscience. May the world, together with the gods, take note!”

For Prince Yassa, compare Pl. 23 c, d, e. The saṁbeṇ Yasa probably recurs also at Pl. 64 b, d.

(e) A reprint from the verso of the negative (Arch. Dept. Neg. 4735 of 1948–49). This is easier reading; but it makes it appear that the Buddha is touching Earth with his left hand. This is not the case: see (a, b).

(d) A similar heavily ornate tablet, but smaller, and without the Pali writing on the obverse, or the beaded border. Found in U Pyant’s field S.E. of Nagayôn temple, E. of the Seinnyet. Neg. 4017, 4018, 4019 (1937–38).

Height 5½ in. Breadth at base 3½ in. Thickness 1 in.

Ref. ASB 1938, p. 8. This type of tablet was already found by U Mya in 1931–32 in a temple “a few hundred yards S.E. of the Nagayôn”: see ASI 1930–34, Part II, Pl. CVII (c), and Part I, p. 190: – “Below the throne is a much-defaced Nāgārī legend in two lines. On the reverse face of some of them, there are hand-written inscriptions in Pali..... The text is in two varieties, but the letters are of the same type... (Pl. CVII d, e).”

(e, f) The 2 varieties of Reverse mentioned above – 5 and 3 lines of Pali in Mon script – (e) reads as follows:–

i saṅgrādīvā|cariyena ka |to patimā|uttamo ji |no ||

“(This) image of the highest Conqueror is made by the Teacher, Saṅgrāda. ”For a variant spelling of the name, Saṅgradeva, see ASB 1938, Pl. II (c, d) and p. 8. (f), 3 lines of Pali in Mon script, reads:–

i sabbāntaṇā|nassa paccayo |hotū ti ||

“May it serve to help towards Omniscience!”

“From the N. mound, N. of Tawyagyaung, S. of Myinkaba.”

Cf. ASI 1906, Pl. LIII, figs. 1 and 7, and p. 132 (from Kannibauk pagoda, Kyinlo village, 8 miles S.E. of Nyaung-u); 4 in. × 3½ in.

Note. There are two varieties, large and small, of this ‘heavily ornate’ type of tablet. The larger variety (about 6½ in. to 7 in. by 4½ in.) includes the one from Pegu (Pl. 37 a); also perhaps the one at Calcutta (Pl. 37 c), of which I have not the measurements, but which seems similar to the Pegu tablet; also probably the I 234 fragment from Pagán, S.W. of Htilominlo (Pl. 37 d). Also the Pwazaw specimen (Pl. 38 a) and a similar Pagán tablet marked I 4. These Pagán tablets differ from the Pegu/Calcutta tablets by having high-relief inscriptions, both in Nāgārī and Mon scripts, on their obverse.

The smaller variety (about 5 in. × 3½ in. to 4 in.) includes the specimen from U Pyant’s field near the Seinnyet (Pl. 38 d); others, marked I 56 and I 69, found in 1929–30 in mounds N. of Tawya-gaung; also one marked “Kho 37–38”; and others marked “I 140 (1931–32) from Maung To’s field S.E. of the Nagayon”; also one from “brick mound No. 1 E. of the Nagayon” (Neg. 3459 of 1931–32). These resemble the larger Pegu type in having no inscription on the obverse, but sometimes have Pali inscriptions on the reverse.

(a) Found in 1926 “E. of the Mingalazedi.” Tablet with thick coarse rims squared up to the shoulders; then arching to an apex. The carved plaque itself is not coarse, but exactly like the thin rimless type which we may call the ‘Chitsagon thin squared type’ (infra, Pl. 41). Beaded borders at the sides up to the apex.

E.T.B., with ārāma, pointed usṇiṣa, robe and shoulder-flap indicated, sits on double lotus in a trefoil abacus-archway, beaded and laddered, resting on turned pillars, and supporting a beaded and foliated śikhara, with stupa-finial and streamers. Lotus ‘trees’ sprout at the bottom corners below 2 tiers of stupas, large and small, at either side. Above these, are sprays of peepal leaves and small stupas leaning towards the śikhara. Below the throne is a faint line of Mon script. Height 5½ in. Breadth at base 4 in.

(b, c) 2 similar tablets with thick coarse rims, marked “I 199 A, from ruined shrine E. of the Mingalazedi” – presumably the same site as that where (a) was found. These have writings in Old Mon on the face of their bottom rims.

(b), 2 lines, appears to read – see (d) for detail –

1 0 1 kyék wo’ lạ́n yan len ma kindan ey mi(c ār) nibbān
“This Buddha was made by Lān [query Old Burm. = husband?] Yañ Len. I want to go (?) to Nirvāṇa”.

(c) 2 lines, appears to read – see (e) for detail –

II wo’ kyāk pay rhma’ o [(r) pay rhmak ku’ . . . . .
“This is the Buddha of Pay [= ‘Beloved’] Rhma’. May Pay Rhmak and . . . . . .”

(f) Top half of a thick rimless tablet of the same type, without markings. – Obverse.

(g) Reverse of (f), with 3 fragmentary lines of Old Mon:

II jin pun mā tā piṭā k(ŷā k wo’)... .
“I offer the merit (for making) this Buddha (?) to my mother and father.”

Plate 40. Chitsagōn squared types. Rāthaṇā. Ānanda.

Text, p. 99.

(a) Thick rimless tablet found at Chitsagōn (mound in Maung Chit Sa’s field), E. of the Nanda. Marked I 170, A 1, on the reverse. Obverse exactly like the rimmed type of the preceding plate. Height 4½ in. Breadth at base 2½ in. Thickness ¾ in.
Plate 41

(b) The Reverse of (a), with 3 lines of Pali incised:

\[ Raṭṭhapā [Raṭṭhapāla] \] (made) this image of the Buddha.

(c) 2 Reverses of similar tablets. The one on the left reads:

\[ \text{ananda} \text{carayena māpitāṃ idaṃ buddha \ rupaṃ} \]

The one on the right, marked I 245, found in Aung Hla's field S.W. of Htilominlo, reads:

\[ \text{ananda} \text{cara} \text{ma} \text{pita(m) idaṁ bu \ ddharupam} \]

"This image of the Buddha was created by the Teacher (ācariya) Ānanda."

(d) 2 other Reverses of similar tablets, with much the same 4 lines of Pali incised. The tablet marked "50" in Burmese, with its lower part lost, reads:

\[ \text{ananda} \text{cara} \text{ma} \text{pita(m) idaṁ bu \ ddharupam} \]

The other tablet, marked I54 (?) in Burmese, and broken across the middle, reads:

\[ \text{ananda} \text{cara} \text{ma} \text{pita(m) idaṁ bu \ ddharupam} \]

(e) Thin rimless tablet, squared at the base, arching to a point above, with Obverse exactly like the thick and rimmed varieties in this and the preceding plates. Found in 1926 at Chitsagōn, E. of the Nanda, S. of Pagan-hmyaw temple. — Obverse.

Height 4\frac{1}{2} in. Breadth at base 2\frac{1}{2} in.

(f) Detail of lower part of one such tablet, showing the faint line of writing in Mon script at the base:

\[ \text{kyā maṃ goka so (ma lān)} \]

Reading doubtful. Meaning obscure.

Plates 41 to 48. CHITSAGŌN MAIN SERIES (THIN RIMLESS).

REVERSES WITH ARCHAIC BURMESE.

Plate 41.

Text, pp. 76, 102-104.

(a) 3 specimen Obverses of the main series of tablets from Chitsagōn, mound in Maung Chit Sa’s field, E. of the Nanda, S. of Pagán-hmyaw temple. This is the thin rimless variety shewn on Pl. 40 e; but the beaded border at the sides, which is scarcely visible on that plate, is evident on this.

Height 4\frac{1}{2} in. Breadth at squared base 2\frac{1}{2} in. Thickness \frac{1}{4} in.

Note. For the first discovery, in 1925-26, of an oval tablet in this mound, with inscription in archaic Burmese, see Pl. 31 supra. For the later discovery, in 1926-27, of "a hoard of terracotta votive tablets nearly a thousand in number", see Duroiselle, ASI 1927, pp. 167-8. These appear to have been all tablets with squared base, as shewn in this and the following plates. "What renders these tablets specially valuable" says Duroiselle, "is the wealth of archaic words in Burmese contained in the short dedicatory inscriptions written on the reverse face of a great many of them. . . . various fruits, flowers and herbs. . . . Other tablets contain inscriptions in Old Burmese consisting of six, seven, or eight short lines, and some of one line only . . . ." Small and rather poor (wartime) illustrations of 39 of these are given at I.B., Pls. V 604, 605 and part of 606 (see Index of Plates); and a good number are discussed at JBR Vol. XXX, 1940, Part I, pp. 310 follg. Readings of these 'Chitsagon Reverses' are given _seriatim_ below.

Chitsagon Reverses

(b) ūn wat – Coconut inflorescence. _Cocos nucifera_. Marking: – I 170.65/3. I 2.

(c) mun ūa – Black Mustard. _Brassica nigra_. Marking: – I 2. 65/65.

nham te – ‘This is Sesamum’. _Sesamum indicum_. Marking: – I 2. 65/71.

(d) kleñ phūruñ – ‘Tamil Pumpkin’. _Benincasa cerifera_ (?). Marking: – I 170.5.

(e) phalā – Cardamom. Sanskrit _bahula_. Marking: – I 2. 65/57.

(g) phalā phlo – White Cardamom. Marking: – I 2. 65/59.

ōn ma ūiw – _Clitorea ternatea_. It has blue (ūiw) flowers. Marking: – 65/7(8).

(h) cimu nak – Black Cummin, Small Fennel. _Nigella sativa_. Marking: – I 2. 65/36.

(i) cimu kri – ‘Big cimu’, Mod. Burm. _camun_, “a kind of plant of which there are many varieties” (Judson’s Dictionary). Marking: – I 2. 65/34.

Note. I-tsing (see Takakusu, _A Record of the Buddhist Religion_, p. 129) said that “all three kinds of cardamoms are found in Dvaravati” (Siam): the commentator adds that these include “white cardamoms” from the Isthmus of Kra (Arabic qāqulah, _Amomum spp._). Sir George Watt (_The Commercial Products of India_, p. 512) mentions the Malabar Cardamom, a variety of _Elettaria cardamomum_, as having white fruits. According to I. H. Burkill (_A Dictionary of the Economic Products of the Malay Peninsula_, p. 914, s.v. _Elettaria_), the colour is due to the method of drying: “Sun-dried fruits . . . give ‘green cardamoms’; store-dried, with a dipping in hot water, or sun-dried with dipping or placing in sulphurous vapour, give straw-coloured ‘white cardamoms’; fruits dried without these precautions give dark ‘black cardamoms’.

(a) pāy kri – “the big Bean”. _Dolichos lablab_, var. _lignosus_. Marking: – I 2. 65/55.
(b) pāy kri (the same). Marking: – I 2. 65/55.
  mathunsarā – the Grape (?). Skt./Pali madhurasā, “sweet taste”. Marking: – I 2. 65/63.

(d) nhāpyow (the same). Marking: – I 2, 65/31.

(f) chi phū – Kaempferia pandurata Roxb. (?), an edible and medicinal root. Phū; ‘bud’, can also mean ‘bulbous root’. Marking: – I 70. 65/34.

Note. U Wun (see his Mraññā-sat-ñihwan: kyam: p. 207, No. 2501) tells me that Burm. chit phū: is given as the equivalent of Pali vacattha (P.T.S. vacattha, “a kind of root”) in the nissaya to a list of Roots in the Vinaya, Mahāvagga VI, Bhesajjakkhandaka. He, and two Professors of Botany at Rangoon University, Dr. Ko Ko Lay and U Ko Ko Gyi, agree in identifying it with Kaempferia pandurata. U Wun compares Thai gkra4 chai, “a rhizome of the ginger family, used in curry or as a remedy”, and gka4 aan, “a medicinal herb growing in bamboo jungle. It is aromatic and stimulating like ginger. It is much used in decoctions in native medicine. The root stalks are edible” (G. B. McFarland, Thai-English Dictionary, pp. 24-25 and 82). According to Prof. Ko Ko Gyi, the name is now changed to Gastrochilus pandurata.

(g) krak krūn – Jasminum sambac. Marking: – I 2. 65/...

  Note. U Wun gives me the identification, based on § 574 of the Old Abhidāna Pāṭh Nissaya of Kyaw Aung Sanda Sayadaw, where Burm. krak run: is said to be Skt./Pali mallikā, i.e. Jasminum sambac. For this fragrant and medicinal shrub, see I. H. Burkill, op. cit., pp. 1265–7.

  Note. U Wun suggests that ŋhiw pān should really mean ma ŋhiw pān, “unfading flower”. The latter, according to both the Old and the New Abhidāna Nisya is the Sanskrit amalātaka or amalānaka (from amlāna “unwithered”), which is especially applied to Gomphraena globosa, the Globe Amaranth.

(k) kan khyop – Plumbago zeylanica. Marking: – I 2. 65/...
  Note. U Wun tells me that Amarakośa Nissaya of Aggadbhammabhivaṃsa (1938), ch. 14, v. 80, identifies the Burmese medicinal plant kan’ khvūp with Sanskrit citraka, i.e. Plumbago zeylanica. It was used especially as a purgative.
(k) tí sī te – “This is Diospyros fruit” (?) – This assumes that tí is the Mod. Burm. tañ = Pali timbaru, Pali/Sanskrit tinduka. Marking: – I 2. 65.

Note. U Wun tells me that the Abhidhānapadātipā (Old and New Nissaya) identify Burm. yāsakyañ: and resakyañ: with Pali takkārī; and the Amarakośa Nissaya with Sanskrit tarkārī, i.e. the plant Sesbania aegyptiaca, used medicinally especially by women.

Note. U Wun tells me that Burm. krā tanchip is the usual translation of Sanskrit/Pali pundarīka (Neuter), the White Lotus (Is this Nelumbium or Nymphaea lotus?). As the tree sacred to the Buddha Sikhin, pundarīka (Masculine) is usually translated siryakhīlū, “White Mango”, in Old Burmese.

(c) krā tanchip – “Seal Lotus”. Marking: – 65/17.

(d) kra ni – “Red Lotus”. I 2. 65/11.

Note. I suppose this is the Sanskrit raktapāda, Pali rattapaduma, said in the Pali Text Society Dictionary to be a variety of Nelumbium speciosum.

(e) si' t(w)ot – Ficus hispida or F. Cunia. Lower half lost.

(f) si twāt – Ficus hispida or F. Cunia. Marking: – 65/81.

(g) si twot – Ficus hispida or F. Cunia. Marking: – I 2. 65/81.

(i) katiw te – “This is Musk”. Marking: – I 2. 65/6.

(k) katiw ūk – “Musk-sprout”. Markings: – I 2. 65/5.

Note. U Wun writes: – “Another name for Musk-deer and Musk in Sanskrit is mrga-nābhi, “deer’s navel”….. According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, “the deer takes its name from the secretion of a sac, about the size of an orange, opening in front of the preputial aperture.” – We may compare ‘navel’ and ‘sac’ and connect them with ūk, which I believe is the last part of Burm. añhok, “sprout from a seed”.

Note. U Wun tells me that Amarakoša Nissaya ch. 19, v. 110, identifies Burm. pitkhyən mrac with Sanskrit pippalī mūlam, ‘root of the Long Pepper’.

(o) pyā noy — “Honey creeper” (?). Marking: — I 2. 65/51.

(a) pān pūy — Careya arborea (tree or shrub). Fragments. Marking: — I 113. 65/52; I 2. 65/52.

(b) pān pūy kri — “Big Careya arborea” (the tree). Fragment. Marking: — I 2. 65/53.

(e) sikhwo nū — “Tender Cucumber”. Cucumis sativus (?). Marking: — I 2. 65/70.

(f) ip mhūy si — Embelia ribes fruit. Marking: — I 2. 65/1.

(g) ip mhūy si — Embelia ribes fruit. Marking: — I 2. 65/1.

Cf. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 53 (c).

Note. U Wun, on the evidence of the Amarakoša and Pali Abhidhana Nissaya, identifies Burm. imwe with Sanskrit vidāṅga (Pali biḷāṅga), vella, and citratandula, i.e. Embelia ribes, a vermifuge and anthelmintic.

(h) secchi(m) — Myrobalan tree. Terminalia belerica. Marking: — I . . , (65)/84.

(j) thān ryak — Palmyra jaggery. Marking: — I 170. 65/47.

(k) kra’ klū te — “This is Bamboo-Reed” (?). Marking: — (64).

(l) kra’ klū te — “This is Bamboo-Reed” (?). Marking: — I 170. 65.

Note. U Wun points out that this name appears to combine generic names or prefixes for Bamboo (kra) and Reeds (kyū). For kra, cf. Burm. kra khat Bambusa arundinacea, kralui Dendrocalamus Brandisii, krasoṅ: Bambusa polymorpha. Kyū is applied to Phragmites Karka, Arundo donax, etc. See D. Rhind, The Grasses of Burma (1945), p. 28.

(m) kampwon — Soap Acacia. Acacia concinna. Marking: — (top lost).

(n) kampon — Soap Acacia. Acacia concinna. Marking: — I 2. 65/14 (k) (top lost).

Mod. Burm. kaṅ ṭwān: (?)

(p) klit te — “This is Coix”. Marking: — I 2. 65/23.

Note. U Wun, however, points out to me that both old and new Pali Abhidhāna (v. 451) identify Burm. kyit with Pali/Sanskrit nīvāra, “wild rice”. Nīvāra occurs in the Mahāsthānāda Sutta (Majjhima Nikāya), and is translated kyit.
Plate 45. Chitsagon Reverses cont.

Note. U Wun ingeniously suggests that if the word can be divided as klim-lyan, one might connect it with Sanskrit kalimāraka, kalimālaka, kalimālāya = Caesalpinia Bondocella and Burm. kalim. The bitter seeds are used as a medicine.

(c) lak thut pwoñ – Blossom of Wrightia spp. (?), Alstonia scholaris (?). Marking: – I 170. 65/73.

Note. On the authority of the Old and New Abhidhana (v. 573), U Wun identifies lak thut with Sanskrit/Pali kuṭaja, girimallikā = Wrightia antidysenterica, But the bark of this was used in medicine, I think, not the blossom. Lace and Rodger (List of Trees, Shrubs, etc. in Burma, 1922 Ed., p. 214) identify ‘lettōk’ also with the tree Alstonia scholaris. According to Burkill (II, p. 2265), Wrightia has also “pretty flowers”.

(d) cariw – Piper chaba (?) Marking: – I 113. 65/31 (?).

Note. U Wun, on the authority of the Amarakośa Nissaya, identifies carui with Sanskrit cavana, cavī, etc. It appears from Burkill’s Dictionary (p. 1742) that there is some doubt about the plant, and that some botanists do not distinguish it from Piper betel. The name cariw occurs on at least 15 of the Chitsagon plaques – more often, I think, than any other name; so perhaps the plant was a common one. In Modern Burmese the Betel Leaf takes on the name of the Areca Palm. In Old Burmese two inscriptions (I.B., Pl. I 3619–23; V 495 b12) mention it under its Mon name sahmhlū, sahmhlhu (Middle Mon sablu). The plant appears to have spread west from Malaysia, where it is native. One wonders if cariw has any connection with Senoi jērek or Malay sirih (see Skeat and Blagden, Pagan Races of the Malay Peninsula, Vol. II, p. 552); but this is quite doubtful.

Note. On the authority of the Abhidhana-tikā-nisya (Vol. II, p. 292), U Wun doubfully connects this word with Burm. bātakī = Sanskrit vārtakī, the Egg-plant. The ordinary Burmese word for this, kharam:, occurs in Old Burmese (see JBRS Vol. XXX (1940), Part I, p. 292).

(h) sāniw khūy – ? “Wreath of Mesua ferrea flowers”. Marking: – I 2. 65/76.

Note. sāniw occurs in Old Burm. kahkaw sanniuw = Mesua ferrea, Ironwood. Kahkaw is the Burmese word, kajnu’ the Old Mon word for the tree; sāniw is a corruption of kajnu’. Possibly khūy implies a wreath of the flowers.

Sanskrit hingu, from Arabic. “A fluid or resinous substance prepared from the roots... used as a medicine or for seasoning”. Written rhin:khui in modern Burmese.

Sanskrit bilva. Old Mon bil. Mod. Mon bī. Mod Burm. 'up-rhac.

(m) mhān rwaṁ – a kind of Wood-apple (Burm. mhan)? A fragment. No marking.

(o) muriw pwoṁ – Mudar blossom. Calotropis gigantea or procera. Mod. Burm. muri: Marking: – I 2. 65/64.

(a) pān cum (c)i (p)u(ti) – “Rosary of sets of flowers”. Marking: – I. 65.
U Wun compares Mod. Burm. pan:pon:

(b) tān rhūṁ – Pine tree. Mod. Burm. than:rū: Marking: – I 2. 65/44.

Note. U Wun identifies it with Sanskrit/Pali sarala, the ‘straight’ tree, especially Pinus longifolia.

(d) chan te – “This is Husked Rice”. Lower part lost. Marking: – I 2. 65/37.

(g) . . . plūh si te – “This is the fruit of the White (?) . . . .”

(b) . . (kā p)yā noy te – “This is the Honey Creeper’(?) . For ṣyā noy, cf. Pl. 43 (o) supra.

Plate 49. Oval tablets with śikhara, set in deep squared rims. From Tagaung.
Text, pp. 28, 36, 97–98, 134.

U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 65 and p. 50.
Height 6½ in. Breadth at centre 4½ in. Depth of rim at base 2½ in.

(b) Detail of 3 lines of Nāgārī ‘creed’ on (a). Mon Bo Kay reads: – ye dhāmā hetuprabhavā hetuṁ tesāṁ tathā | gato hyavada tesāṁ ca yo nirodho | evaṁ vādi mahāśāmaṇaḥ(h)

(c) Similar tablet, probably from the same mould, and also from Ōdōk pagoda, Tagaung. Rim damaged at right bottom corner.
Height 6½ in. Breadth at centre 4½ in. Depth of rim at base 2½ in.

Tagaung. The one on the right – an oval plaque with deep squared rims and top broken above the Buddha’s head – is probably the same as (a) and (c) supra. For the one on the left, with 3 Buddhas, see infra, Pl. 56 (a).

(e) Similar squared oval tablet, with top broken above the Buddha’s head. What remains, agrees with the tablets described above. This fragment, now at Mandalay Arch. Office, is marked XI 4: so it certainly comes from Tagaung, and very likely also from Ôдоk pagoda. The 3 lines of Naγari are fairly well preserved.

(f) Similar oval tablet, squared at the base with thick rims, and pointed at the top. Now at Mandalay Arch. Office, marked “32” in Burmese. It is complete, but weathered. It appears to come from the same mould as those mentioned above.

Height 6½ in. Breadth at base 4½ in. Thickness of rim at base 2½ in.

Plates 50 to 53. TABLETS WITH THE BUDDHA SEATED IN PRALAMBANĀSANA, DHARMACAKRAMUDRĀ.

(a) Rimmed tablet, ‘fig-leaf’ shape (pointed at the top), with beading all around the oval. Found in 1926 E. of Mingalazedi, Pagān. The Buddha sits Europeanwise, with feet resting on a lotus footstool. His robe falls squarely over the double lotus on which he sits. Pellet-pillars, with abacus at the top, support the laddered trefoil arch, triangular ‘tongued’ śikhara, and stupa-finial with streamers. On either side are the usual 2 tall and medium stupas, with 2 small ones flanking the top of the medium stupa. Below these, are 3 small stupas in tiers along the outer side of the tall stupa. There are also 2 small stupas in line below it, and a minute one placed a little higher, on the outer side of the 2 small ones. There are thus 10 stupas altogether on either side of the archway. Below the lotus seat are 5 lines of Naγari ‘creed’ in high relief. The lines are divided by the Buddha’s feet and footstool, with the Deer attentive on either side of it, and the beaded Wheel below. Wheel and Deer indicate that the scene is the Preaching of the First Sermon in the Deer park near Benares.

Height 7 in. Breadth 5½ in.

Ref. Thomann, Pagān, abbildung 70 and p. 103.

Cf. U Mya, VTB II, Pls. 87, 88 and p. 37, “from Hmawza”, i.e. Śri Kaṭṭra.

(b) A more damaged specimen from the same site, with Old Mon writing (not legible in the print) on the top rim:

wo kyāk kon sañ

“This is the Buddha of Kon sañ”, presumably the donor.

(c) Another specimen marked “I 106, found in 1926 at a ruined shrine E. of the Mingalazedi”, presumably the same site, where, it seems, 3 specimens of 2 sizes were discovered (see infra). This specimen has low rims, and is slightly damaged on the left side.

(d) Rimmed tablet marked “I 177. From a ruined shrine E. of the Mingalazedi”.

Height 5½ in. Breadth 4½ in.
Plate 51

This is a specimen of the smaller size. There are other differences too. The lines of the šikhara here are horizontal, not ‘tongued’. The pillars supporting it are round and solid (not ‘pellet’), with torus bases. The large side-stupas have square beaded harmikā. The 3 small stupas below it are in line, and of equal size. There are 2 small stupas, not 3, on the outer side of the large ones; 1 minute one on the inner side is added and another above the abacus below the medium stupa – 11 altogether on either side. There are only 3 lines of Nāgari.
U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 57 and p. 47.

(e) Rimless ‘fig-leaf’ tablet found at Twanté, Pyilônchantha Shwényaung monastery. Thickly coated with gold leaf, but appears to be similar to (a) above, but much smaller. It is now at the Burma Historical Commission Office, Rangoon.
Height 4\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Breadth 3\(\frac{3}{4}\) in. Cf. also ASI 1906, Pl. LIII, fig. 2.

(f) Lower fragment of a rimmed tablet probably similar to (a) above, showing the pralambaṇāsana, with the 5 lines of Nāgari, the attentive Deer couchant, and beaded Wheel at the base.

Note. Compare the rimless plaque shown at Plate I (top) in G. Coedès, “Siamese Votive Tablets’, J.S.S. Vol. XX (Part 1), 1926. On p. 4 he traces this type to Bodhgayā. There is clear family-relationship between our two oval types (a) and (d), and the Siam plaque. This last resembles (d) in the solidity of the pillars; it resembles (a) in the triangular shape of the šikhara, and (generally) the grouping of stupas; but it has only 9 on either side, omitting, it seems, the minute stupa below the main one. The height of the Siam plaque is given as 0 m. 125 = almost 5 in. With regard to the provenance of the Siam plaque, note M. Coedès' correction at J.S. S. Vol. XXI (Part 3), 1923, p. 196, n. 1: ‘The place of discovery of this tablet is Dong Sak, near P’ong Tük, and not Jaiya’.

Text, pp. 17, 76, 99, 102.

(a, b) Bronze mould, Obverse and Reverse, for making such oval tablets. From Myinkaba, Pagán. Now in Rangoon University Library. Beaded border runs all around the edge. The Buddha sits between strong rounded pillars with abacus, supporting a high trefoil arch (the top lobe much larger than the side ones), short horizontal šikhara, and stupa-finial with streamers. The whole, including the side-stupas, closely resembles Pl. 50 (c); but here the base of the large stupa is in line with the base, not the top, of the double lotus; and below it, is a line of 10 small stupas, 5 on either side of the Buddha’s legs. Thus there are 13 stupas on either side. There appear to be only 2 lines of Nāgari, with the 2 Deer and Wheel at the bottom. Height 5\(\frac{1}{10}\) in. Breadth 3\(\frac{3}{4}\) in.

Height 53 in. Breadth about 3\(\frac{1}{2}\) in.
Rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. Marked I 73/200. Found in a mound in Maung Chit Sa’s field (‘Chitsagon’) S. of Pagán-hmyaw temple, E. of the Nanda. The Buddha sits between pellet-pillars with abacus, which support a trefoil arch (the top lobe much larger than the side ones), and short šikhara with triangular ‘tongue’ crossing the horizontals up to the stupa-
The Plate 52.

(a) In 1927 the Sumedha tablet was as shown in (c, d). (e, f) shows it as it is today - cracked, and with one side lost.

Note. At ASB 1938, p. 6, Duroiselle reported the finding in a small ruined temple “a few yards to the W. of the Gawdawpalin... a terracotta votive tablet 5 in. x 4 in. bearing a figure of Buddha in the dharmacakramudrā... seated European fashion... It contains... ye dhammā hetu pābhavā etc. in Pali in Nagari characters inscribed below the pedestal”. At ASI 1906, Pl. LIII, fig. 2, and p. 134, the lower half of a Pagán tablet is shown with the Buddha seated in pralambāsāna, dharmacakramudrā, with Deer on either side of his feet.

Ref. ASI 1915, Part I, Pl. XX (f) and p. 24.

Height 4 in. Breadth at base 2 in.

Tall narrow rimless tablet arching to a point above. Marked “I 36 (1930–31). From Hsè Gyi’s field near the S. side of the Tawyangyaung, Myinkaba”. Beading all around the edge. The Buddha sits between rounded pillars, with torus and abacus hung with beads. The horizontal ribs of the śikhara are visible behind the trefoil arch. 3 medium-sized stupas in tiers on either side, with 1 small one between the top tier and the śikhara, and 1 minute one above the abacus – altogether 5 on either side. 3 (or 4 ?) faint lines of Nāgarī below, with the Wheel between 2 couchant Deer.

(b) Another rimless specimen from the same site, with similar markings.

(c) A similar rimless tablet found in relic-chamber at Shwésandaw pagoda. – Obverse.

Height 4½ in. Breadth at base 2½ in. Thickness 1½ in.

(d) The Reverse of (c), marked “I 238, from Pagán Shwésandaw”, with 2 lines of Old Mon writing engraved down the plaque: –

1 wo kyāk ya |tri sisiñ
“This is the Buddha of the Revd. Lady Sīśīṅī”.

tri is short for trilā, a colloquial or slightly late form of tīrāla, applied especially to holy persons.

Is the name Sīśīṅī for Ṛśīṅgaṅīn, the 'horned anchoret'?

(e) The Reverse of a similar tablet, marked “I 238, from Pagán Shwehsandaw”, with 2 similar lines of Old Mon in the same cursive hand: –

1 wo’ kyak ya trila sisīṅ

“This is the Buddha of the Revd. Lady Sīśīṅī”.

(f) Rimmed tablet with beaded border, probably squared at the base, but this is broken below the Buddha’s feet and lotus footstool. At either side of the śikhara archway are 4 tiers of medium-sized stupas, the base of the lowest being in line with the base of the double lotus on which he sits. The tablet is marked “14” in Burmese.

Height 5½ in. Breadth 3½ in.

Text, pp. 98, 102, 138.

(a) Well-preserved fragment showing the lower half of a rimless tablet, squared at the base, similar to Pl. 52 (a, b, c). It shows the seated Buddha from the shoulders downwards. – Obverse.

(b) The Reverse of (a) marked I 178 (?). From Shwehsandaw, Pagán. It shows the last 2 lines of a mysterious inscription.

(c) Neg. 2436 (1923–24).

Circular votive tablet from Nyaungbingan village, ½ mile W. of Hsameikhé, 2 miles S. of Thazi, Meiktila district. It shows the haloed Buddha seated on throne in pralambānāsana, with hands in dharmacakrāmudrā, between 2 haloed Bodhisattvas (Lokanātha and Maitreya ?), seated on the same throne in lalitāsana, their outer legs flat on seat, their inner legs hanging. Their inner hands are raised before the body, probably holding stems of flowers, their outer hands rest on the seat behind their hips. 4 horizontal lines divided by the Buddha’s halo, indicate faint Nāgarī writing in high relief at the top of the tablet. – A unique plaque, but much worn and indistinct.

(d) Archaic Burmese inscription of 3 lines on the Reverse of (c): –

1 kunsāṅkā ṇhaṅ pay phliṅ ye’ 1

“(The donors) are Kunsāṅkā” [Sanskrit guṇasaṅga, ‘association with good qualities’] “and Pay phliṅ” – perhaps husband and wife.

Neg. 2437 (1923–24).

Plate 54. LOKANĀTHA, SEATED. TWANTÉ. PAGÁN. MINBU (2 TYPES, cf. Pl. 7).

(a) Phot. Tin Oo.

Height 4½ in. Breadth at base 2½ in.
Rimless tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. Found in 1957 at Hsutaungpyi pagoda, ¼ mile S. of Kanbe village, 4 miles E. of Twanté. Badly weathered. This tablet, so far as one can judge by what remains, is exactly like the gilded Kanthit seal of Aniruddha (Pl. 7); and though it does not bear his signature on the underrim, it may probably be attributed to him. The Nagari inscription on the Obverse is worn almost illegible here, but may be partly read on Pl. 7. Amitâbha, seated in dhyânamudrā in Lokanâtha’s headdress, is clearer on this tablet than on Pl. 7. The delicate pose of the left hand toying with the lotus stalk, is clearer here; also details of the royal ornaments, belt, necklets, armlet and upâvîta.

(b) Phot. Tin Oo.

The lower part (damaged) of a similar rimless tablet showing Lokanâtha. From the same site.

(c) Neg. 3378 (1930–31).

Thick-rimmed square tablet, chamfered at the top corners, found in the relic-chamber of the encased stupa near the Seinnyet pagodas, Pagan, where another ‘seal’ of Aniruddha (Pl. 6 a) was discovered, together with the Khabin (Twanté) pot (infra, Pl. 452 b). 2 lines of Nagari ‘creed’ in high relief are seen below the lotus-seat. Continued up the right side of the tablet.

(d) Neg. 450 (1906-07). U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 69 and p. 52.

A very similar, but much more weathered tablet, thick-rimmed and square, chamfered at the top corners. Found long ago at Minbu (or Paunglin, in Minbu district ?).

Note. (c) and (d) show a different type of representing the seated Lokanâtha from (a, b) and Pl. 7. But all, perhaps, may be connected with Aniruddha. The differences have been noted in the text (ch. X, pp. 191–192). Note also that just as Aniruddha hesitated in his single Buddha tablets between Śâkharâ with Stupa-finial, or plain Umbrella (Pls. 6 a and c), so he does with his Lokanâtha tablets.

TRIADS.

Plate 55. Buddha in abhayamudrā (?), seated between Earth-touching Buddha and Maitreyâ (Pyu).

Text, pp. 99–100.

(a) U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 105 and pp. 69–70.

Height 34 in. Breadth at base 2½ in. Thickness 7½ in.

Square tablet arching to a low peak. Marked I 168 (the last figure is doubtful). It comes from Kyazin temple S.E. of Myinpagan. Shows 3 connected double-lotus thrones, with 3 haloed figures seated on mats above them, each under his umbrella. The central figure with his lotus throne is a little higher and more prominent than those beside him. He is a Buddha seated, right leg on left, with hands brought together before the body. The dharmacakramudrâ may possibly be intended: but it looks more like abhayamudrā, with right hand raised, palm open, supported by the left hand cupped below it. The figure on the left (his right) is the Earth-touching Buddha, seated right leg on left, with (probably) an almsbowl in the left hand resting in the lap. The figure on the right is a Bodhisattva, doubtless Maitreya, seated in ardhañārāmañkāsana, his left (outer) leg flat on the seat, his right (inner) knee half raised. Both hands fall naturally, without a flower, towards the front. He wears a crown, large ear-tubes, starlike stomacher, necklets, armlets, wristlets, and upavītā which falls in a loop before his feet. His umbrella is a little smaller than the others', and his lotus seat a little lower. 2 flower-medallions (?) fill the gaps between the 3 umbrellas. The common pedestal below the 3 lotuses has a tendril pattern on the recessed sides. The centre panel is plain, but engraved with a faint legend in Pyu characters, read by Duroiselle: –

budha mga: psu: khnū

Duroiselle found one such terracotta tablet, together with a very similar bronze (?) iron) one – see (e) of this plate – “a mound near the river bank, close to the south of the Tawyagyaung monastery on the W. of the Nanpaya temple”. (ASI 1928, pp. 125-6).

(b) The Pyu writing on pedestal faintly legible – as described by Duroiselle.
Height $3\frac{3}{8}$ in. Breadth at base $2\frac{3}{8}$ in. Thickness $\frac{1}{16}$ in.

(e) Similar tablet marked I 169 (1928-29), said to come from a hollow pagoda W. (or N.W.) of Sin' pāhōo zedi.

(d) The similar ‘bronze’ (it is as heavy as iron) tablet found by Duroiselle in Po Tha’s field S. of the Tawyagyaung, Myinpagan. Here 3 stupas seem to take the place of the 3 umbrellas over the seated figures; their 3 lotus thrones are distinct; the pedestal is plain, and there is no Pyu inscription.

Ref. ASI 1928, p. 125 and Pl. LIV a.
Height $4\frac{1}{8}$ in. Breadth at base $3\frac{1}{8}$ in. Thickness at base (partly hollow) $1\frac{1}{8}$ in.

Note. For a Triad tablet probably similar (I have not the volume), see ASI 1906, Pl. LIII, fig. 6, and p. 133. It was found near the Abèyadana. Two other specimens of this kind of Triad on votive tablets were reported by Taw Sein Ko in 1919. See ASI 1919, Part I, pp. 19-20, and ASB 1919, p. 42, para 76. They were found at Sindè village, Prome district: – “Tablet No. 1 is semi-elliptical in shape, and measures nearly $3 \times 2\frac{1}{2}$ inches. It bears 3 seated figures, all seated on lotus thrones. The middle figure represents Gautama Buddha seated crosslegged in the dharmacakramudrā. It is plainly dressed. On its right is a similar figure, but smaller in size and seated in the bhūmisparsa mudrā. On its left is another seated figure, but, as far as it can be made out from what remains of it, it is elaborately dressed. It has a high headdress, and a wreath or a chain falls loosely over its breast. It is also seated crosslegged, but its right knee is slightly raised, and its right foot appears to be resting on something which cannot be identified. Both hands are dependent and rest on the knees... It may be assigned to about the 10th or 11th century A.D.

Tablet No. 2 is a replica of Tablet No. 1”.

Plate 56. Twin Miracle Triads. Tagaung. Myoma.

Text, pp. 28, 97-98, 174.

(a) Large rimmed tablet (rims mostly broken except at the top), originally squared on 3 sides, but tapered to a sharp apex. The apex rim is bare. Below it, the plaque proper is rounded to an arch at the top, with beaded border at the sides and base. This tablet is pitted in the apex, and damaged at the top left corner. The central Buddha sits, touching Earth, on double lotus mat and low throne, indented and recessed. There are 3 beaded trefoil arches, resting on pellet pillars. The central one is backed with high ‘tongued’ śikhara, āmalaka, stupa-finial, and streamers. The side-arches have only a ‘flame’ apex. There are peepal-sprays between them and the central arch. 2 Buddhas stand on lotus footstools in the side-arches, their inner hands raised before the body (the one on the right in abhayamudrā), their outer hands hanging (the one on the left in varadamudrā). Above them are 6 stupas, medium and small, on either side of the śikhara. At the base there are 2 lines of Nāgārī in high relief, read by Mon Bo Kay as follows:

\text{om ye dhamā hetu prabhavā tesā(m) hetu(m) tathāgato hyava | da tesā(m) ca yo nirodho eva(m)vādī mahāsamaṇā(h)}

Now at Mandalay Arch. Office, this tablet probably comes (like those in (b)-(f) below) from Ōdōk pagoda, Tagaung. It represents the Twin Miracle. As for the side-Buddhas, note that the same two attitudes are shown on the tablet with two standing Buddhas found at Rangoon Kyaik Dē-ap (Botahtaung) pagoda.

Height 61 in. Breadth at base 57\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Thickness 1\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Cf U Mya, VTB I, Pls. 63 and 64 and p. 49. Duroiselle, ASB 1916, p. 38 (Tablet A).

(b) Base of a similar tablet with deep rims, marked XI 3, from Ōdōk pagoda, Tagaung, showing the 2 lines of Nāgārī and border beading.

(c) Similar tablet with deep rims, also from Ōdōk pagoda, Tagaung, damaged on left side and bottom corner, but complete on the right.

Height 7\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Breadth at base 5\(\frac{3}{4}\) in. Thickness of rim 1\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

(d) Detail of the 2 lines of Nāgārī inscription at the base of (c), damaged on the left side.

(e) Detail of another specimen with only one line of Nāgārī at the base.

Note. Mon Bo Kay is of the opinion (no doubt rightly) that there is really no difference between these Twin Miracle tablets, whether they shew 2 lines of Nāgārī ‘creed’ or only 1. In the latter case the clay, when soft, was allowed to spill over the lower line.

(f) A thick-rimmed specimen, broken across the middle, from relic-chamber of Shwésaryan pagoda on the bank of North Nawin Chaung, Myoma village, some 15 to 20 miles N. of Old Prome.

Neg. 4512 (1940-41).

Ref. ASB 1941, pp. 24-25 and Pl. III (b). The two standing figures are Buddhas, not Bodhisattvas.

Text, pp. 28, 99.

(a) “Indian Museum, Calcutta. Neg. No. 158/59. Locality Burma. Terracotta votive plaques Tg. 1, O. Pn. 3”. — Tg. stands for Tagaung. O. Pn. probably for ‘Old Pagan’, i.e. Tagaung. The 2 tablets appear to duplicate the two types mentioned in the preceding plate, with 2 lines or 1 line of Nagari respectively. Very likely both come also from Od6k pagoda. They illustrate the Twin Miracle.

(b, c) Neg. 3362 (1930–31).
Ref. U Mya, ASI 1930–34, Part I, p. 177 (item 1) and Part II, Pl. XCVIII (c).
Height 4½ in. Breadth at base 3½ in.

2 specimens of one type of rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. They were found by U Mya in the E. relic-chamber under a brick platform of an encased stupa, “in the middle of a field to the N.E. of Thiripyitsaya.”

The central figure in strong relief, the ETB., with beaded shoulder-nimbus, sits in padmasana on double lotus between elaborately carved pillars. These support abacus, trefoil arch with large central lobe, bead-edged and ‘tongued’ śikhara, stupa-finial and streamers. Boughs of the peepal tree branch up from behind the arch. On single lotuses, to right and left of the Buddha, sit half-kneeling 2 small crowned figures in namaskāra mudrā, facing front, but with knees (the further one raised) turned towards the Buddha. They appear to be Devas rather than Bodhisattvas. Below the lotus seats are 2 lines of Pali in Mon script in high relief:

eso bhagavā sambeñ(ə) = jesalyena ka (to vimut(t)at(thaṁ) sa(ha)t(th)enevā ti
“This Blessed One was made by the sambeñ Jesalya with his own hands, for the sake of Deliverance.”

(d) All that remains of the one specimen of (b) found in the Mandalay Arch. Office.

Text, p. 99.

Three rimmed tablets, all very similar on both sides, squared below, arching to a point above. No beading. The Obverses show the Buddha seated on double lotus above a low recessed and indented throne. He sits between pellet-pillars supporting a trefoil arch and high ‘tongued’ śikhara with āmalaka- or stupa-finial. 3 peepal sprays branch out and upwards on either side of the arch. Below them, on growing stems of lotus stools, are the two small Aggasavakas, half-kneeling with back knee raised, turned to the Buddha, but facing front with hands in namaskāramudrā. There is no writing except on the Reverses, which have merely the Pali:

namo buddhāya “Honour to the Buddha!”

(a, b) Marked XII 2, i.e. from Taungdwingyi. High uṣṇīṣa.
Height 3½ in. Breadth at base 2½ in. — Obverse and Reverse.

(c, d) From Alanmyo, opposite Thayetmyo.
Neg. 1256, 1257 (1913–14). — Obverse and Reverse.

(e, f) Found in the Small Shwēthalyaung Cave, Hpawundaung, opposite Mônlya across the Chindwin.

Note. A similar broken plaque, marked I 205, with similar inscription, comes from Pagán.

Text, pp. 76–77, 99.

(a, b, c) 3 specimen rimless tablets, squared below, arching to a point above. Each has the follg. line of Mon/Pali below the lotus-seats:

wo’ kyek saṅganaga isi [or isvi?] pākāra

“This is the Buddha between hermits, chiefs of the Saṅgha” – i.e. the aggasāvakas Sāriputta and Moggallāna.

The Obverse shows a short stout Buddha with shoulder-nimbus and flame-tipped usnīṣa, seated on double lotus between turned pillars with torus, lotus capital and abacus. The laddered trefoil arch above him supports a broad bead-edged foliated sikhara, with stupa-finial and streamers. 3 sprays of peepal branch out on either side behind pillars, arch and sikhara. Below them are two small bead-haloed hermits, half-kneeling on lotus stools, hands in namaskaramudrā. Their knees are turned towards the Buddha, the inner knee half-raised. Their faces are half-turned to the front. The large heads and soft plump bodies of this Triad contrast with the Pāla tradition of tall masculine strength, typical of Aniruddha’s tablets.

Height 4½ to 4¾ in. Breadth at base 3 to 3¼ in. Thickness ½ in.

(a) Neg. 3110 (1928–29). From the W. mound in Aung Hla’s field S.W. of Htilominlo temple. – Obverse.

(b) Another specimen, perhaps the one marked I 244, from the same site. – Obverse.

(c) The specimen marked “I 246.A3”, from the same site. – Obverse.

(d) The Reverse of (c), with 3 lines of Pali in Mon script:

1 muggaliputtacaraye | na yo māpitaṁ idaṁ buddharū | paṁ

“This image of the Buddha was created by the Teacher Muggaliputta”. – This might well be “the therā Muggaliputtaka” of Rājakumār’s inscription (1113 A.D.), mentioned, first after the Mahāthera, among the witnesses of the Kubyaukgyi dedication. Cf. also Pl. 61 (c) infra; and Duroiselle, ASI 1927, p. 168. It appears that plaques signed by Muggaliputta and by Sumedha (another witness) were both found in the Chitsagōn trove of Archaic Burmese.

(e) The Reverse of another tablet marked “I 246. A3” from the same site, with 3 similar lines of Pali in Mon script signed by the ācariya Muggaliputta.

(f) The Reverse of another tablet broken at the top, marked “I 243”, from the same site, with 2 lines of Pali in Mon script:

Plate 60. Earth-touching Buddho between Buddhas or Saints.

(a) A tiny rimless ‘fig leaf’ tablet, neatly carved, with beaded border all around. The lotus stem at the base supports the bulb-fronted seat on which the ETB sits. Round pillars with torus and capital support the abacus and low trefoil arch over him. It is crowned with śīkhara, stupa-finial and streamers. Tendrils from the same lotus wind outwards to form seats for small Buddhas (?), seated perhaps in namekāra mudrā. (If so, the scene is the Twin Miracle). Streamers hanging from the capitals (?) part them from the central Buddha. Above the small Buddhas is a medium-sized stupa on either side, and sprays of peepal leaf. No markings. Bought at Pagān. Exact provenance unknown.

Height 13 in. Max. breadth 11 in.

(b) Rimless tablet, squared below, arched above. Beaded border at sides, but not below. The central ETB, with large almond eyes, flame-usṇīṣa, and beaded shoulder-nimbus, sits on double lotus between pellet pillars. Above him is a beaded trefoil abacus-arch, crowned with square śikhara, bead-edged and foliated, and stupa-finial with streamers. At the bottom corners, on lotus stools, half-sit two small haloed saints in namekṣaṇamudrā, turned towards the Buddha but facing front. Above them in tiers are 2 bell-like stupas on either side, parted from the śikhara-arch by a branch of peepal leaves, with raying star (or sun) above. At the base of this elegant tablet there is a line of Old Mon, not easy to read: – wo kyā(k) s... s... s... ma....

“This is the Buddha (of) . . . .” The marking reads: “88. From mound near the large brick building (Oktaikgyi) E. of Myinpagan (1926)”.

Height 4 in. Breadth at base 24 in.

(c) Small rimless tablet squared below, arching to a point above. Marked I 111, from Pagān. The lotus stem at the base, not only supports the bulbous lotus mat on which the ETB sits, but branches around the bottom corners to form stools on which kneel two small saints in profile, facing the Buddha in namekāramudrā. Above the pellet pillars and abacus, a wriggling arch supports the horizontal lines of a large stupa (or śikhara-stupa ?) tapering to the peak. Above the saints, on either side, is a medium-sized stupa and peepal-branches. Beaded stars above the Buddha’s shoulders. – Weak, and perhaps late work. Cf. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 74 and p. 54, from Sagaing Htupayōn.

Height 24 in. Breadth at base 13½ in.

(d, e) 2 broken tablets, both marked I 247, from a mound in Aung Hla’s field S.W. of Htilominlo. The lower half of squared tablets, finely made, with beaded border at the sides. They show a large central ETB seated on double lotus between strong turned pillars with abacus. On either side, on sprouting lotus, sits a small ETB with beaded shoulder-nimbus and bead frame. The peepal leaves visible above suggest that there were no more than 3 figures on the tablets. If so, the scene is that of the Twin Miracle. Below the lotus seats are 2 lines of writing in high relief, Mon script. The upper line is Pali, the lower Old Mon: –

eso bhagavā vim(u)t(thāya) mayā gatā | wo ky(e)k lati(ţssa) ma lā (22) trīyey 1

“This Blessed One was made by me with the object of Deliverance”. “This is the Buddha stamped (?) by Latī . . . . . days”.

Breadth at base 3½ in.
Plate 61. Between Stupas (Muggaliputta). Sakaladharmadāyasā.

Text, p. 99.

(a, b) Pointed oval tablets, marked I 192, from Chitsagôn, E. of the Nanda (1926). The lower half of (a) is lost, and the upper row of (b) is incomplete. Putting the two together, I estimate the height as about 5 in., the max. breadth 3½ in. The 5 Buddhas are of equal size, and sit in 3 rows, alternating with stupas: – top row, 1 Buddha between 2 stupas; 2nd and 3rd rows, 3 stupas with 2 Buddhas between them. Each Buddha sits on a studded mat, and has a beaded shoulder-nimbus. The 2 central stupas are rather larger than the side ones. Each stupa is bell-shaped, with beaded band near the bottom; and above the bell, a harmikā, 3 chattrāvali, bulbous finial and streamers. Leafy sprays fill in the gaps. There is a beaded border, but no rims. At the base are 3 lines of Nāgarī in high relief. For (b) – see Neg. 2715 (1926–27). Mon Bo Kay reads the Nāgarī as follows: –

\[ \text{oṁ ye dhammā hetuprabhavā hetum teṣā(m) tathāga- } \text{to hyavada teṣāñca yo nirodha e|va(m)vaññī mahāsāramanah} \]

Cf. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 48 (a) and pp. 37–38.

(c) Incomplete Pali inscription on the Reverse of (a), which we may complete from the Reverse of (b), not shown. It is the same as the one at Pl. 59 (d, f) on tablets found S.W. of Htilominlo: –

\[ \text{muggaliputtacariye ṣaṃ māpitaṁ idaṁ buddharūpaṁ} \]

“This image of the Buddha was created by the Teacher Muggaliputta”.

Cf. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 48 (b).

(d) Neg. 3111 (1928–29).

Another elegant rimless tablet, squared below, arched at the top, with beaded border except at the base. It comes from the E. mound in Aung Hla’s field S.W. of Htilominlo. At the base there is a line of Mon/Pali in high relief: –

\[ \text{wo’ sakaladharmadāyasā} \]

“This is the donor of all the Dharma” – presumably the Buddha.

He sits in the centre on double lotus between pellet pillars, which support abacus, richly beaded trefoil arch, square bead-edged and foliated śikhara, stupa-finial and streamers. On either side 2 small Buddhas in tiers, with beaded shoulder-nimbus, sit on lotus-seats. Immediately above them is a stupa, and another stupa beside the stupa-finial – 4 altogether. Between the stupas, a branch of the peepal tree, with leaves.

(a) U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 98, pp. 65–66.

Height 5 in. Breadth at base 3½ in.

Thick rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. Beaded border on each side of the plaque proper, not along the base. Many such tablets were found in 1926 E. of Mingalazedi. The central Buddha is short and soft compared to the Aniruddha type. His large head has a flame-tipped usnīsa and beaded shoulder-nimbus. He sits on double lotus between weak colonettes, which support a large abacus, laddered trefoil arch (the side-lobes almost lost), high umbrella-pole and short streamers. There is no sikhara. Sprays of peepal fill the rest of the peak. 4 small haloed ETBs, in 2 tiers, sit on double lotus at the sides, 2 above the abacus and 2 below it, with leafage between. At the base is a line of Mon writing in high relief: – wo buddhamuni matrārājikā(r = kandañ)

"This Buddha-sage was made (?) by Matrārājikār". Matrārājikār should mean ‘Governor of Matrā’. If this is not the Matrā of N.W. India, note that in Kyaukse, under Panan kharuin, there was a place Matara (I.B., Pl. III 29222). Also Matrā krī ‘Great Matrā’ (Pl. II 153 a18). For the same inscription on a different kind of tablet, found a few yards N.E. of Myinkaba Kubyamngē, see A.S.B. 1938, p. 7.

(b) Similar tablet, marked I 179, from the same site. Very thick coarse rims.

Height 5½ in. Breadth at base 4½ in. Thickness 3 in.

(c) Similar thick-rimmed tablet from the same site, with 1 line of Mon/Burmese engraved on the face of the bottom rim: –

1 wo' kyāk ŋā chūm

"This is Nā Chūm's Buddha". Nā Chūm (‘Mr. Superlative’) is a Burmese name.

(d) Similar tablet, marked “I 12, E. of Mingalazedi”, has a line of Old Mon engraved all around the face of the rim, starting from the bottom left corner: –

1 o 1 wo' kyāk (ta)ryaḥ (mān) 1 'ut mānus lok devalok or blaḥ (nor saṅsār) prakā(r)....lin

"This is the Buddha of Judge Mān (?) . May all the world of men and the world of Devas be released (from Samsāra)........."

(e) 2 fragments of a similar tablet, with top lost. Here too there is a broken line of faint writing around the rim which I cannot read.

(f) Another thick-rimmed fragment from the base of a similar tablet marked I 12, with 3 lines of Old Mon (?) faintly engraved on the face of the bottom rim, and a few letters on the left side also. Not understood.

Plate 63. Matrārājikār cont. Writings on Reverses. Pegu tablets.

(a) Reverse of similar tablet, marked “6. I 228. From E. of Mingalazedi, Pagan (1926)”, stone-like in weight. 3 lines of Pali in Mon script: –

1 eso bhagavā rājā|puttabhiriyā hatthathā|yevā ti 1
“This Blessed One (was made) by hand by the wife of Rājāputta (the Prince)”. Height 5\frac{3}{8} \text{ in.} Breadth at base 3\frac{1}{2} \text{ in.} Thickness 3 \text{ in.}

(b) Reverse of similar tablet with coarse rims, marked “A. 5. I 179”, with lines of Old Mon: – wo' at [or arta] mi la'

(c) Similar tablet with thick deep rims, stored in the West gandhakuti museum on the platform of Shwémawdaw pagoda, Pegu (No. 99). Reading of the line at the base of the Obverse as at Pl. 62 a, supra. Height 5\frac{1}{8} \text{ in.} Breadth at base 3\frac{5}{8} \text{ in.}

(d) A different small tablet, badly worn, also at Pegu Shwemawdaw museum (No. 98), showing 5 ETBs. The tablet is rimless and squared, arching to a low point at the top. There is no inscription at the base, but a lotus stem rising in the middle and branching to the sides (as in Pl. 60 c), supporting both the double lotus of the central Buddha, and also those of the lower tier of side-Buddhas. The central archway has rounded pillars, abacus, arch perhaps trefoil (but the side lobes have almost disappeared), śikhara, stupa-finial and streamers. Peepal sprays branch out between the arch and the upper tier of haloed Buddhas. Peepal leaves and abacus divide the upper tier from the lower.

Plate 64

TEN OR FIFTEEN EARTH-TOUCHING BUDDHAS.

Plate 64. 10 Buddhas between stupas. Yasa’s tablet. 15 Buddhas (Pegu, Pagán).

Text, pp. 98–100.

(a) U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 101 and p. 68.
Height 3\frac{3}{4} \text{ in.} Breadth at base 3 \text{ in.}

Tablet, now rimless, squared below, arching to a point above. Beaded border at sides up to peak, not at base. Marked I 236 (1926–27), from a mound in Aung Hla’s field near S. side of Htilominlo. Shows 3 rows of Buddhas, all of one size, alternating with stupas: – top row, 2 Buddhas with stupa between and a leaning stupa at either end of the row; 2nd and 3rd rows, 4 Buddhas with 3 stupas between – 10 Buddhas and 9 stupas altogether. At the bottom a line of minute writing in high relief. Each Buddha has a beaded shoulder-nimbus. Above the middle row are fig leaves, above the lowest row Wheels (?). Each stupa, with its streamers, is at shoulder-height between the Buddhas, with a star pattern below it.

(b) U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 100 and p. 68.
Height 6 \text{ in.} Breadth at base 4\frac{1}{4} \text{ in.}

Tablet with deep rims, squared below, arching to a point above. Beaded border at sides up to peak. The tablet is marked I 118 (1931–32), and comes from a small ruined temple in a corner of San Sha’s field S.E. of U Kywet’s monastery at the S. end of Myinpagan. The ETBs, all roughly of one size, are in 3 rows: 3 in the top and middle rows, 4 in the bottom row: total 10. Each Buddha sits on lotus mat, in a trefoil arch resting on pellet pillars. There is a halo of curling leaf to every arch. Sprays of fig leaves wander up the sides. At the base there is 1 line, half Mon half Pali, in Mon script:–

wo kye(k) ya(s)a kl(o) sahattheneva ti

“This Buddha, Yasa (?) made (?) it, with his own hands”. klo, if rightly read, appears to stand for kloň.

(c) Lower fragment, rimless, of similar tablet now at Mandalay Arch. Office. This shows more clearly the line of writing at the base.

(d) A similar tablet, also marked I 118 (1931–32), has 2 lines of Old Mon writing on the underrim:–
sambeñ goh ma lât 1

“Stamped by the sambeñ”.

Ref. ASI 1930–34, Part I, p. 186. Probably the sambeñ Yasa was the same as the Prince Yas of Pl. 23 (c, d, e), and “the sambeñ Prince Yassa, the king’s favourite” of Pl. 38 (a, b).

(e) Phot. San Win.

Height 22 in. Breadth 2½ in.

Small squared tablet, arching to a point at the top, now in the West gandhakuti museum on the platform of Shwémawdaw pagoda, Pegu (No. 112). Badly worn. Shows 15 ETBs: 3 rows of 5, all of equal size, each within a thin frame of abacus-posts and round halo-arches. Base and apex bare.

(f) One of 4 similar tablets, marked I 360, found at Pagán in 1926. Sprays of peepal in the apex. Height 3½ in. Breadth 3 in.

Note. For other 15 Buddha tablets, see U Mya, ASI 1930–34, Part I, p. 205 (“Find at Yegyi-Yenauk, Bassein”), and Part II, Pl. CXVII (c – middle plaque in upper row). Here the arrangement is different: 4 rows, with 3 Buddhas in the top row, and 4 in the 3 lower ones. U Mya attributes these “to the later part of the Pagán period”.

Plates 65 to 67. “TWENTY EIGHT” (ATṬHAVĪSATI) EARTH-TOUCHING BUDDHAS.

Plate 65. Tablets of the Law-sambeñ and the sambeñ Pintū.

Text, p. 99.

Note. Counted from Taṇhaṅkara to Gotama, there are 28 Buddhas. But on these tablets the number of figures may be 28, 29, 30 or 31. The Buddhas are always shown in bhūmisparśamudrā, the Earth-touching attitude. Sometimes they are all of one size; sometimes the smaller figures are grouped around one (or more) larger figures. In Aniruddha’s seals (Pls. 10, 11 supra), a Bodhisattva is added on either side of the large central Buddha, making the total number of figures 31. Bodhisattvas do not recur in the post-Kyanzittha groups here shown.
(a) Rimmed tablet squared below, arching to a point above. Beaded border at sides up to peak. There are 6 rows of Buddhas: top row 3, with a small stupa at either end; 2nd, 3rd and 6th (bottom) rows, 6 Buddhas each; 4th and 5th rows, 4 Buddhas each, with large Buddha in the centre — total 30. The central Buddha sits in pellet-pillar frame, with abacus, beaded trefoil arch, and umbrella. Peepal branches behind. The other Buddhas have merely double lotus seat, and beaded shoulder-nimbus and frame. At the foot is 1 line of Pali in Mon script: — athavisati me buddha triyā̄ sambeṅgena katā buddhat(ḥ)āya “The 28 Buddhas were made by me, the Law-sambein (Judge), with the object of (attaining) Buddhahood”.

Height 7½ in. Breadth at base 5½ in.

This tablet, now at Mandalay Arch. Office, has no markings. Tablets of the same size, with the same inscription on the Obverse, were found by Lu Pe Win at Lémeyet-hna pagoda, Yindaw, 7 miles S. of Shwébo: see ASB 1941, p. 25. Another specimen is stuck up on the modern W. portico of the Nanda temple, Pagán (S. side, W. end). A partly gilded specimen, now at Mandalay Arch. Office, is marked “Found in 1955–56 in a ruined pagoda near Shweguncha pagoda” (Taungbi, N.E. of Pagán city). Several other Pagán specimens (see infra) are marked I 221. See ASB 1938, p. 6, item 5, for a specimen found “a few yards W. of the Gawdawpallin temple.”

(b) Reverse of a specimen marked “I 221.K I”, with 7 lines of Pali inscription in Mon script: —

 athavisati me buddha ropā taryyā̄ sambeṅ dāna pitā katā raṇo ca māṭa ca pitaro ca saput-taddhita ro bhiriyā ca sabbasattahi tatthāya kato buddha lo ke ca anāgāte ti

“This 28 Buddha-image was made by me the donor, the Law-sambein. It is made for the sake of benefitting the king, mother, father, together with sons, daughters, wives, and all living beings. (May I be) a Buddha in (this) world or the world to come!”

U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 44 (a, b), and pp. 32–33.

(c) A complete gilded specimen is said to come from a ruined pagoda near Shweguncha pagoda, Pagán (1955–56). Now at Mandalay Arch. Office. The Reverse has 8 lines of Pali in Mon script: — athā̄visati me buddha(bimba)kāri triyā̄ sambeṅ dānapati katā rāśio ca māṭucca puṇatthāya pitussa ca imīna puñaka mmena bhavadukkhappamāṇato sabbasatte pamocetum bu dhoh homi anāgāte

“The maker of the 28-Buddha-image — I, the donor, the Law-sambein, made them for the sake of the merit of king, mother and father. By means of this meritorious work, may all living beings be freed from the immeasurable evils of existence! May I be a Buddha hereafter!”

U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 44 (a, b), and pp. 32–33.

Neg. 1304 (1913–14).

(e) The Reverse of (d), showing 6 lines of the Pali inscription, incomplete at the top, and down most of the right edge, but reading as in (c) supra.

Neg. 1305 (1913–14).

Ref. U Mya, “Our Museum”, JBRSG Vol. IV, pp. 219–224, and Pl. IV, Fig. 1 (a, b). Includes Duroiselle’s notes and readings on pp. 222–4: “A fragment of a votive brick, broken diagonally, 5 in. × 4½ in.”
Plate 66

(f) The Reverse of a similar fragmentary tablet, marked ‘I 221, K = 8’, with 4 incomplete lines of Pali in Mon script:

\[ \text{i sambeñ = pintu ti nā|rena rājamatena..fiu|..aṭṭāvisati buddhānaṁ kā|...i.....} \]

“By the king’s minister named sambeñ Pintū (was made this image) of the 28 Buddhas…….”

Plate 66. Tablets at Pegu, Hsameikshé, Pagán, Myoma, etc.

(a) Rimless tablet squared at base; arching to a point at top. Provenance unknown. Now at Rangoon University Library. Border-beading at both sides up to peak. 5 rows of ETBs., all of one size: top row 3, with sprays of trees branching out behind, and a lotus flower sprouting at either end; 2nd row, 6 Buddhas; 3rd, 4th and 5th row, each 7 Buddhas. Total 30. Each Buddha sits on double lotus within bead-frame and abacus and shoulder-nimbus. At the base is a faint line of Old Mon:

\[ \ldots..\text{triley...} (28 \text{k ye}) \ldots. \]

Height 5 in. Breadth at base 3½ in. Thickness ½ in.
Phot. Tin Oo.

(b) Detail of last row of Buddhas and the line of Mon.
Phot. Tin Oo.

(c) Rimmed tablet, with rims broken at top and right side, slightly cutting the bottom right corner. Squared at base, arching to a point at top. Frame-line all around. Bodhi tree with branches and leaves in centre of top line up to peak. A Buddha on each side of the tree; and a stupa (with harmitā) and a Wheel (pellet with 8 beads around it) at either end. Below, there are 4 rows with 7 Buddhas in each. Total 30 ETBs, all of one size. Each sits between posts supporting a pointed ‘Saracenic’ arch, with a small stupa to right and left between the arches.
Now at Mandalay Arch. Office. No markings.
Height about 6 in. Breadth about 4½ in.

(d) Rimmed tablet (No. 102) in West gandhakuf Museum on platform of Pegu Shwemawdaw pagoda. Squared below, arching to a point at top. Beaded border at sides. Badly worn. 5 rows of ETBs, with one large Buddha in centre of 3rd and 4th rows. He is seated between pillars with abacus, trefoil arch, and umbrella, the square filled in with streamers at top and leafy sprays at the sides. The other Buddhas are all of one size: – top row, 5; 2nd row, 7; 3rd and 4th rows, 4; lowest row, 7. Total 28. There is a little stupa above the shoulders between each.
Height 6½ in. Breadth at base 4½ in. Thickness ½ in.

(e) U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 72 and p. 53.
Height 6 in. Breadth 4 in.
Rimmed tablet, marked XVI 4, now in Mandalay Arch. Office. Found in 1919-20 at Hsameikshé village near Thazi, Meiktila district. Squared on 3 sides, rising to a point at the top. Beaded border except at bottom, 6 rows of seated Buddhas; the largest in the centre of 4th and 5th row, seated on double lotus, between colonnettes with torus and capital, supporting a round ribbed arch with rays and stupa-finial. The single Buddha in the top row is similar but smaller. He is flanked on either side by 2 stupas, medium and small. The other Buddhas are all of one size, set in round-arched, shouldered frames. Top row: 1 Buddha; 2nd row, 6; 3rd row, 6; 4th and 5th rows, 4 each, with central Buddha; 6th row, 6. Total 28. At the base is 1 line of Old Burmese in high relief:

|| ṇā kā nirāpan liw so te

“As for me, I want Nirvana!”

(f) Fragment from the bottom right corner of a finely carved thick-rimmed tablet, marked I 224, found (1928-29) in Aung Hla’s field S.W. of Htilominlo. It shows a large central Buddha (headless) seated on leather mat and double lotus, touching Earth, between strong pillars with torus, capital and abacus. He sits doubtless in the centre (the left side is lost) of the bottom row of 2 or more rows of small ETBs, each with ‘flame’ uṣṇīsa, seated on mat in a beaded frame with abacus, under a round halo-arch. Beaded border at the sides. Below, there is a line of Pali in Mon script: –

....(t)i me buddhā rāja isvare nama

If we restore the first word (probably enough) as athavāsatī, we may translate: – “The 28 Buddhas (were made) by me. Honour to the Royal Lord’’! Note the Pali/Mon letters between the heads of the Buddhas.

Cf. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 110 and pp. 72-73, where a specimen is shown almost complete except for the bottom left corner.

Height, when complete, said to be 8 in; breadth at base 5½ in.

(g) Neg. 4513 (1940-41).
Ref. ASB 1941, Pl. III d and pp. 24-25.

santi nīrban luīw sū plū kra sūte

“Those who want the peace of Nirvāṇa have made (this plaque)”.

Plate 67. 28 Buddhas, each with 2 attendant Saints.

Text, p. 131.

(a) U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 108 and p. 71.
Height 10¼ in. Breadth 7½ in.
Phot. Tin Oo.

Large rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. Beaded border at sides, not at base. The tablet was obtained at Pagan (exact provenance unknown), and is now in Rangoon University Library. It presents the 28 Buddhas, all of one size, each seated on double lotus, touching Earth, in a round nimbus-shouldered archway. Each Buddha has, attendant on either side of him, a small Saint seated crosslegged on double lotus, hands in namaskāra mudrā. There are stupas above the heads of the Saints between the Buddhas. Above the central Buddha in the top row, there is an umbrella with pole, 4 fig-leaves, 2 stupas above between the Buddhas, and 2 stupas at the ends of the row. Thus the top row has 3 Buddhas, 6 saints, 2 stupas above and 2 at the ends. The 2nd row has 5 Buddhas and 10 Saints with 4 stupas above. The 3rd, 4th, 5th and 6th rows have each 5 Buddhas and 10 Saints, with 6 stupas above. Total 28 Buddhas, 56 saints, and 32 stupas. At the base there is 1 line in Mon script and (perhaps) Old Burmese language; but the reading suggested below is quite doubtful, and the sense obscure: –

. . . . (m)rây rwoi phurhã ph(l)e(c) liw pu(râh) ivvaõ iy phur(h)ã ta (nch)ip phlec so 78(8) . .

Possibly the word at the beginning is sãtmnumeñ. If so, it is probably followed by the name of the donor Mrây rwoi, who apparently wants to become a Buddha (but phlec looks more like phlen). Perhaps he concludes by mentioning the number of impressions he has made from “this Buddha-seal”. – All very doubtful.

(b) Detail of the final row, including the line of inscription.
Phot. Tin Oo.

(c, d) A similar tablet in two fragments, now at Mandalay Arch. Office. Also detail of the final row and line of inscription. No markings. Found at Pagan. There is also in the Office a fragment (not shewn here) from the bottom left corner of a similar tablet, without markings.

Plate 68. FORTY (ĀNANDA), FIFTY, SEVENTY, A HUNDRED EARTH-TOUCHING BUDDHAS
Text, p. 99.

(a) A rimmed tablet squared below, arching to a point above. Now in 4 fragments. Found in 1955–56 by Htwe Sein in a ruined pagoda N.E. of Upali Thein, Pagan, together with the broken Eight Scene tablet shown at Pl. 74 (a, b), an andagiu stone slab of the Eight Scenes (Pl. 404), and the bronze lotus shown at Pl. 426 infra.

The tablet shows 40 and more ETBs in 6 rows. It is not easy to say what the original number was, for at least 3 small or minute ones have been added along the left edge, and probably also along the right edge, now worn smooth. The top row has 3 normal-sized Buddhas, and 2 smaller ones (probably original) at the sides. The 2nd row has 5 of normal size, and 2 much smaller at the ends. The 4 remaining rows have each 7 of normal size, with minute ones added at the edges of the 3 lowest rows. Total 40 + 6 added (?). Each Buddha sits on double lotus in beaded frame with shouldered nimbus. There is a small stupa to left and right of each nimbus. Beaded border at the sides. At the base there is a faint line (and a half ?) of high relief writing in Mon script. – Obverse.

Height 6½ in. Breadth at base 5¾ in. Thickness ⅜ in.

(b) 2 lines of Pali inscription in Mon script on the Reverse of (a): –

‖ ānandattherena katam rûpaõ |lena buddho homi‖ o ‖

“(This) image was made by the therã Ānanda. Through it, may I become a Buddha!” Cf. Pl. 74 (b).

(c) Thin rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point at the top. Right side and top badly worn. Beaded border at the sides. The tablet is marked “29” in Burmese; provenance unknown. There are 8 rows of seated Buddhas, with a large one under a šikhar-arch in the centre of Rows 3, 4 and 5. Each of these rows has also 6 smaller Buddhas, 3 on each side of the large one. The 3 lowest rows have 8 Buddhas each. The 2nd row from the top may have 6, the top row 2 with stupas at either end. Total 51. But there is some doubt about the upper rows owing to the weathering of the surface. There seems to be a line of writing (in Mon script ?) at the base in high relief.
Height 5½ in. Breadth at base 3½ in. Thickness ¼ in.

Note. Col. Ba Shin reports the finding of similar 51 Buddha plaques under débris in Myé-bontha Payahla temple, Pagán. “A few of them are intact, and many in fragments. The line at the base is Old Burmese:—

සහ නාග නිරාපන ශ්‍රී (කාය) මෙ කුළු සෝ පේ
“As for me, I want the boon of Nirvāṇa”.

Height 5 in. Breadth at base 3½ in. Thickness ¾ in.

(d) Thin rimmed square tablet arching to a point at the top. There are 2 specimens at Mandalay Arch. Office, classed as ‘Miscellaneous’, provenance not stated. They appear to be identical with tablets excavated by Lu Pe Win at Tadágalé near Rangoon: see ASB 1939, Pl. I (c) and p. 6. Each shows 9 rows of tiny seated Buddhas, touching Earth within faintly lined arches. Top row 3, 2nd row 7, 3rd to 9th row 9 each. Total 73 Buddhas.

Height 4 in. Breadth 2½ in.

(e) U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 109 and p. 72.

Height 10½ in. Breadth 7½ in.

Large rimmed tablet, squared, but arching to a point at the top. No inscription nor modern marking. Now at Mandalay Arch. Office. Shows 10 rows of seated Buddhas, all of one size: top row 3, with stupa and inward-facing lion at either end. 2nd row 9, with small stupa at either end. 3rd to 10th row, 11 in each. Total 100 Buddhas. Each Buddha has a double-line nimbus.

(f) U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 107 and p. 71.

Height 9½ in. Breadth at base 5¾ in.

Plates 69 to 74. THE EIGHT SCENES (ATTHATHHANA).

Plate 69.

(a, b) Channa, Kanthaka, etc.

2 specimens of a small deep-rimmed tablet, (a) without marks, (b) marked “1103” on the back. Both probably come “from a ruined shrine E. of the Mingalazedi, N. of Myinkaba village”. The tablet is squared on three sides, and brought to a point at the top. In the centre is the Earth-touching Buddha in abacus-arch, with stupa and umbrella above him and bare branches. His double lotus throne is supported below by a crouching elephant facing front, and 2 vyālas facing outwards. There are 2 small stupas in the bottom corners; and between these and the vyālas kneels Channa the groom on the left, stands Kanthaka the faithful horse on the right. Above these, the Eight Scenes are arranged as shown:—
Mahāmāyā with right arm lifted suffices for the Nativity. The Buddha seated in pralambāsana, facing front, with almsbowl, represents the Pārīleyyaka scene, with the monkey (?) on the outer side. In the Parnirvāṇa the mourner at the head kneels, raising his right arm; the one on the right stands massaging the feet (?).

Height 4 in. Breadth 3½ in.

(c, d) 2 specimens of a very small rimless tablet, 2¾ in. high, 1½ in. broad. No marks. Squared on three sides, coming to a high point at the top. Probably had a beaded border. Both specimens damaged, especially at the bottom. In the centre sits the Earth-touching Buddha on double lotus under trefoil abacus-arch, with sikhara, stupa-finial, streamers and peepal sprays. A stupa on each side of the finial. Below the lotus seat is the growing stem on which it rests, with a seated or kneeling figure on each side. The Eight Scenes are arranged as shown: –

(f) Upper part of a finely carved little tablet, rimless, broken from the central Buddha’s waist downwards. It was probably squared at the base; it arches steeply to a pointed top. What remains is 2½+ in. high and 2 in. broad. It is a Pagan tablet, marked I 355. The central Buddha (probably touching Earth) sits between turned pillars supporting a strong trefoil arch, under umbrella and peepal sprays. The lowest tier of scenes is lost. The middle tier has a Buddha on each side seated crosslegged in dharmacakra mudrā in shouldered-nimbus frame. The upper tier has 2 standing Buddhas facing half-inwards: the Nālāgiri elephant scene on the left – the Buddha between two monks, with right hand raised before the body, and left hand hanging (possibly stroking the trunk of the elephant prostrate at his feet ?); the Descent from Tāvatiṃsa on the right, the Buddha between Indra and Brahmā (perhaps also Sāriputta kneeling to welcome him ?). In the apex is the Parinirvāṇa – the Buddha lying, head to the left, on beaded couch with beaded halo, his right hand propping his head, his left hand stretched along the body. Ānanda is at his feet, another mourner at his head. 3 (or 5 ?) poles support umbrellas high above the bier with 3 figures (or stupas ?) between them. At the corners below the bier sit or kneel two figures on either side, with hands raised.

Plate 70. Pagān Shwehsandaw and Śri Kṣetra. 5th scene (? Sujātā). Shā-hūck fragment.

(a) Two broken tablets, now at Mandalay Archaeological Office, both marked “I 112”, and found at Shwehsandaw pagoda, Pagān. Both have lost their lowest tier of scenes. The larger tablet, hereshown, is 4½+ in. high by 4½ in. broad. It was originally squared below and arching to a peak above, with beaded border at the sides. In the centre the Earth-touching Buddha sits on double lotus, between pellet pillars supporting abacus, round beaded arch, bead-edged floral śikhara, āmalaka finial and flying streamers. Peepal sprays behind. Of the lowest tier, only the Buddha’s head in halo-arch is visible on the left. The two Buddhas of the middle tier sit crosslegged on double lotus in dharmacakramudrā, indistinguishable, within their shoulder-nimbus. The two short standing Buddhas of the upper tier may be distinguished. Both droop their right arm, probably in varāda mudrā, and raise their left before the breast; but under the drooped hand on the left is the Nālāgiri elephant; under that on the right, the kneeling Sāriputta. No other figures are in attendance. At the top, head to left, the dying Master lies alone on beaded couch, his right hand on the pillow under his cheek his left stretched along the body. Behind him is a stupa between umbrella and flowers.
This plaque is a precious link between Pagan and Sri Ksetra, where very few fragments of the Eight Scenes have yet been traced. General de Beylié found, in the Lemyet-hna temple there, the top part of a tablet exactly like this one: see his L'Architecture Hindoue en Extrême-Orient (Paris, 1907), p. 245, fig. 198; Prome et Samara, Planche V, fig. 2. A better preserved specimen from Sri Ksetra, but still showing only the upper part of the tablet, is illustrated by Taw Sein Ko at ASI 1910, Pl. XLIX, fig. 7. In a footnote he says: “In 1906 a complete specimen from the same die was found”.

(b, c) Two fragmentary tablets found in the East Zegu temple at Sri Ksetra, and now at Mandalay Archaeological Office, which appear to come from the same die as the Pagan tablet, and enable us to complete it. (b) adds little but clarity to the picture. (c) shows the lowest row. Here the Pārileyyaka scene is on the left, and the Nativity on the right, and an extra scene is added in the centre – probably Sujātā’s offering of milk-rice. The Pārileyyaka is shown by the Buddha’s attitude: pralambānasana, almsbowl in lap. The Monkey is also shown on his tree between this and the centre panel. In the Nativity scene Māyā raises her right hand to hold the śāla bough, embraces Pajāpati’s neck with her left arm, and kicks the (unseen) tree with her left heel (a fertility-symbol for Yakṣinis in Indian art). The figure standing between Māyā and the centre panel is not, I think, the Babe taking his Seven Steps, but Sujātā, with hands in namaskāra muḍrā, approaching the Buddha.

(d) A complete specimen, except for broken rims, has recently been found at Sri Ksetra, some 300 yards W. of the Lemyet-hna. It is now (Col. Ba Shin tells me) in Shwe-hpōn-pwin’ pagoda library and museum, Prome town. It measures $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. high, $4\frac{3}{8}$ in. broad at the base, and $1\frac{7}{8}$ in. thick.

(e) A large thick tablet with deep rims, especially at the bottom. Marked “1375 (1936–37). Found in Hpo Saw’s field, S. of the Pawdawmu, S. of Myinkaba”, Pagan. All the main figures are in high relief, some almost in the round. These contrast (effectively, as in Old Mon sculpture at Pegu) with flat ‘lacework’ patterning and panelling of the background. As on the preceding tablet, 9 scenes instead of 8 are shewn, an extra one being added in the centre of the lowest tier. But here the arrangement is different: –

Pajāpati is missing from the Nativity. Māyā rests her left arm (with 4 bangles) on her thigh, and kicks the tree with her right heel. On the left, Indra is seen descending; and the Babe below is taking his first steps. In the centre Sujātā may possibly be seen in the inset panel on the left: the Buddha sits with almsbowl on left hand in the lap, and right hand on knee in varada mudrā. In the beaded panel between centre and right scenes, the elegant Monkey is seen approaching with his honeycomb. In the middle tier the Seated Buddha on the left has the Wheel on his pedestal: this fixes the scene as the First Sermon. The scene on the right, therefore, is the Great Miracle of Śāvatthī. Both Standing Buddhas droop their right hand (? in varadamudrā). The one on the right appears to have a figure crouched at his feet on the inner side: but I am not sure if it is Sāriputta or the Nālāgiri elephant. Several of the larger figures seem almost naked, as often in Andhra art. Note the beautiful tendril and leaf patterning around the āmalaka śikhara in the centre, and the wood-architecture panelling and decoration in the background of the lowest tier. Height 7½ in. Breadth at base 5½ in. Thickness at base 3 in. Cf. U Mya, V TB I, Pl. 50 and pp. 38–39.

(f) Bottom fragment of a similar tablet, marked on the back I 173, found at “Sha-htōk pagoda, W. of Sōmin-gyi pagoda (1929–30)”. Details of the lowest tier are clear. There may possibly be a line of Nāgāri (?) writing in high relief at the base. – Obverse.

(g) Reverse of (f), with the 2 final lines of an inscription in Old Mon: –

...... wo' or go' das | kyāk

“(As reward for) this (offering), may I be enabled to become a Buddha”. Note that these words occur on the reverses of the Śrī Bisannarāc and Yāsodharāh tablets (e.g. Pl. 27 e, supra), found at the same pagoda.

Plate 71. Mahāsālinī.

(a) The most perfect of the Eight Scene tablets yet found at Pagan. Recovered by U Mya from a ruined temple “in San Sha’s field S.E. of U Kywet’s monastery at the S. end of Myinpagan”. Here were also found the tablets with 10 seated Buddhas (see Pl. 64 b) made by Yasa (?). The Eight Scene tablets, says U Mya, “are duplicates of those found at a small ruined stupa near the Mingalazedi ... mentioned in p. 169 of [ASI] 1926–27; but some among the present lot are in a better state of preservation ... and the Nagari legend much clearer” (see ASI 1930–34, Part I, p. 186, and Part II, Pl. CV d). At the site near the Mingalazedi Duroiselle had found, not only the Eight Scene tablets, but also others with 31 figures of Buddhas and Bodhisattvas (see Pl. 11, Note). These last were signed by Aniruddha; and this fact no doubt influenced his first reading of the 2 lines of Nāgāri under the Eight Scenes: – “The inscription, which is partly in Pali and partly in Sanskrit, contains the usual Buddhist creed ye dhammā hetupabhavā etc., followed by the words dānapati śrī mahisyadevi, ... “the chief queen is the giver”. If my reading is correct, then from the style of the image, the characters of the inscription and the testimony of other tablets found at the same place and bearing the name of Aniruddhadeva, this lady must have been the queen of the great monarch” (ASI 1927, p. 169). U Mya shared this view in 1932 (loc. cit.), noting the “bold raised letters resembling very closely the type of letters used in one of king Anorahta’s plates” (see Pl. 6 a, b). But later he changed his mind, and now reads the name Mahāsālinī. Mon Bo Kay reads the 2 lines as follows: –

ye dhammā hetuprabhavā hetu(m) teṣā(m) tathāgato hyavadat = teṣāṇca yo | nirodha eva(m)vaḍi mahāsramanāḥ | dānapati śri mahāsā(linī)

He points out to me that this very fine Nāgarī lettering only occurs on 3 Pagan tablets: (i) Aniruddha’s single Buddha tablets found near the Seinnyet (Pl. 6 a, b); (ii) the heavily ornate Pwazaw tablets of Prince Śri Vallabh = Yasa (Pl. 38 a, b, c); (iii) these Eight Scene tablets of Mahāsālinī.

Was Mahāsālinī yet another title of the sarnheū Prince Yasa, the king’s favourite?

Our tablet is squared below and arches to a point at the top. There is a beaded border at the sides. The scenes are arranged as follows: –

Brahmā with umbrella. Stupa.
PARINIRVĀNA
(Worshipper) (Ānanda)

TAMING OF NĀLĀGIRI (āmalaka) DESCENT FROM TĀVATĪMSA

TOUCHING
PĀRILEYYAKA RETREAT NATIVITY
(pralambanāsana, sideways) BUDDHA (Babe) Māyā (Pajāpatī)
(elephant) (monkey)

[2 lines of fine Nāgarī Credo]

8 small stupas are dotted up and down and across the tablet. Note the fine Nāgarī gloss on the right of the Pārileyyaka scene. Mon Bo Kay reads it: – grahika vānarā “domesticated denizens of the forest”.

In the peak Brahmā (?) holds the umbrella over the dying Master. A stupa is on a stand behind the feet. The firmness of the central Buddha, his spreading throne, strong arch and pillars, measured roofs and lofty śikhara above him, are in fine contrast with the varied and flowing poses of most of the other figures.

Height 6½ in. Breadth at base 4½ in.
U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 13 (a, b) and pp. 16–17.
Ref. ASI 1915, Part I, Pl. XX (g) and p. 24. – This is the first showing of these tablets, but the find-spot at Pagān is not mentioned. ASI 1927, p. 169 (Duroiselle). ASI 1930–34, Part I, p. 186, and Part II, Pl. CV (d) (U Mya).

(b) Detail of the 2 lines of fine square Nāgarī at the base of a similar rimmed tablet (broken at the top) from the same site. It is marked I 117 (1931–32). For Mon Bo Kay’s reading, see supra.

(c) “Indian Museum, Calcutta. Negative No. 154/59. Locality Burma. Terracotta votive plaques 10316, 10317”. – The tablet on the left is a rimmed variety of (a). The tablet on the right is one of Aniruddha’s 5-figure tablets (cf. Pl. 8 a, b).
Plates 72, 73. Reverses with Old Mon inscriptions.

All the tablets (mostly Reverses) shown on these two plates have Obverses showing the Eight Scenes after the ‘Mahāsālini’ model (Pl. 71). They appear to come from the site E. of Mingalazedi, opened by Duroiselle in 1922 and 1926 (see Pl. 71 a). The cursive writings on the Reverses are all probably in Old Mon, though some contain the Burmese title mañ ‘prince’ (but see Pl. 72 d on this word). They generally appear to contain the names of donors. The writing is usually rough; and readings and translations given below are only provisional.

Plate 72.

(a) Lower right corner of a rimmed tablet (Obverse), showing part of the Nativity scene, and the 2 lines of Nāgarī at the base.

(b) The Reverse of (a), with 2 fragmentary lines of Mon (?): –

\[(\ldots) \ y(a) \ s \ \ldots \ \text{lā ma lā}\ldots\]

“This stamped by Ya S \ldots lā” (?)

(c) A Reverse marked I 222, “from a ruined shrine E. of Mingalazedi, N. of Myinkaba village”. 3 lines of Mon: –

\[\text{wo’ tra’ ley kyāk (nā | bjiŋju’}\]

“This is our Lord the Buddha of Nābiŋju” (?)

Height 6\frac{3}{4} in. Breadth at base $4\frac{1}{4}$ in. Thickness $1\frac{1}{2}$ in.

(d) Another Reverse marked I 222, from the same site. 3 lines: –

\[\text{mān cum | kow cāh | dho’}\]

The donor appears to have had an Old Burmese title mān cum, ‘Prince Perfect’.

(e) A Reverse marked Ja. 3 lines: –

\[\text{pay (mo)m | kon saŋ (.) | ghāy ma (kṣe)t}\]

“Impressed (? Mod. Mon khyat) by Pay (Mo)m, daughter of Saṅghāy”

Height 6\frac{5}{6} in. Breadth at base $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. Thickness $1$ in.

(f) A Reverse marked “Ja I 4 (1926). E. of Mingalazedi”, slightly damaged at top left shoulder. 2 lines: –

\[\text{(wo’) pāh | lāh “This (?) is Pāh Lāh”}\]

Height 5\frac{3}{4} in. Breadth at base $4\frac{3}{4}$ in. Thickness $1\frac{1}{8}$ in.

Plate 73.

(a) Reverse of a tablet broken down the middle, marked “Ja (1926). Pagán, E. of Mingalazedi”. 4 lines: –

\[\text{kyāk wo’ | tarley mahā | kas ma (lāt) | wo’ \ldots}\]

“This Buddha was stamped (?) by the Revd. Mahākas” [Mahākassapa].

(b) Lower part of a Reverse marked “I 148. From a ruined pagoda in Po Sein’s field N. of Myinkaba, E. (? N.E.) of Mingalazdi”. The 4 lines of Mon appear to be complete: –

\[\text{\ldots wo’ kyāk | ey ma kantan | phal wo’ nibbā | n paramargato \ldots}\]

“This Buddha was (hardened ?) by me. The fruit of this – (may it be) the most excellent Nirvāṇa!”
(c) Bottom right corner of a Reverse marked “1926. A. Pagán, E. of Mingalazedi”. 3 broken lines: –
  ... poy pu ... | ...... niko y mic | ...... kum
  “Our ..., Pu ..., desires also”.

(d) Top part of a Reverse marked “I 87. Pagan (1926). (E. of) Mingalazedi”. 4 lines of old cursive: – mān ’uñ | m(e)y khliy | ka’lan | phoṅ
  “Prince (?) ’Un Mey Khliy (and) the ka’lan Phoṅ”.
  Possibly mān ‘prince’ (the root meaning of which in Burmese is ‘old’), may here stand for aman, title of a minor official (cf., e.g., I.B., Pl. I 7 aman khuy mi in a list of witnesses, 542 s./1180 A.D.; or again amaṅga in Pl. 449 d infra). It seems here to be followed by an Old Burmese woman’s name ’Un Mey (or May) khliy (the last word, khliy ‘dung’, is not uncommon in names of women, averting the Evil Eye). If so, the donors here might be husband (a kaḷan official) and wife (an amaṅ).

(e) Lower half of a Reverse from “E. of Mingalazedi”. 3 lines of obscure writing; the third may possibly read: – maṅ = adhiphū

(f) Lower part of a squared tablet marked “1926. Pagan. (E. of) Mingalazedi”. 2 final lines of an inscription: –
  .......... (kla)n wān tā mbi bha ... – possibly the names of a kaḷan and his mother (mātā).

(g) A Reverse damaged down both sides, marked Ja. 3 lines, almost complete: –
  || wo’ p(o |n) = mom ma ph(a) r ||
  “This was ... by Poṅ = mom” (?).

(h) Bottom right corner of a Reverse. 2 lines: – ( ... ) pay lom ( ... ) maṅ ṇon
  – perhaps the names of donors, wife and husband.

(i) Bottom left corner of a Reverse. 2 lines of scribble (?) in more hands than one. One name appears to begin with maṅ.

Plate 74. Āṇandaṭhēra’s tablet. Attack of Māra’s army. Mon inscription on both faces.

(a) Rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. Now in 3 fragments (found); and 2 frag-
  by Htwe Sein in a ruined pagoda N.E. of Upali Thein, Pagán, together with the broken 40-Buddha tablet shown on Pl. 68 (a, b), the bronze lotus shown on Pl. 426 (infra), and the andagu stone slab of the Eight Scenes (Pl. 404). The design of the Eight Scene tablet is almost identical with that of Mahāśālīni’s tablet (Pl. 71 a): but the 2 lines of fine Nāgarī at the base are here missing, also the Nāgarī gloss on the Pārileyyaka scene. On the other hand, the bare background of the Mahāśālīni tablet is seen from this to be partly due to the wearing-off of surface detail, streamers, leafage, etc., here richly preserved owing to the greater depth of rim. – Obverse.

(b) 2 lines (slightly damaged at right shoulder) of Pali inscription in Mon script on Reverse of (a): –
  || āṇandaṭhērāna (ka) ... | tena buddho homi ||
  “(This image was made) by the thera Āṇanda. Through it, may I become a Buddha!” – The inscription is in the same wording and handwriting as those on the reverse of the 40-Buddha tablet found at the same spot (cf. Pl. 68 b). The thera Āṇanda, therefore, is the donor of both: very likely, also of the bronze lotus and andagu slab of the Eight Scenes found with them. Cf. U Mya, VTB I, Pl. 45 (a, b, c) and pp. 33–34. The reading on the reverse of U Mya’s specimen appears to be somewhat different from mine.

(c) Rimmed tablet, squared below, arching to a point above. Though not the same as the Ānanda/ Mahāsālīni tablets, the arrangement is similar. There is a faint line in Mon script at the base. This tablet is a little narrower and taller: height 6½ in., breadth at base 4½ in. The central Buddha’s throne is narrower (with chevron pattern on the recess). The arch above rises steeply without horizontal roofs. Stupas are added on each side of the śikhara. Side-figures, too, are taller. The Standing Buddhas on all three tablets have architectural frames crowned with stupas. On the two other tablets these tilt to suit the sway of the Buddha: but here the pose is vertical. On all three, Māyā rests her left hand on her hip, not on Pajāpati’s shoulder.

(d) Rimmed tablet, square up to the shoulders, brought to a low point at the top. Obtained at Pagan, but exact provenance unknown. Badly weathered. This type of plaque is rare, and in some respects unique. The arrangement of scenes is as follows: –

(Umbrella)

(6 lines)

The Old Mon inscription is hardly visible on this unbroken tablet, but is visible on fragments – see (e) infra. It appears to have been continued on the Reverse. The Nativity shows 3 figures of almost equal height. Māyā is in the centre, raising her right arm to the tree, resting her left on Pajāpati’s shoulder. The Babe, already wearing a mukuta, stands on his lotus, a waterpot between him and his mother. The Pārileyyaka scene shows only the Buddha seated on a carved stool with legs hanging, and a small elephant clambering up to fill the large almsbowl he holds in his hands. The First Sermon shows only the haloed Buddha seated with right hand raised to left shoulder, and left resting in the lap. In the Twin Miracle on the opposite side the 2 created Buddhas are clear by the side of Gotama. In the Descent from Tāvatimsa only one god attends on the left, with Sāriputta kneeling below him. In the Nālāgiri scene the two-headed elephant (charging and crouching) looks much more formidable than usual in Burma. His raised trunk (which normally can hardly reach the Buddha’s drooped hand) here is as high as the Buddha’s shoulder. The height of the arch above the central Earth-touching Buddha, is reduced in order to make room for an added scene: the attack of Māra’s army. Māra is seen directing them on the right. On the left the army is confined to three riders on elephants brandishing weapons. A comparison with the great Pāla stone slab of the Eight Scenes at Baragaon (Nālandā), makes the identification pretty certain: there too, in the top left corner, immediately below the Parinirvāṇa ledge, are elephant-riders brandishing weapons and advancing to the attack, with many monsters below them. The top of our tablet is filled with the long bed on which Gotama lies, shaded by a large umbrella, Ānanda kneeling in prayer at his feet. – Obverse.

Height 6½ in. Breadth 4 in.

(e) A fragment of a similar tablet, marked I 356 from Pagán, showing only the bottom tier of scenes. Here 6 short lines of Old Mon (?), hardly legible at the top, intervene between the Pārileyyaka and the Nativity scenes:

\ldots (\text{\textquoteleft}na | \ldots (\text{h}ya | \ldots (sa)\text{n} (u) \text{\textquoteleft}m(i)c | \text{dass | kom}
\]

Neg. 2442 (1923–24).

At present only the upper, bulbous part of the stupa is glazed. See Text, ch. XIII, pp. 258–9. Col. Ba Shin’s note on the top part is as follows: –

"This bulbous stupa is solid except at the top, where there is a large pit which, to all appearance, was left by treasure-hunters. On the average the pit is about 5 ft. 6 in. deep. Its shape is very uneven. It is neither oblong nor round. The top also is not level. By and large, the S. side is higher than the N. The bricks of the sides recede outwards to the top of the side. The maximum length from N. to S. is 9 ft. 7 in.; the maximum breadth from E. to W. is 8 ft. 8 in. There is an opening on the N. side, with a water-outlet below. This opening was repaired by the Archaeological Department. It is 3 ft. 1 in. wide, 5 ft. high and 8 ft. 10 in. long."
"I am of the opinion that when the stupa was intact, it was like other bulbous stupas, such as the Bu Paya and the one close to Mimalaung Kyaung on the N.W., perhaps with a ceti top. The hole left by the treasure-hunters may have brought about the collapse of the top part, leaving the pit to be repaired by the Archaeological Department."

See Text, Ch. XIII, pp. 260–2.

This great pagoda stands half a mile S. of the S.E. corner of Pagán city-wall. It was built by Aniruddha (c. 1060 A.D.? ) to enshrine the Buddha’s “Golden Hair-relic” presented, it is said, by the grateful king of Pegu. See Text, Ch. II, p. 27. The stone images of Hindu gods, sometimes placed back to back, which once guarded the corners of the terraces, may have given the pagoda its alternative name – ‘Mahā-peinnē’ (Pali Vināyaka), i.e. Gaṇeśa pagoda. It has five square terraces.

Height 135 ft. 6 in. Height from top terrace 62 ft. 8 in. Breadth of side at ground-level 156 ft., at top terrace 61 ft. 8 in.

The central Buddha, lacquered and gilded, seated in dhyānamudrā without reredos, measures 5½ ft. high above the pedestal, and 4 ft. 8 in. from knee to knee. Whether they date from the Pagan period, is questionable. See Text, p. 421.

(b, c) The building (c), marked B on the Site-plan (Pl. 83 b), is let into the W. wall of the enclosure, a little to the S. of the W. entrance-arch. It houses the SHINBIN-THALYAUNG, a colossal reclining-image (b) of the Buddha entering parinirvāna. Length of image 69 ft. 10 in. Breadth 10 ft. Height at shoulder 14 ft. 2 in. The Buddha lies (as usual in Burma sculpture), on his right side; but his head (contrary to the texts) is here towards the south.

(b) Photograph of the image by M. Lavaud.

See ASB 1915, pp. 4, 44. ASI 1930–34, Part I, p. 44.

(d) Also found near the site was this fine fragmentary Jātaka plaque, inscribed at the top. “... jat 108”, i.e. Bāhiya Jātaka No. 108, now at Pagān Museum.

Col. Ba Shin notes: - “The Museum records show that the fragment was found in the gu N. of Shwēsandaw pagoda on March 7th. 1955. It bears the number 4/188.” None of the extant Shwēsandaw Jātaka plaques have any writing on them. And this plaque is differently designed, thicker and larger than the others. We are convinced that it really belongs to the Hpetleik series (infra, Pls. 97–116).

Col. Ba Shin reports as follows: –

“The plaques are not glazed. They are rectangular, greater in breadth than height. The average for the complete plaque is: Height 10 in. Breadth 11½ in. Thickness ½ in. In most cases there is a low ledge at the base, leaving about 1½ in. at the bottom bare, probably intended for writing. But there is no writing on any of the plaques. Where there is no ledge, traces of it are still to be seen. ... I visited the pagoda to check the measurements of the pockets in which these plaques were originally fixed; and also to find out the total number of pockets with a view to ascertain if the pagoda had the whole series of 550 Jātakas. The pagoda was under repair, and it had been plastered and whitewashed down to the second terrace. I cannot say, therefore, whether the top three terraces of the five have pockets for plaques. Of the bottom two, only the lowest terrace has them. There are four recessions on each side of the central steps on each face. Each recession has room for seven plaques, and the part nearest the steps has room for 8. Thus on each side of the steps one can count 36 pockets (if intact), on each face 72, on all four faces 288. I found no plaque in situ. Three pockets, almost intact, on the N. face of the lowest terrace were measured: they are of the required size to hold the plaques now in Pagan Museum, including those with Old Burmese writing at the base."

The two plaques with Burmese writing, illustrating Vaṭṭaka Jātaka No. 35 and Kaṇha Jātaka No. 29, are clearly late intrusions (see Ch. XIII, n. 31). Also the plaque showing Bāhiya Jātaka No. 108, from the Hpetleik series (see Pl. 85 d). The plaque shown by Duroiselle at ASI 1913, Pl. LII (16) was not recovered by the Colonel; but he found all the other known ones, and many more. Eighteen, complete or fragmentary, are illustrated below. All are as photographed by Tin Oo except Pl. 86 b, f, i.

Plates 88, 89. IMAGES OF GANEŚA FOUND IN BURMA.

See Text, ch. XI, pp. 204–6.

Plate 88. (a, b, c). Negs. 3127, 3129, 3128 (1928–29).

Duroiselle discovered this image in a mound W. of Sōmin-gyi pagoda, S. of Myinpagan, “in the relic-chamber of a ruined temple, along with a Buddha head, and a terracotta votive tablet bearing effigies of the Buddha.” It is of stone, he says, height 6½ in. Ray corrects this: “The whole stele is only 6½ in., and the image itself 5½ in. in height; and the material is not stone but white cement-plaster.”

The elephant-headed god, crowned, large-eared, tusked, with third eye conspicuous in the centre of his forehead, sits in padmāsana against an arched backslab. He has four arms: the upper right hand holds the Hook (aṅkuśa), the upper left the Conch (saṅkha); the lower left supports the swollen belly; the lower right, holding the Rosary (aṃśamālā), is in the earth-touching attitude. Three animals are shown on three sides of the pedestal: (a) in front, a large rodent or

(d) Neg. 3919 (1936–37).

See Duroiselle, ASI 1937, p. 77. “A stone image of Gaṇeśa, height 4½ in.”, found in “a circular mound of bricks measuring 50 ft. in diameter at the base, with a height of 8 ft. in the centre, .... 2 furlongs N.W. of Köktheinnayon at Myinpagán.”

The elephant-headed god, crowned, large-eared, four-handed, sits in padmāsana on a low pedestal against a backslab. The upper right hand’s attribute is not clear. The upper left holds the Discus. The lower right rests on the knee in varadamudrā. The lower left is under the curling end of the trunk. Tusks are barely seen. There is no ‘pot-belly’.

(e) Neg. 3187 (1929–30).

See Duroiselle, ASI 1930, p. 158. “Found at a mound N. of the Taw-ya-gyaung, Myinpagán.”

“A stone image of Gaṇeśa, 8½ in. in height. Broken into two fragments, and found ... among the remains of a Buddhist temple. Four hands: right hanging down and holding a rosary; left bent and pressed against the abdomen. Other two hands are folded up, the right holding a hook, and the left a club. Mongoose carved on the front of the pedestal.” Large ears and belly. Short tusks. Backslab arching to a point.

(f) Neg. 1109 (1912–13).

Two badly weathered reliefs of Gaṇeśa, formerly at Pagan Museum. Provenance not stated. Now at Mandalay Archaeological Office. Both elephant-headed figures are shown seated against a backslab. Both wear crowns, and both have four arms, but details are indistinct. Both may have the form of a longish animal (query mongoose?) on the front face of their pedestals.

Plate 89.

(a) Neg. 3408 (1930–31).

Only the upper half, from the large belly upwards, is left. The elephant-headed god, with large ears and conical head (damaged), sits against a flat-arched backslab. He has four arms. The upper right holds the Wheel (cakra), the upper left the Fly-whisk (cāmara); the lower right holds a short weapon below the right shoulder, the lower left supports the belly.
(b, c) Two aspects of a small stone image of Gaṇeṣa, once stored at Kyanzittha Onhmin, Pagan, now at Mandalay Archaeological Office. Provenance not stated. It is marked No. 55.

Height 4\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Breadth at base 2\(\frac{1}{8}\) in. Thickness at base 1\(\frac{1}{8}\) in.

No backslab. The elephant-headed god sits in ardhaparyāṅkāsana, right knee half raised, left almost flat. He has bushy-curly hair, and probably a crown; little or no 'pot-belly'; large ears, long torso, and only two hands. The right hand is cupped below his short trunk, the left rests on the knee. A four-footed animal facing left, possibly a mongoose, is carved on the front of the pedestal.

Fragment (upper half) of a Gaṇeṣa relief on a thin slab of light-green rock-crystal. Provenance not stated. Now at Pagan Museum. Marked on the back "V. G.S."

Max. height 3\(\frac{1}{2}\) (+) in. Breadth 2\(\frac{3}{8}\) in.

The backslab arches flatly to a point. The crowned elephant-headed god, with square-cut ear-flaps, shoulders and round belly, is sitting. He had four hands originally, no doubt, but now the lower right is lost. The upper right holds a lotus-bud (or conch ?), the upper left the Hook. The lower left probably supports the belly below the end of the trunk.

(e) Small bronze image of Gaṇeṣa found by Col. Ba Shin in the Coin Cabinet at Mandalay Archaeological Office. Phot. Ba Shin.

The large-eared elephant-headed god has a high coiled jaṭāmukuta. He appears to be seated, but only the thighs remain. He had four arms, but three are broken at the elbow. The upper right hand, raised outwards from the elbow, appears to hold a fruit in the palm. No 'pot-belly'.

(f, g) Neg. 3262, 3263 (1929–30).

Two aspects of a tiny bronze image (1.7 in. in height), found in 1913 when Guthoñlôn temple at Kyauksauk (near Pagan) collapsed. It shows the elephant-headed god Gaṇeṣa back to back with Gāvamipati, both with hands covering their eyes. This curious image – thought to have been used in witchcraft – may date from the post-Pagan period. See Duroiselle, ASB 1913, p. 23; ASI 1930, p. 158 and Pl. XLI (d).

Note. Other images of Gaṇeṣa, reported but not illustrated, include the follg.: – At ASI 1930–34, Part I, p. 180, U Mya reported the finding, in a mound N. of the Tawya-aryaung, of a "small figure of a crowned and four-handed Gaṇeṣa in baked clay. It is seated cross-legged on a pedestal with a back. The two upper hands are raised, the right holding a ring or a cakra, and the left a club. The figure of a mongoose is carved in relief on the front side of the pedestal. Total height: 2 in."

On p. 67 of his Brahm. Gods. . . . (published in 1932), Dr. Ray mentions two rough images of Gaṇeṣa at "Rangoon Museum", measuring 1 ft. 4 in. × 1 ft. and 8 in. × 4 in. One had the elephant-head and the usual four arms, the other (apparently without the elephant-head ?) had six arms. Both had bulging bellies. He does not illustrate them. It seems that these two Gaṇeṣas in the old Phayre Museum at Rangoon are now lost. A six-armed Gaṇeṣa without the elephant-head would be, I think, unique in Burma. Note that one small Gaṇeṣa relief, probably from Lower Burma, was photographed at the Phayre Museum in a group by F. O. Oertel in 1892 (see his Note on a Tour in Burma in March and April 1892, Photograph No. 8, bottom left corner).

Plates 90, 91. IMAGES OF THE FAT MONK, FOUND IN BURMA.

See Text, Ch. XI, pp. 206–8.

Plate 90.

(a, b, c) Cf. Neg. 7649, 7650, 7651 (1957–58).

Max. height 4\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Breadth at base 2\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Thickness at base 2 in.

This stone statuette (3 aspects) is perhaps the oldest image of the Fat Monk in Burma. It was found, together with a four-faced gold image of the Buddhas, within a miniature stone stupa, within a laterite cone, in the relic-chamber of Kyaik Dé-ap (Bo-ta-htauang) pagoda, near the riverbank in East Rangoon. In the same relic-chamber a votive tablet was found, with the Pali ‘credo’ written in letters dating from about the 7th cent. A.D.

The monk sits in padmásana, both hands (with very long thumbs) clasped under his protuberant belly. His ears reach to the shoulders. His hair, cut level at the nape of the neck, smoothly covers his bowl-like head. He has large pouting lips, broad nose, almond eyes, and eyebrow-ridges joined. There is a large hole bored at the back of the waist, perhaps for insertion of a relic. He sits on a mat above a plain pedestal, without backslab. There are traces of lacquer and gilding on the image, but no evidence of robe.

(d) Neg. 4125 (1938–39).

“A fat-bellied figure of an arahat (4\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. \(\times\) 3 in. \(\times\) 1\(\frac{1}{2}\) in.) seated crosslegged on a lotus seat with hands. ... in dhyānamudrā.” Stone. Unearthed at Śrī Kṣetra by the Shwényaungbin-yo Abbot, near his monastery S. of Taunglönnyo village. – See Lu Pe Win, ASB 1939, pp. 9–10, and App. F, p. xii, No. 80.

This is one of a group of images (Arch. Neg. 4125) including bronze Buddhas standing or touching earth, and a small silver relic-casket, all found at the same site. The monk sits in padmásana. His mat rests on an unusual throne, with upturned lotus, leaf and bud, set between courses of beading. Beads also stud his forehead. His ears reach to the shoulders. His eyebrow-ridges join, with a round spot, resembling the ūrṇā, just above the point of junction. Robes are indicated by lines at neck, wrists and ankles.

Note. At ASB 1925, p. 16, there may be another mention of the Fat Monk found at Śrī Kṣetra. The site was near the W. citygate, Kinmunchón village. Duroiselle writes: – “On each side of the old city-gate ... were found two fragments of a stone image which, from the distended abdomen, probably resembled Jambbhala; these fragments. ... belonged to a period anterior to the XIth century A.D.” Ray (Sansk. Buddh., p. 47) approved of the identification “on account of the protruding abdomen and the elaborate ornaments.” – I have not seen the image, nor any photograph of it.

(e, f) Neg. 2199 (1920–21).

Gilded bronze statuette of the Fat Monk now at Mandalay Archaeological Office. Found in a ruined pagoda in Pakŏkku (see ASB 1922, p. 33; ASI 1929, p. 111), where Duroiselle took it to be the “Chinese Maitreya”. Height 6 in. Breadth 4\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Thickness 3 in.
Two aspects are shown, front and right side profile. The Monk sits in padmāsana, on indented mat and pedestal. He wears the monastic robe, with flap over left shoulder. His hair is in stylized curls. His ears reach the shoulders. His two large hands meet to support his belly.

Plate 91.

(a) Neg. 3108 (1928–29).

Terracotta image of the Fat Monk found in a mound in Aung Hla’s field S.W. of Htilominlo temple, Pagan. – See Duroiselle, ASI 1929, pp. 109–110 and Pl. LI (c). Found in a relic-chamber on one side of a brick image of the Buddha Vessabhū (our Pl. 409 c); on the other was another image, “probably its replica, in unbaked clay. The terracotta figure ... recalls similar ones found ... at Hmawza” [Śrī Kṣetra]. “These figures are seated in the vajrāsana, on a lotus, and their locked hands seem to sustain the weight of their abnormally big belly. The drapery is indicated by lines at the necks, ankles, and wrists.” Duroiselle considered the head shaven. It is certainly smooth and bowl-like; but there is a caplike projection above the forehead, which might indicate hair.

Note. In the same mound (p. 111) he found ‘a small headless stone image with a protuberant belly. Height 3 in.’; and in a neighbouring mound he found in a relic-chamber “a stone image with protuberant belly ... 8½ in. in height.” But his most remarkable find (ibid., not illustrated) was “a small terracotta votive tablet found on one of these mounds. Instead of the usual image of the Buddha, it bears in relief a small seated figure with a shaven head and protuberant belly. This cult appears to have been quite popular among the Buddhists of the 12th–13th century A.D.” See Text (p. 207, Ch. XI, n. 28) for a similar figure found by Dupont in Dvāravatī.

(b) Neg. 1873 – also (not shown) 1872, 1874 (1918–19) and 644 (1908–09).

Sandstone statuette of the Fat Monk seated in padmāsana on double lotus, with low forehead and hands meeting to support his large belly. Robes indicated only by lines at neck, wrists and shins. Found in the relic-chamber of the Sittana (Cāñcanā) stupa in the far south of Pagan. Height 8 in. Breadth at base 5½ in. Thickness 3 in. Now at Pagan Museum.

(c, d) Negs. 3143, 3144 (1928–29).

Front and back views of a stone image of the Fat Monk recovered from a mound on the E. side of Nyaunggwè (? Nyaunggôn) S. village, Mandalay. The monk, with puffed head as well as belly, sits in padmāsana on double lotus, his hands supporting his belly on either side of the navel. Robes indicated only by lines at neck and shins.

See ASI 1929, p. 110.
(e) Neg. 3388 (1930–31).

Bronze image of the Fat Monk recovered from the relic-chamber in a mound in the group of pagodas S. of Thiripyitsaya village Taw-ya-gyaung. See U Mya, ASI 1930–34, Part I, p. 181; he reported “a small seated figure with a ‘pot-belly’. Height \( 2\frac{3}{8} \) in.” Found in 1930–31 in a mound north of the Tawyagyaung.

The low-browed, large-eared, square-headed Monk sits with both hands interlocked below his ample paunch, his legs in padmásana dwindled to insignificance by the pomposity above. Indications of robe at neck vaguely visible. The throne he covers has a central band with lotus leaves vaguely outlined on either side of it.

Stone image of the Fat Monk smiling. Recovered from brick mound No. 1 in Maung Do’s field S.E. of Nagayón temple. Now at Mandalay Archaeological Office. Height 3\( \frac{1}{2} \) in. Breadth at base 2\( \frac{1}{8} \) in.

Smooth-headed, with ears touching his shoulders, he sits in padmásana, on his plain pedestal, his belly bulging, his hands in dhyāna mudrā below. Lines indicating the robe visible at the neck, wrists and shins.

(g) Sandstone image of the Fat Monk seated in padmásana on double lotus, with hands crossed under his belly. No smile. No indication of robe. Now at Pagan Museum. Height 5\( \frac{1}{2} \) in. Breadth 3\( \frac{3}{4} \) in. Thickness 2\( \frac{1}{8} \) in.

(h) Silver-gilt image of the Fat Monk in the W. gandhakuti museum on the platform of Shwemawdaw pagoda, Pegu. Date uncertain. Height of image itself 2\( \frac{1}{6} \) in. Height of throne 1\( \frac{7}{9} \) in. Breadth of front of throne 3 in. Breadth of image from knee to knee 2 in.

Phot. by U San Min of the Burma Army Education Directorate.

The Monk wears the robes of a Buddhist monk: right shoulder bare, flap over left shoulder, hems visible on the shins. He sits, right leg on left, hands on either side of the navel supporting his large belly. His hair is clustered in conventional curls. His mat rests on a flowered bronze lotus-throne, with jewelled pedestal, but this perhaps is not co-aeval with the image.

In the same museum there is also a soft light white stone image (No. 419) of the Fat Monk, perhaps of late date, seated right leg on left, with large hands hugging his belly. Height 2\( \frac{7}{8} \) in. Breadth 2\( \frac{1}{16} \) in. Thickness at base 1\( \frac{3}{10} \) in.

Note. A number of other images of the Fat Monk have been reported at Pagan. Thus in 1931–32 (see ASI 1930–34, Part I, p. 186), excavating a mound in a field S.E. of U Kywet’s monastery at the S. end of Myinpagan, U Mya found “a headless image of a pot-bellied saint in burnt clay.” In a mound near Öktama pagoda (ibid., p. 187), he found “a pot-bellied saint in stone. Height 3 in.” At “the round stupa on the S.E.” of Kyazin temple (ibid., p. 189), he found “a headless figure of a saint with pot-belly.” In a small mound “a few hundred yards to the S.E. of the Nagayón temple,” he found (ibid., p. 190) “a small figure of a pot-bellied saint made of plaster. Height: nearly 3\( \frac{1}{4} \) in.” At Part II, Pl. CXI (c, d), he illustrates two images of the Fat Monk, stone and bronze, found by a villager in a ruined shrine in Pyézu Quarter, Pagán. The latter has a Burmese legend dated 1602 A.D. (ibid., Part I, pp. 194–5).

LOKANANDA ZEDI OF ANIRUDDHA, AND THE FOOTPRINT.

See Text, Ch. XIII, p. 260; Ch. VIII, p. 147.

(a) View of the pagoda from the S.E.

Neg. 5489 (1953–54).

Total height 85 ft. 10 in. From ‘plantain bud’ to base of anda 60 ft. 10 in. From base of anda to pagoda platform 25 ft. Circumference of lowest rim of anda 146 ft.

(b) Left Footprint of the Buddha.

A broken stone slab, originally from Lokananda Zedi, now at Pagán Museum, in three fragments, not complete. One piece in the left centre, part of the heel, and two of the toes are lost.

Neg. 3552 (1932–33). Max. length 54 (+) in. Full breadth 29½ in.

This is probably the oldest ‘Footprint’ in Burma. See U Mya’s learned “Note on the Buddha’s Footprints in Burma”, ASI 1930–34, Part II, pp. 320–331 and Pl. CLIII (a): – “The Lokananda Footprint was carved on a slab of hard sandstone of very close grain. It was found in three fragments and in a damaged condition. But many of the marks on it are still in a fairly good state of preservation . . . The Shwezigon Footprint” [our Pl. 93 a] was also carved on a similar slab of stone, and it measures 3 ft. by 1 ft. 4 in. In both these prints the marks on the toes are delineated by whorls of circles and curved lines, and there are on the sole of each many marks in small panels arranged in rows, the wheel mark being placed near the centre.” U Mya continues with a detailed comparison and discussion of the 108 auspicious marks, which “follow very closely the lists as given in the Jīnālankāra-ṭīkā and the Anāgatavamsa-ṭīkhaṅkhathā, which may on stylistic grounds be placed in the 8th–11th century A.D.”

There is another fragmentary stone Footprint at Pagán Museum, different from this one and later in date, but also said to come from Lokananda pagoda (see Arch. Neg. 3545 of 1932–33). The total length is 5 ft. 3 in.; the maximum breadth 2 ft. 8 in. Here 5 conch-shells simulate the toes, and the whole is guarded by two Nāgas with intertwisted heads and tails.

Plate 93.

OTHER FOOTPRINTS OF THE BUDDHA.

(a) Neg. 3553 (1932–33). Right Footprint in stone. One of the two still in situ in the ‘tazaung’ N.E. of the N. gandhakuti on the platform of Shwezigon pagoda, Pagán (marked G on Site-Plan, infra, Pl. 170 b). The right foot is on the side nearest to the gandhakuti. Each foot measures 2 ft. 11½ in. long, and is 1 ft. 4 in. broad at the toes.

(b) Neg. 3557 (1932–33). Left Footprint, as painted in Loka-hetik-pan temple (Pls. 351 to 356), one of the two painted on the soffit of the ceiling of the Hall. The Footprints point S. towards the main image. So this should be the one on the East. Length 2 ft. 11 in. Breadth at toes 1 ft. 5½ in.
(c) Neg. 3556 (1932–33). Right Footprint, as painted in Theinmazi temple, on the W. side of the lane from Thatbyinnyu to Myinkaba, N. of Kubyauk-ngè. The temple is Early Burmese in style. This Footprint is one of two (the W. side one), painted on the soffit of the ceiling in the N. Hall. Length 2 ft. 6 in. Breadth at toes 1 ft. 3 in.

For all these Footprints, consult U Mya’s “Note” mentioned above (Pl. 92 b).

Plate 95. Details of W. Hpetleik.
(a) Top after repairs. Note the ferro-concrete roof substituted for the original vaulting over the corridor.
(b) Archaic terracotta tablets, with tenons, embedded in the image-niche on the N. side of the pagoda (the original frontage).

(c) Three others, deep-set in their squared rims, may be seen at Pagan Museum.

   Height 10½ in. Breadth 6 in. Length of tenon + plaque 12½ in.

(d) One of the 3 tablets at Pagan Museum, showing the Buddha standing between 3 tiers of worshippers and stupas (?), with both his large hands raised in vitarkamudrā.

   Cf. Taw Sein Ko, ASI 1907, Pl. L (d), and p. 127. Also our comment on his view at Ch. XIII, n. 37.

(e) Neg. 446 (1906–07). Cf. I.B., Pl. III 305 (b). ASI 1907, Pl. L (e). Fragment of Old Mon inscription found in the débris. The find-spot is marked (5) on the Plan (Pl. 94 b), in the N.E. corner. The inscription is discussed at Ch. VI, p. 105.

HPETLEIK TERRACOTTA PLAQUES.

The plaques are roughly square: height generally 15 in.; breadth rather less, 14 to 14½ in.; thickness 3¼ in. But there is a good deal of variation. In the notices given below, the text of the writing on each plaque (its Pali name and number) is first given. Then the corresponding name and number in the Sinhalese recension as printed in Fausböll and Cowell, where the story may be read at length. Then the location of the plaques on the pagodas. Where two plaques of the same Jātaka are visible on the two pagodas, we often locate both, in order to facilitate comparison. References to illustrations of the same plaque in ASI (the articles of Taw Sein Ko and Duroiselle cited above) and Negative numbers of photographs in the Burma Archaeological Department, are added. Our own illustrations, unless otherwise stated, are based on excellent photographs taken recently by Saya Tin Oo. Exceptions are usually where the plaque, as it is today, shows loss or deterioration from what it was when originally unearthed. Exposure to air has tended to coarsen the features. To realize the delicacy of their original carving, it is well to consult the oldest reproductions.

EAST HPETLEIK HELL-SCENES.

Text, Ch. XIII, p. 265. The scenes, often fragmentary, number over a dozen. All are on terracotta plaques on the outer side of the West Corridor – the original front of East Hpetleik – set in both tiers, on either side of the steps of entry. On entering, the visitor might miss them. But as he descended, they were bound to catch his eye. A few of the Hells are still identified by a gloss engraved across the top of the plaque. The handwriting is identical with that of the main Jātaka series. All the photographs of these scenes were taken by Tin Oo. Several of these Hells are described in Nimi Jātaka, No. 541 (see E. B. Cowell’s translation, Vol. VI, pp. 58–61).

Plate 117.

(a) “Saṅkhāmaṇḍika Hell”.
   E. Hp., W. corridor, outer side, lower tier, 4th plaque N. of the central steps.
   The term is defined in the Pali Text Society’s dictionary as “shell-tonsure, a kind of torture.” The scene shows a demon decapitating a man, while another demon with an enormous ‘mamootie’ splits his skull.
Plate 118–120

(b) E. Hp., W. corridor, outer side, lower tier, 2nd plaque N. of the central steps.

No writing. The scene shows a vertical rain of spears and iron spear-heads falling upon three fleeing-falling women, who raise their hands as if to protect their heads.

(c) E. Hp., W. corridor, outer side, upper tier, 1st plaque N. of the central steps.

(d) "'Sunakha nirayaṁ 'ī,' 'Dogs' Hell'.

E. Hp., W. corridor, outer side, lower tier, 1st plaque N. of the central steps.

Little remains but the title of the Hell, written above. According to Malalasekera (Dictionary of Pāli Proper Names, Vol. II, p. 1207), Sunakha Niraya is one of the "Great Hells". Possibly (but this is quite doubtful) the scene shows figures falling under an avalanche of earth.

Plate 118.

(a) E. Hp., W. corridor, outer side, lower tier, 1st plaque S. of central steps.

No writing. The large square central panel shows 3 slim women kneeling in the flames. The middle one is in prayer, the other two have hands locked above their heads. 16 small squares enclose the central panel. They show human figures each crouched in his separate dungeon.

(b) E. Hp., W. corridor, outer side, upper tier, 2nd plaque N. of central steps.

No writing. Left side mostly lost. A rain of weapons is descending on this side, with two or more figures bearing the brunt of it. On the right, a running demon is pushing another man under the rain, holding him by the hairknot.

(c) "'Tūlākūṭa nirayaṁ ', 'False weights Hell'.

E. Hp., W. corridor, outer side, lower tier, 3rd plaque N. of central steps. Almost obliterated, the plaque seems to show some figures falling.

(d) E. Hp., W. corridor, outer side, upper tier, 2nd plaque S. of central steps.

Top half lost. The lower half shows 3 large claymores below, and dismembered human heads, arms, limbs and wheels (?) above.

Grateful acknowledgements are due to Dacca Museum authorities for permission to publish. In his letter to Mr. Griswold, the Assistant Curator of the Museum, Dr. Enamul Haque, courteously supplies the following information about the door-jamb:

“It was reported to have been found in the ruins of Bangarh, a provincial capital of ancient times (in that part of Dinajpur which is now in West Bengal, India). At the end of the 18th century A.D. it was carried therefrom to the palace of the Maharaja of Dinajpur (now in East Pakistan). It was transferred to Dacca Museum in 1963. On stylistic grounds the date may be assigned to 10th–11th century A.D.”

Note. The above stone sculptures are mostly shattered – probably the result of earthquake. All the niches, said Forchhammer in 1891, “appeared to have contained stone sculptures; most of them have, however, been thrown out of the niches, and lie in wild confusion on the floor, or are buried in the débris of the ceiling, which has given way in some places” (Reprint, p. 10).

Plate 147. Details of the main image-recess and niches.

(a) Stone relief of the four-armed Viṣṇu borne by Garuḍa. This stone image of Viṣṇu on Garuḍa was found, both by Crawfurd (1826) and Phayre (1855), lying neglected on the floor of the temple. It was removed, perhaps by Noetling about 1891, to the Berlin Museum für Völkerkunde, where, as Duroiselle says, it was “reproduced and carefully described by Grünwedel” (see Veröffentlichungen aus dem Königlichen Museum für Völkerkunde V Band. 4 Skulpturen aus Pagan, Berlin, Dietrich Reimer, 1897). Duroiselle’s print (Pl. LXXX c of his article), as well as our own, are taken from Grünwedel’s work.
(b, c) Above the capitals of the pillar-niches, on each side of the pedimented arch framing the recess, are two deep niches for images. The empty one on the right (we think provisionally with Phayre) originally housed the stone Viṣṇu (a), now in Berlin. The one on the left (the S. side) still holds the "figure riding on a bird", which Phayre could see but dimly in the gloom. It is made of brick and plaster, and shows the four-armed Viṣṇu seated in padmāsana on a single lotus, borne on the back of a beaked and winged Garuḍa. Viṣṇu's hands appear to hold their usual attributes: cakra (top right), conch (top left), emblic myrobalan fruit (?), lower right), and dagger or mace (lower left). Photographed from below – see (b), Neg. 1083 of 1912–13, the god's jaṭāmukuta is reduced to the size of an usṇīṣa; which led Duroiselle to identify it with Viṣṇu's Buddha Avatāra. Our photograph (c), taken from the same level as the image, shows that this theory is, to say the least, improbable. See ASI 1913, Pl. LXXIX (f) and pp. 138–9.

(e) Ten intertwined tails of Śeṣa, the Ananta serpent, still left on the right side of the main image-recess, about 7 ft. above the cement floor. This is all that remains of the main Anantaśayin image of the temple, apart from the traces of the Hindu Trinity above.

First noted, identified, and photographed by Col. Ba Shin.

Plate 148. 3 brick images of Viṣṇu. Stone images of Śiva and Sūrya.

(a, b, c) On the S., W., and N. faces of the central mass, set in shallow niches, are lifesize brick images of the standing four-armed Viṣṇu. They were once, perhaps, the most beautiful brick images in Pagan. But all three are now headless and mutilated. The image on the S. face seems to hold at least 3 of the usual attributes: cakra, śaṅkha and gadā.

(a) the image against the S. face.

Neg. 1079 (1912–13). Cf. ASI 1913, Pl. LXXX (a) and p. 138.

(b) the image against the W. face.

(c) the image against the N. face. Around this image were painted about 16 large panels (8 on each side), showing seated haloed figures, with shoulder-gnomons. There were probably similar paintings on the W. face; possibly also on the south.

(d) Stone image of the standing four-armed Śiva.

This image, too, was found by Crawfurd (1826) and Phayre (1855) lying on the floor of this temple. It now stands, repaired, on the E. side of the N. door of Pagan Museum. For a photograph of this image before repair, see V. C. Scott O'Connor, Mandalay and other cities of the past in Burma (London, 1907), p. 273. For a description of this image and comments by Duroiselle and Dr. Ray, see ASB 1913, p. 19 and Pl. II (f). ASI 1913, p. 139. Ray, Brahm. Gods..., pp. 59–60, 91 and Pl. XVI 21.

(a) Kāṇḍadevala’s prophecy. – Outer wall of S. corridor, 5th panel, E. of 2nd window-embrasure, W. of the Nativity panel. Neg. 3565 (1932–33).
Length 48½ in. Height 45 in. Height above floor nearly 4 ft.
Underline in Old Mon: –

1 wo’ kāl kāṇḍadevalā liōr bodhisat tirley byādes sdas kyek 1 1
“This is when the hermit Kāṇḍadevala [Asita] worships the Lord Bodhisattva, and prophesies that he will become a Buddha.”

See U Mya, ASI 1930–34, Part II, Pl. CIX (a), and Part I, p. 192: – “The figure at the right corner, somewhat defaced, probably represents the old rishi’s nephew Nālaka, who afterwards took up, at his uncle’s advice, the life of a Śramaṇa” ... Cf. Text, Ch. IX, p. 159.

(b) Twin Miracle at Kapilavatthu. – S. recess of Shrine, E. wall, on the E. side of the S. window, about 10 ft. S.E. of the Buddha’s throne. Neg. 3566 (1932–33). Length 65 in. Breadth 28½ in. Base of panel 6 ft. 9 in. above the floor. The Old Mon underline is fragmentary: –

1 o 1 wo’ kāl kyāk buddha tirla’ poy...... ē(h)........ (smina suddhoda)na ku kar’ko(m)
smina sākyawānsa guñāliṅ 1 1
“This is when our Lord the Buddha...... he...... king Suddhodana and the assemblage of all the princes of the Sākyan family.”

See U Mya, ASI 1930–34, Part II, Pl. CIX (b), and Part I, p. 192: – “He is exhibiting the yamaka pāṭihāriya to curb the pride of his kinsmen. Here again the Sakyas, Buddha’s kinsmen, are seen clad in cloaks with geometrical pattern covering the whole body.”

Cf. Text, Ch. IX, p. 175. This is not the Great Miracle of Savatthi, but the Twin Miracle as performed by the Buddha on his return to Kapilavatthu in the year after his Enlightenment. On this occasion he preached the Vessantara Jātaka.

See Text, Ch. IV, pp. 57–59.

A-A on Site-Plan (Pl. 170 b). This is the most important extant inscription in Old Mon. Though not the longest, it is the clearest and the most complete. The late Dr. C. O. Blagden’s editing of it, in Epigraphia Birmanica Vol. I, Part II, No. 1, pp. 90–129, is the chief basis of our knowledge of the old language. The 8 faces on the 2 pillars are numbered A to H. An incomplete, and now fragmentary, duplicate was kept by Kyanzittha at his new palace at Pagan. Measurements. Pillar I (S. of the E. approach). Height 9 ft. Breadth of top line: 2 ft. 1¼ in. (E. face). 2 ft. 5½ in. (N. face).

Pillar II (N. of the E. approach). Height 8 ft. 2 in. Breadth of top line 2 ft. 2¼ in. (E. face). 2 ft. 1 in. (N. face).

Plate 176. Images of Spirits.

See Text, Ch. XIII, pp. 275–276.

(a, b) Standing image in gilded wood of the Bo-bo-gyi Nat, i.e. Indra, king of the Sakrā Devas (two aspects). He stands facing W., in the E. shrine of the building housing the 37 Nats (or Lords, Pali nātha), within the outer enclosure-wall, between the E. entrance and S.E. corner (E on Site-Plan). Total height, from feet to top of diadem: 8 ft. 8 in.

(c, d) Gilded stone images of two sea-spirits, the Nats Shwe Zāga and Shwe Myo-zin, son and father, seated in ardhaparyankāsana in a special shrine near the S.W. corner of the pagoda platform (F on Site-Plan). The son is shown above, the father below. They are commonly called Aḥpa-htet-thá-tú-la-gyi, “Son, one month older than the Father”. For the story, see Text, Ch. XIII, pp. 275–6.

(e, f) Standing stone images, ten-armed, of Dvārapālas at the S. entrance (W. and E. sides) of the enclosure-wall (H-H on Site-Plan).
See Text, Ch. XIII, p. 276.

There are 10 niches for images; only one now vacant. The rest hold sculptures of some of the principal scenes in the Buddha’s life, intended mainly perhaps for educational purposes. The Conception and the Parinirvāṇa sculptures are, as usual, broader than the others. But the average size of the many stone reliefs in this temple (most of which contain predellas, which fix the scene) are as follows: – Height 3 ft. 11 in. Breadth at base 1 ft. 8 in. Height of predella 4\frac{3}{4} in. All but one are as photographed by Tin Oo.

Plates 219 to 223. – 18 Tondoes, on W., E., and S. inner walls of Corridor:
   See Text; Ch. XI, pp. 222–227; Ch. XVI, p. 326.
   There are 7 Tondoes each on the W. and E. walls: their 14 deities all moving N., as if to pay their respects to the main Buddha in his Shrine. On the S. wall there are 4 Tondoes, 2 on each side: their 4 deities turning inwards towards the Buddha in the central Śikhara-niche (now empty). The diameter of each full tondo is about 14 in., plus 3½ in., of border. The 6 set against the corner-pilasters lose about ⅓ of their perimeter.

See Text, Ch. XVI, pp. 327 ff.
The total height of painted wall-surface is about 14½ ft. The section chosen by the artist of the Burma Arch. Survey is on the S. side of the Corridor, between the central and the W. window, on either side of the medial niche. It omits only the flaked floral bands at the bottom, about 3 ft. 2 in. in height. The drawing gives an excellent idea of the planning of this whole outer wall: viz. the Ascent to Buddhahood (Tantric-Mahāyānist), in 5 stages.
As 'second subject' to this "Great Career", the beauty of the "Lower Career" seems symbolized by the richly storeyed Stupas framing the lower medial arches, and the Gandharvas/Apsarasas bringing their music thither. Above the upper arches, it is seen, they transfer their music from the Stupa to the new Buddha in the full height of his attainment.
Plates 228, 229. 1st (Lowest) Tier. Bodhisattvas seated in arāhaparyāyaṅkāsana.

See Text, Ch. XVI, p. 328.

Originally 38 of these Bodhisattvas were painted along this lowest tier, 10 on each face except the North, the side of entrance, where there were only 8. About 35 remain. Height of panels 2 ft. 2½ in. Breadth 1 ft. 7½ in.

Plate 230. 2nd Tier. Bodhisattvas seated in lalitāsana on lotus, between worshipping Devas.

See Text, Ch. XVI, pp. 328–9.

Some 40 'royal Bodhisattvas' are painted along this 2nd Tier, 10 on each wall. About 36 survive. They sit weaponless, like Lokanātha, in pose of royal pastime, hands generally in varada mudrā, though abhaya, dharmacakra and perhaps other mudrās occur. Set between arch-spandrels, they now have room to admit worshippers.

Height (much the same as the 1st Tier) 2 ft. 2½ in. Breadth 1 ft. 10½ in.

(a) N. wall, No. 10, near N.E. corner. Phot. of coloured drawing (Arch. Surv.).
   Seated Lokanātha pose (varada mudrā, with climbing half-blown lotus).
(b) W. wall, perhaps No. 3 from S.W. corner.
   [phot. Tin Oo]
(c) E. wall, No. 4 from N.E. corner. Outline copy.
   Seated Lokanātha pose, but lotus full-blown.
(d) S. wall, No. 3 from S.W. corner. Outline copy (Devas omitted).
   Lokanātha pose. Lotus half-blown. The Book (?) above the lotus was not noticed by Col. Ba Shin. Perhaps this is the best preserved painting in this tier, especially for ornaments and clothes: wristlet-gauntlets studded with pearls; triangular armlets of gold and pearl; grey and gold double epaulettes; 3 pearl necklaces below golden torque; no anklets or boots; striped loincloth, white, brown and blue, with vertical band over the loins. Double lotus-seat, with 4 tiers of overlapping petals.

(e) S. wall, No. 4 from S.E. corner. Outline copy.
Lokanātha pose. Lotus half-faded.

Plates 231 to 237. 3rd Tier. Caves.

See Text, Ch. XVI, pp. 329–344.

This Cave-Tier runs continuous, binding all four walls. The panels are small: about 13\frac{1}{2} in. high (excluding the 4\frac{1}{2} in. floral band above them), and 11\frac{3}{4} in. in breadth. There are about 30 panels each on the E., S., and W. walls, and probably more on the N. – about 128 altogether, of which 109 are still more or less visible. They appear to present (not always in chronological order) a number of different episodes, from Jātakas and other Indian folklore, especially relating to Hermits; but Buddhas, Bodhisattvas, Tārās, and especially Tāntric deities appear, and perhaps the birds and animals that stand or perch on the cave-tops may be significant. A serial list of the Caves, including these lāñchana, is given in the Appendix to Ch. XVI, based on a careful study made by Col. Ba Shin. Our illustrations include 49 outline copies, 1 direct photograph, and 5 photographs of coloured copies. Note that the outline copies, beautifully made by the Burma Archaeological Survey, often omit the lāñchana shown on top of the Caves. And where the picture is faint or damaged, there is room for difference of opinion about the details.

Plate 231. Caves (i). 9 outline-copies.

(a) N. wall, Cave No. 5 (5th E. of entrance-arch).
Lāñchanas omitted (see Appendix to Ch. XVI, List 5). The Monk’s attitude is shown as vitarkamudrā. Ba Shin calls its dharmacakra.

(b) N. wall, Cave No. 8 (4th from N.E. corner).
Lāñchanas omitted (see Appendix, List 8). Ba Shin adds another Monkey, weeping (?), with left hand on forehead, seated below the dying Hermit’s elbow.

(c) N. wall, Cave No. 9 (3rd from N.E. corner).
Lāñchanas indistinct. Ba Shin adds a Monkey in front (to left) of the elder boy, kneeling in namaskāra mudrā.

(d) E. wall, Cave No. 13 (2nd from N.E. corner).
Lāñchanas omitted. See List 13.

(e) E. wall, Cave No. 16 (5th from N.E. corner).
Lāñchanas omitted (see List 16).

(f) E. wall, Cave No. 17 (6th from N.E. corner).
Lāñchanas omitted (see List 17).

(g) E. wall, Cave No. 20 (9th from N.E. corner).
Lāñchanas omitted (see List 20). Tārā dark brown, six-armed.

See ASI 1930–34, Part II, Pl. CII (c), and Part I, p. 82.

\textbf{Plate 232. Caves (ii).} 9 outline-copies.

\textbf{(a)} E. wall, Cave No. 34 (8th S. of central window).
Lāṇḍhanas omitted (see List 34). Note headdress of the hermit, \textit{Vaccha}. He is refusing the \textit{Kinnari}'s request.

\textbf{(b)} E. wall, Cave No. 36 (10th S. of central window).
Lāṇḍhanas omitted (see List 36). Note \textit{Vaccha}'s ‘two-horned’ headdress. He is accepting the \textit{Kinnari}'s proposal.

\textbf{(c)} E. wall, Cave No. 37 (11th S. of central window).

Lāṇḍhanas omitted (see List 38). \textit{Vaccha} kills the Spider. His left hand appears to hold a second stick. Cf. \textit{ASI} 1930–34, Part II, Pl. CIII (a).

\textbf{(e)} E. wall, Cave No. 39 (13th S. of central window, 1st N. of S. window).
No lāṇḍhanas visible. 3 \textit{Kinnari} facing left in \textit{mantramudrā}. Cf. \textit{ASI} 1930–34, Part II, Pl. CII (d).

\textbf{(f)} S. wall, Cave No. 42 (nearest to S.E. corner).

\textbf{(g)} S. wall, Cave No. 45 (4th from S.E. corner).
Lāṇḍhanas omitted (see List 45). Lion crouched in cave, with reverted head.

\textbf{(h)} S. wall, Cave No. 46 (5th from S.E. corner).
Lāṇḍhanas omitted (see List 46). Hermit stroking deer.

\textbf{(i)} S. wall, Cave No. 48 (7th from S.E. corner).
Lāṇḍhanas omitted (see List 48). There is a snake on the left side of the roof, as well as the right. Four-armed \textit{Tārā} seated in \textit{lalitāsana}.

\textbf{Plate 233. Caves (iii).} 9 outline-copies.

\textbf{(a)} S. wall, Cave No. 49 (8th from S.E. corner).

\textbf{(b)} S. wall, Cave No. 50 (9th from S.E. corner).
Lāṇḍhanas omitted (see List 50). Appears to be part of the story of \textit{Vaccha} and the Spider – the negociation via a human go-between. Ba Shin is doubtful whether the figures on the sides of the Cave are spiders, or merely decorative designs.

(c) S. wall, Cave No. 52 (5th E. of central window).
Lion couchant, facing right. Below him, a small animal, possibly a dog. Ba Shin cannot see the ‘spiders’ at the sides of the Cave, but notes a wriggling snake on the right side.

(d) S. wall, Cave No. 53 (4th E. of central window).

(e) S. wall, Cave No. 54 (3rd E. of central window).
Lāñčanās omitted (see List 54). Tāntric god, two-armed, seated in ardhaparyāṅkāsana, left knee raised. Cf. ASI 1930–34, Part II, Pl. CIII (d).

(f) S. wall, Cave No. 56 (on E. side of central window).
Lāñcha on left side of roof omitted (see List 56); there is none on the right. Hermit with ‘single horn’ headdress, holding human face in right hand.

(g) S. wall, Cave No. 58 (2nd W. of central window).

(h) S. wall, Cave No. 59 (3rd W. of central window).
Śyāmā Tārā in black-spotted trousers, hands in dharmacakra mudrā, seated in lalitāsana. – Is this Mahāśrī Tārā?

(i) S. wall, Cave No. 60 (4th W. of central window).
In the left lāñchana, according to Ba Shin, besides the Pheasant, there is an Elephant-head facing outward with trunk rampant. Hermit with ‘two-horned’ headdress threatens (tarjānī mudrā) the Monkey seated facing him.

(a) S. wall, Cave No. 61 (5th W. of central window).
In the left lāñchana, according to Ba Shin, the Archer is shooting at a Stork in palm tree at the junction of the previous Cave. The seated Buddha wears a dark-brown robe.

(b) S. wall, Cave No. 62 (6th W. of central window).
In the right lāñchana, according to Ba Shin, the Elephant is double-headed. Seated Tāntric god, carrying woman (?) spreadeagled across his back. See Ray, Sansk. Buddhism……., p. 59.

(c) S. wall, Cave No. 63 (7th W. of central window).
Lāñchanās omitted (see List 63). Monk’s right hand is thought to be in tarjanī mudrā, threatening. The maned lion is muddy white in colour.

(d) S. wall, Cave No. 65 (9th W. of central window).
Lāñchanās omitted (see List 65). The four-armed Tāntric figure has tushes. His lower left hand holds a staff. Wriggling snakes on either side of the Cave.

(e) S. wall, Cave No. 66 (10th W. of central window).
The outer hands of both seated saints are in vitarka mudrā. The one on the left has his inner hand in mantramudrā. He is presumably the senior.

(f) S. wall, Cave No. 67 (3rd E. of W. window).
The six-armed Tāntric god, in his lowest left hand, holds an arrow, not a dagger.
Plate 235-236

(g) S. wall, Cave No. 68 (2nd E. of W. window).
   Lānchanas omitted (see List 68). Aśvamukhī seated, hands on knees. – I take this (see Text,
   p. 330) to be the fellow of Cave No. 100, both illustrating the Padakusalamāṇava Jātaka,
   No. 432.

(h) S. wall, Cave No. 70 (2nd W. of S.W. corner).
   Right lānчana shows a small Deer (not Hare), turning inward with reverted head. There is no lānчana on the left. The Tāntric king sits in namaskāra mudrā.

(i) S. wall, Cave No. 71 (near S.W. corner).
   Lānчanas omitted (see List 71). The six-armed deity standing on the corpse, I take to be the Hindu goddess Cāmuṇḍā (see Text, p. 332).

Plate 235. Caves (v). 9 outline copies.

(a) W. wall, Cave No. 72 (in S.W. corner).
   Hermit with Dog and Monkey.

(b) W. wall, Cave No. 73 (2nd from S.W. corner).
   Left lānчana, according to Ba Shin, shows a Parrot in front and Stork behind, facing outward.
   There is no lānчana on the right, because of the window. The hermit’s hands rest on his knees, not in varada mudrā. There is a wriggling snake in the Cave.

(c) W. wall, Cave No. 77 (6th from S.W. corner).
   Lānчanas omitted (see List 77). The Bodhisattva sits between two lotuses, open on the right, half-open on the left. His right hand holds a lotus stalk before the body.

(d) W. wall, Cave No. 78 (7th from S.W. corner).
   Hermit sits on tiger-skin, with right leg extended, for Monkey to extract thorn from sole (?).

(e) W. wall, Cave No. 80 (9th from S.W. corner).
   Left lānчana, according to Ba Shin, shows a tuskless Elephant-head; the right one, a hornless Barking Deer. The Buddha appears to have beard and moustache.

(f) W. wall, Cave No. 81 (10th from S.W. corner).
   Right lānчana, according to Ba Shin, shows a striped tiger facing inwards. The Hermit holds, not a bird, but a pot with neck, in his right hand.

(g) W. wall, Cave No. 84 (3rd S. of central window).
   Left lānчana, according to Ba Shin, shows a Bird flying out, above and behind the tuskless Elephant-head. The Śyāmā Tārā is correct.

(h) W. wall, Cave No. 86 (on S. side of central window).
   The drawing omits the right lānчana – a fierce Tiger, according to Ba Shin, turned outwards, with reverted head gaping. The Tāntric king is correct.

(i) W. wall, Cave No. 87 (on N. side of central window).
   Right lānчana, according to Ba Shin, shows an emaciated Hermit, with ‘two-horned’ headdress, on roof of Cave, facing inwards. The Bodhisattva is correct.

Plate 236. Caves (vi). 4 outline copies.

(a) W. wall, Cave No. 88 (2nd N. of central window).
   shooting, with bow and arrow. The Buddha here has a conical uṣṇīśa.

(b) W. wall, Cave No. 93 (7th N. of central window).
   Mahāśrī Tārā (?), seated in lalitāsana, dharmacakra mudrā.
Plate 237–238

(c) W. wall, Cave No. 100 (1st N. of N. window).

Lāñchana: – on the left, head of maned Lion; on the right, a crested bird with reverted head. Four-armed Aśvamukhī eating gobbets of human flesh. Her young son, wearing a coronet – the Bodhisattva – is questioning her. See Padakitsalamānava Jātaka, No. 432, and compare Cave No. 68.

(d) W. wall, Cave No. 101 (in N.W. corner).

Three-headed Elephant (central face human) seated in padmāsana on double lotus. He has a rounded hairy usṣūṣa. The Elephant-head (e.g. of Ganeśa) is a symbol of wisdom. Is the triple Elephant-head a symbol of the All-Wise, the Buddha? Or else, of Indra, sometimes shown as riding on a three-headed elephant? Compare the centre panel of the thrones of the colossal Buddhas in the E., S., and N. Shrines of Nanda temple, and elsewhere.

Plate 237. Caves (vii). 5 coloured drawings and a photograph.

(a) E. wall, Cave No. 29 (3rd S. of central window).

Two-armed goddess (?), without coronet, seated in ardhaparyayanāsana, doing her hair. Query Vasundhara, the Earth-goddess?

(b) E. wall, Cave No. 40 (2nd from S.E. corner).

(c) S. wall, Cave No. 43 (2nd from S.E. corner).

No lāñchana. Right side of Cave missing. On the left, a hermit with ‘two-horned’ headdress, holding 2 ladles.

(d) W. wall, Cave No. 76 (5th from S.W. corner).

Śyāmā Tārā (?), two-armed, seated in lalitāsana, left leg hanging. The right lāñchana appears to be a Lion-, or Wolf-, rather than a Boar-head.

(e) W. wall, Cave No. 99 (on S. side of N. window).

Plates 238, 239. 4th Tier. Standing Bodhisattvas.

See Text, Ch. XVI, p. 333.

The Bodhisattvas – we may call them Avalokiteśvara – stand about 2 ft. 8 in. high, above the central band, between the upper niches and windows (see Pl. 227). The upper parts of these walls are far worse preserved than the lower: so of the original total – perhaps 36 Bodhisattvas – only about 28 are more or less visible. Those on either side of the S.W. corner are the best preserved. We include 2 direct photographs, 1 photograph of a coloured drawing, and 3 outline copies.

   See Text, Ch. XVI, p. 334.
   There may have been 50 Buddhas in this tier originally, mostly rising direct above the standing Bodhisattvas below them. Few remain today – about 17 in part, only about 6 fairly complete, on both walls near the S.W. corner.

Plate 276. Kneeling statues of the donors — the Mahāthera Arahan and king Kyanzittha. See Text, Ch. XVIII, p. 371.
These face each other on the N. and S. walls of the W. Shrine, on either side of the colossal standing Buddha. Mr. A. B. Griswold has kindly sent me the follg. note on them: — “I asked U Lu Pe Win about the supposed stone statues of Kyanzittha and Shin Arahan in the Nanda. He tells me that my recollection is approximately correct. . . . During the War, after the retreat of the British and before the arrival of the Japanese, some thieves cut off Kyanzittha’s nose and a couple of fingers — apparently in the belief that they were solid gold! The matter was reported to U Lu Pe Win, who went immediately to inspect. He found the statue was made of hollow lacquer, with clothing inside (presumably the king’s clothing moulded into a kind of core for the lacquer). The clothing disintegrated to dust when touched. So it is definite that Kyanzittha’s statue is not stone, but gilded lacquer. Presumably Shin Arahan’s is the same, but that is not proved.”

Set in niches of the outer wall of the Outer Corridor of the Nanda.

See Text, Ch. XVIII, p. 367.

A new and complete set of photographs of this famous series has been provided by U Tin Oo. They are listed, with references, below. A few (notably those showing prematurely the Earth-touching Buddha) are clearly intrusive: taking the place, perhaps, of original sculptures which got broken or lost. But the great majority of the stone reliefs in the Nanda appear to belong to Kyanzittha’s reign or to a date not long after it. The first 40 of our series fill the lower tier of niches along the four outer walls of the outer corridor. The last 40 fill the upper tier, immediately above. The height of the sculptures ranges from about 39 to 42 inches, the breadth is about 22 inches. References given below are frequently to “D.” – that is, Duroiselle’s article, “The Stone Sculptures in the Ánanda Temple at Pagan” (ASI 1914, pp. 63–97 and Plates XXXI to XXXIX), where most of the scenes are fully and learnedly explained. Most of the scenes are also discussed in Text, Ch. IX, pp. 153–171.

LOWER TIER.

Plate 278.

(a) Niche 1. W. wall, 1st N. of central doors. No predella.
   The Devas request Setaketu in Tusita. He sits in his gabled palace in varadamudrā, accepting the request, left hand in abhayamudrā “Fear not!” Note the ūrnā.
   D. Pl. XXXI (1) and pp. 70–72. Cf. Neg. 530 (1907–08).

(b) Niche 2. W. wall, 2nd N. of central doors. With predella.
   Sleep of Māyā (natural position). Two women seated below.
   D. Pl. XXXI (2) and p. 72.

   The Four Mahārājas carry her (in hieratic pose) to Himavā.
   D. Pl. XXXI (3) and p. 72.

   Their Queens bathe her, standing, in Anotatta Lake.
   D. Pl. XXXI (4) and pp. 72–74.

Plate 279.

(a) Niche 5. W. wall, near N.W. corner. No predella.
   They tire her hair and anoint her. She sits in pralambanásana on seat.
   D. Pl. XXXI (5) and p. 74. On Pls. XXXVIII and XXXIX D. assembles drawings of the various kinds of hair-dress, mukuta, ear-ornament, armlet, wristlet, anklet, loin-covering, vases, jars, etc., found in these sculptures.

(b) Niche 6. N. wall, 1st from N.W. corner. With predella.
   She sleeps on a divine couch (natural position) in Manosilātala. Two women, with water-jar, below.

(c) Niche 7. N. wall, 2nd from N.W. corner. With predella.
   The Conception. Māyā in hieratic pose. White Elephant below her head, about to mount the couch. The four Queens seated below.
   D. Pl. XXXI (6) and pp. 74–76.
(d) Niche 8. N. wall, 3rd from N.W. corner. With predella.
Mâyā, kneeling, tells her dream to her husband, king Suddhodana. He sits in ardha-paryâṅkâsana, abhaya mudrā, under umbrella. Lady with fan kneels on the right.
D. Pl. XXXI (7) and p. 76.

Plate 280.

(a) Niche 9. N. wall, 4th from N.W. corner. No predella.
Pregnancy. The Four Mahârâjas, in the four corners, guard Mâyâ. She sits in pralambâsana under palace-gable.
D. Pl. XXXI (8) and p. 76.

(b) Niche 10. N. wall, 5th from N.W. corner. With predella.
She asks Suddhodana’s leave to visit her parents at Devadaha. The king sits on the left in talking pose. She kneels on the right.
D. Pl. XXXII (9) and p. 76.

(c) Niche 11. N. wall, 1st E. of central doors. No predella.
The Journey by Litter, Mâyâ borne by 8 (or 16?) men: She sits sideways, under umbrella, in talking pose. Cf. Pl. 313 (b), the Bodhisattva on his chariot.
D. Pl. XXXII (10) and p. 76.

(d) Niche 12. N. wall, 2nd E. of central doors. No predella.
D. (pp. 77–78) writes learnedly of the scene; but his illustration (Pl. XXXII, fig. 12) is not our one, but the one in the S. Hall (our Pl. 301 b).

Plate 281.

3 trees behind. Four Brahmâs receive the Babe in a golden net. He sits in dhyâna mudrâ.
D. Pl. XXXII (13) and p. 78.

The Four Lokâpâla Devas receive him on a black leopard-skin. He sits in padmâsana, with hands before the body. in dharma-cakra mudrâ.

(c) Niche 15. N. wall, near N.E. corner. No predella. Palm-tree behind.
Two Men receive him on fine white cloth. He sits with hands in dharma-cakra mudrâ.

D. Pl. XXXII (14) and pp. 78–79.

Plate 282.

(a) Niche 17. E. wall, 2nd from N.E. corner. No predella.
Between Brahmâ (left) and Suyâma (right), he takes his Seven Steps. The Deva Suyâma holds a yak-tail fly-whisk.

(b) Niche 18. E. wall, 3rd from N.E. corner. No predella.
His Lion-Roar: “I am the Lord.” The three are here standing, not walking.
D. Pl. XXXII (15) and p. 79.
(c) Niche 19. E. wall, 4th from N.E. corner. With predella.

He sits in padmásana, dharmacakramudrā, in Kapilavatthu palace. Flying Devas above, praying women below.
D. Pl. XXXII (16) and p. 79.

(d) Niche 20. E. wall, 5th from N.E. corner. With predella. (four nurses kneeling in prayer).

Suddhodana, seated sideways, shows the Babe to Kāladevala, the old hermit, who foretells his Buddhahood. The Babe’s feet rest on the hermit’s head.

Plate 283.

The throned King shows the Babe to the four Brahmans, Konḍañña etc. He receives his name, Siddhattha. Konḍañña foretells his Buddhahood.
D. Pl. XXXIII (18) and pp. 80–81.

(b) Niche 22. E. wall, 2nd S. of central doors. With predella (four nurses).

The Bodhisattva sits between ‘Saktis’. He wears the jaṭāmukuta.
D. Pl. XXXIII (19) and p. 81, “Siddhartha’s infancy”. D. is right, I think, in regarding the central figure as the prince, not the king. The sculptor, I suspect, was a Mahāyānist, say from Patikkara, used to making sculptures of Bodhisattvas, e.g. Lokanātha between Saktis; and uses the same model for Siddhattha between Māyā (with fan) and Pajāpati (with flywhisk). All three sit on double lotus in front of palace. Cf. Pl. 313 (a).

(c) Niche 23. E. wall, 3rd S. of central doors. With predella (eight nurses in two tiers).

Rose-apple tree and Ploughing Festival. The Child sleeps in hieratic pose under the leaning tree.
D. Pl. XXXIII (20) and pp. 81–82.

The Child sits enthroned under the tree, in padmásana, hands before body, worshipped by his father and Pajāpati.
D. Pl. XXXIII (21) and pp. 81–82. (Māyā died 7 days after the birth.)

Plate 284.

(a) Niche 25. E. wall, near S.E. corner. With predella (four ladies kneeling with royal requisites).

The Five-roofed Pavilion (Subha). The Prince sits in ardhaparyāṅkāsana, without lotus, right hand in abhayā, left in varada-mudrā.
D. pp. 82–83. ASI 1913, Pl. LXXXIII (a).

(b) Niche 26. S. wall, 1st from S.E. corner. With predella (four ladies seated in converse).

The Seven-roofed Pavilion (Suramma). The Prince sits on double lotus, right hand in abhaya mudrā, left hand resting on seat. He is in ardhaparyāṅkāsana.
D. Pl. XXXIII (22) and pp. 82–83. ASI 1913, Pl. LXXXIII (b).

(c) Niche 27. S. wall, 2nd from S.E. corner. With predella.

The Nine-roofed Pavilion (Ramma). The Prince sits as in (26). ASI 1913, Pl. LXXXIII (c).

(d) Niche 28. S. wall, 3rd from S.E. corner. With predella.

The Prince sits in palace on throne in pralambāsana, hands together in lap.
D. Pl. XXXIII (23) and p. 83.
Plate 285.

(a) Niche 29. S. wall, 4th from S.E. corner. With predella.
   Athletic Contest. The Prince stands, holding sword and bow.
   D. Pl. XXXIII (24) and pp. 83-84.

(b) Niche 30. S. wall, 5th from S.E. corner. No predella.
    Throned on chariot, he sees the Old Man. 1st Omen.
    D. p. 84. Cf. Neg. 559 (1907-08).

(c) Niche 31. S. wall, 1st W. of central doors. No predella.
    Throned on chariot, he sees the Sick Man. 2nd Omen.
    D. Pl. XXXIII (25) and p. 84.

(d) Niche 32. S. wall, 2nd W. of central doors. No predella.
    Throned on chariot, he sees the Dead Man. 3rd Omen.
    D. Pl. XXXIV (26) and p. 84.

Plate 286.

(a) Niche 33. S. wall, 3rd W. of central doors. No predella.
    Throned on chariot, he sees the Monk. 4th Omen.
    D. pp. 84-85.

(b) Niche 34. S. wall, 4th W. of central doors. With predella.
    He sits in dhyāna mudrā among his women. The scene is in his pleasance, after he has bathed.
    D. Pl. XXXIV (27) and p. 85.

(c) Niche 35. S. wall, near S.W. corner. With predella. Trees behind.
    Vissukamma coils his jatāmukūta (for the last time). He still sits in dhyānamudrā.

(d) Niche 36. W. wall, 1st from S.W. corner. No predella.
    Returning by chariot, the Prince hears of the birth of his son, Rāhula. Messenger kneels before chariot.
    D. p. 86.

Plate 287.

(a) Niche 37. W. wall, 2nd from S.W. corner. With predella.
    He reclines (hieratically) on couch. Below, four women (harpist, player on the transverse flute, singer, and bamboo-clapper) make music.
    D. Pl. XXXIV (29) and p. 86. ASB 1914, Pl. IV, fig. 1. Cf. Neg. 566 (1907-08).

(b) Niche 38. W. wall, 3rd from S.W. corner. With predella.
    Gabled chamber. He sits up in dhyānamudrā. The sleeping women lie untidily, like corpses.
    D. Pl. XXXIV (30) and p. 86.

(c) Niche 39. W. wall, 4th from S.W. corner. No predella.
    Pillared pediment behind. He sends for Channa, the groom, and Kanthaka, his horse, and stands between them.
    D. Pl. XXXIV (31) and pp. 86-87.

(d) Niche 40. W. wall, 5th from S.W. corner. No predella.
    Gabled chamber. The Farewell, He stands at the bed-head. Yasodharā sleeps (hieratically), with the babe Rāhula beside her. Two women kneel below.
    D. Pl. XXXIV (32) and p. 87. Cf. Neg. 569 (1907-08).
UPPER TIER.

Plate 288.

(a) Niche 41. W. wall, 1st N. of central doors. No predella.

The Prince, about to mount Kanthaka, addresses the proud horse. Channa kneels at the tail. Tree behind.

D. p. 87.

(b) Niche 42. W. wall, 2nd N. of central doors. No predella.

Departure from Kapilavatthu. Four Devas bear the hooves, to deaden the sound. Devas in clouds above. Torch-bearers in front. Channa behind.

D. Pl. XXXIV (33) and p. 87. ASB 1914, Pl. IV, fig. 2. Neg. 395 (1905-06); 571 (1907-08).

(c) Niche 43. W. wall, 3rd N. of central doors. No predella.

The Full Moon shines. Māra tempts him as he goes (top right).

D. Pl. XXXIV (34) and pp. 87-88.

(d) Niche 44. W. wall, 4th N. of central doors. No predella.

Palm trees behind. They reach the river Anoma, weary horse and Channa holding his tail.

D. Pl. XXXV (35) and p. 88. Cf. Neg. 573 (1907-08).

Plate 289.

(a) Niche 45. W. wall, near N.W. corner. No predella. Tree behind.

One leap. – They reach the other bank and proceed (?).

D. p. 88.

(b) Niche 46. N. wall, 1st from N.W. corner. No predella. Tree behind.

The Prince, dismounted, divests himself of royal attire, and hands the jewelry to Channa. The ūrṇā appears. The horse waits.

D. Pl. XXXV (36) and p. 88.

(c) Niche 47. N. wall, 2nd from N.W. corner. No predella.

Architecture behind. The Tonsure. He sits in padmāsana on double lotus, and holding his hair-knot with his left hand, severs it with the sword in his right. Ūrṇā clear.

D. Pl. XXXV (37) and p. 88.

(d) Niche 48. N. wall, 3rd from N.W. corner. With predella.

Architecture behind. Still sitting in padmāsana, he holds the hair-knot before him with both hands. He throws up the hair-knot. Indra (top right) catches it like a garland, and (top left) carries it in a casket to Tāvatīṃśa. Below, Channa worships. Kanthaka paws the ground.

D. Pl. XXXV (38) and pp. 88-89.

Plate 290.

(a) Niche 49. N. wall, 4th from N.W. corner. With predella.

Architecture behind. He sits as a monk in dhyānamudrā, on double lotus. Below, Brahmā Ghaṭikāra brings, kneeling, the monastic robes. He faces the kneeling Channa. Kanthaka waits, still saddled.

D. Pl. XXXV (39) and p. 89.

(b) Niche 50. N. wall, 5th from N.W. corner. No predella.

Architecture behind. Fully robed as a monk, he stands renouncing the world, between the kneeling Ghaṭikāra and Channa. Below, on the right, Kanthaka stands alone, unsaddled.

D. Pl. XXXV (40) and p. 89.
Plate 291-292

Plate 291.

(a) Niche 53. N. wall, 3rd E. of central doors. No predella.

He stands holding almsbowl before him, with a man questioning him on either side. He is collecting his first alms in Rājagaha, and is noted by king Bimbisāra’s messengers. Architecture behind.

D. Pl. XXXV (41) and pp. 89–90.

(b) Niche 54. N. wall, 4th E. of central doors. No predella.

He sits in padmāsana on double lotus, eating his almsfood at the foot of Mt. Pāṇḍava. Urṇā visible. Architecture behind.

(c) Niche 55. N. wall, near N.E. corner. With predella.

King Bimbisāra visits him. He sits in dhyānamuḍrā. Architecture behind. Below, sits the high-crowned king in left centre, also three queens, all in worship.

D. Pl. XXXVI (44) and p. 90.

(d) Niche 56. E. wall, 1st from N.E. corner. With predella. Two trees behind.

D. Pl. XXXVI (43) and p. 90.

Plate 292.

(a) Niche 57. E. wall, 2nd from N.E. corner. With predella. Two trees behind.

Gotama (left) seated in argument with the hermit Uddaka Rāmaputta. Below, 3 more hermits kneel in worship.

D. p. 90.

(b) Niche 58. E. wall, 3rd from N.E. corner. With predella.

In a two-roofed chamber Gotama sits in centre, touching Earth. His first five disciples, the Pañcaśīgya, sit in worship: on the left Koṇḍañña, on the right Assaji; below, Bhaddiya, Vappa and Mahānāma.

D. Pl. XXXV (42, misplaced), and p. 90 (Fig. 44).

(c) Niche 59. E. wall, 4th from N.E. corner. No predella. Branching tree behind.

The Fast. Gotama sits touching Earth, his face and torso (but not his arms) wasted with fasting. A standing Deva on either side rubs ambrosia into the arms. The urṇā is clear.

D. Pl. XXXVI (45) and pp. 90–91.

(d) Niche 60. E. wall, 5th from N.E. corner. With predella.

Gotama falls (hieratically) in a swoon under a tree. A Deva kneels at his feet in worship. Below, the Pañcaśīgya sit in prayer.

D. Pl. XXXVI (46) and p. 91.
Plate 293.

(a) Niche 61. E. wall, 1st S. of central doors. No predella.

Earth-touching Buddha, with almsbowl, on double lotus, under tree. – If this is not an intrusive sculpture, we must accept D’s view (p. 91): “He has recovered from his faint, and the bowl shows that he is determined to eat food now”. Ornā plain.

Earth-touching Buddha, with almsbowl, under tree. No lotus-seat. Ornā plain. Predella shows Puṇṇā, Sujātā’s maid, kneeling in prayer in the centre, with the ‘goatherd’ (ajapāla) fig-tree behind her.

D. p. 91.

Gotama sits in dhyānamudrā under tree, with almsbowl (?). Ornā plain. No lotus seat. Predella shows Sujātā with her golden bowl, and Puṇṇā, both kneeling.

D. Pl. XXXVI (47) and pp. 91–92.

(d) Niche 64. E. wall, 4th S. of central doors. No predella.

Architecture behind. Gotama sits in dhyāna mudrā on lotus. No almsbowl. – The sculpture may be intrusive.

D. p. 92.

Plate 294.

(a) Niche 65. E. wall, near S.E. corner. No predella. Architecture behind.

Gotama sits in padmāsana on double lotus, eating his almsfood. Ornā clear – almost identical with No. 54 supra (Pl. 291 b).

(b) Niche 66. S. wall, 1st from S.E. corner. No predella. Architecture behind.

Gotama sits in padmāsana, dhyānamudrā, on double lotus. No āṇā. There appears to be a small almsbowl on his hands.

(c) Niche 67. S. wall, 2nd from S.E. corner. No predella. Architecture behind.

The Buddha, with āṇā clear, sits on double lotus, touching Earth. – This sculpture is probably intrusive.

(d) Niche 68. S. wall, 3rd from S.E. corner. No predella.

Triumphal march to the Bodhi tree. Under a fixed umbrella, Gotama, with hands in pose of converse, half-turned to the left, is about to start on his march, between two Devas bearing gonfalons.

D. Pl. XXXVI (48) and p. 92.

Plate 295.

(a) Niche 69. S. wall, 4th from S.E. corner. No predella.

Sotthiya, the grasscutter, offers 8 handfuls of grass. Architecture behind.

D. Pl. XXXVI (49) and p. 92.

(b) Niche 70. S. wall, 5th from S.E. corner. No predella.

Gotama proceeds, facing front, holding the grass high before him. Ornā clear. Motion is shown by swing of the robes. Architecture behind. Sotthiya is not shown.

D. p. 92.

Gotama stands still, drooping the grass before him. Which side of the tree is he to cast it? Architecture behind. Robes hang even.
(d) Niche 72. S. wall, 2nd W. of central doors. No predella.

Gotama stands facing East, about to cast the grass. Robes still hang even. His hands now hang at the sides. The right hand holds the grass, which will become the Buddha’s throne under the Bodhi tree. Architecture behind.

Plate 296.

(a) Niche 73. S. wall, 3rd W. of central doors. No predella.

(b) Niche 74. S. wall, 4th W. of central doors. No predella.

Gotama sits in padmásana touching Earth, under the tree. No lotus seat or almsbowl. Sujātā kneels below on the left, holding the water-kettle. – The earth-touching attitude is here unusual, and the sculpture appears to be in the wrong niche. It should come just before No. 63, the Offering of Milk-rice. – Architecture behind.

(c) Niche 75. S. wall, near S.W. corner. No predella.

Between Brahmā (right) upholding the Chattra, and Indra (left) winding the Vijayuttara Śaṅkha, Gotama sits and touches Earth under the peepal tree. No ūrṇā. No lotus seat.

D. Pl. XXXVI (50) and pp. 92–93.

(d) Niche 76. W. wall, 1st from S.W. corner. No predella.

Earth-touching Buddha on double lotus. Ūrṇā clear. Architecture behind. – Intrusive relief?

Plate 297.

(a) Niche 77. W. wall, 2nd from S.W. corner. No predella.

Contest with Māra. Gotama sits in padmásana, on double lotus, under his tree, touching Earth. No ūrṇā. No lotus-seat. On the left (the Buddha’s right) stands Māra, as a Deva unarmed, in pose of argument. – It is a battle of minds, not the physical battle illustrated on the ground-plinth plaques of the Nanda exterior.

D. Pl. XXXVII (51) and p. 93; ASI 1918, Part I, Pl. XVII, fig. 4, and pp. 28–29.

(b) Niche 78. W. wall, 3rd N. of S.W. corner. With predella.

Temptation by Mara’s daughters. The Buddha, with ūrṇā clear, sits in padmásana, on double lotus, touching Earth under a stylized tree (which should be the Ajapāla nigrodha fig-tree). Architecture behind. On the predella (left and centre) dance Taṅkhā, Aratī and Rāgā in seductive poses; on the right kneel two small figures. The scene is normally placed two weeks or more after the Enlightenment.

D. Pl. XXXVII (52) and pp. 93–94. Cf. Neg. 607 (1907–08).

(c) Niche 79. W. wall, 4th N. of S.W. corner. With predella.

Six Devas hail the Māravijaya. The Buddha, with ūrṇā clear, sits in padmásana, touching Earth, against architecture, below the Bodhi tree. There is no lotus seat; but below, on the predella, sit six crowned Devas in worship.

D. p. 93.

(d) Niche 80. W. wall, 5th from S.W. corner. No predella.

The Enlightenment. The Buddha, with clear ūrṇā, uṣṇīsa, and flame-niche, sits in padmásana, bhūmisparśa mudrā. Jewelled nimbus and architecture, with shoulder-hamsas, fill the background, with arch of stylized peepal-tree above.
Plates 298 to 312. SERIES OF 16 SCULPTURES OF THE FULL LIFE OF GOTAMA, FOUND IN EACH OF THE FOUR HALLS.

See Text, Ch. XVIII, pp. 364–367.

The 16 stone reliefs in each Hall have been numbered consecutively 1 to 16 according to the order of niches, 1 to 16, as one goes round the Hall from the main entrance. Thus No. 1 is the first niche on the left on entering. No. 15 is the last niche but one before returning to the entrance. See Text, p. 366, for the probable original arrangement of all four Halls.

I. Defeat of the Heretics at Sāvatthī.
(a) E. Hall. Sculpture No. 1. With predella.
(b) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 1. With predella.
(c) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 1. With predella.
(d) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 15. With predella.

For the intrigues and defeat of the heretics at Sāvatthī, see Text, Ch. IX, pp. 173–5; or G. P. Malalasekera, Dictionary of Pāli Proper Names, s.v. Yamakapatihāriya. The above four very similar sculptures show the Buddha seated in padmāsana on lotus under the Gaṇḍamāba tree, preaching (āharmacakramudrā) in the intervals of performing miracles. Below, on the predella, are shown 6 figures: king Pasenadi (right or left centre) and four monks (?), all in reverent attitudes; and one naked heretic (extreme right), apparently trying to fly. This has been proved by Mon Bo Kay (see Ch. XVI, p. 313, n. 5). For the similar sculpture in the Hall of Nagayōn, see Pl. 193 d.

Plate 299.

II. Buddha in dhyānamudrā on double lotus. With predella. Architecture behind.
(a) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 2.

The predella shows 8 persons seated in prayer: 4 men on the left, 4 women on the right.
(b) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 3.

The predella shows 6 persons seated in prayer: 3 men on the left, 3 women on the right.

III (?). Earth-touching Buddha between two praying Brahmās.
(c) E. Hall, Sculpture No. 2. With predella. Architecture behind.

No lotus seat. The predella shows 6 crowned Devas seated in prayer.

III (?). Earth-touching Buddha.
(d) E. Hall, Sculpture No. 3. With predella. Architecture behind.

No lotus seat. No Brahmās. The predella shows 4 crowned Devas seated in prayer.

The scene appears to be that of the Brahmā Sahampati, accompanied by Indra and hosts of Devas, entreating the Buddha, under the nigrodha fig-tree, to preach his Dhamma, though difficult, to the world. The scene was already one of those included in the Hall sculptures of the Nagayōn (see Pl. 193 d). It may well also be the scene in (d) of this plate, though the Brahmās are absent.

Plate 300.

IV. Descent from Tāvatimsa.
(a) E. Hall. Sculpture No. 4.
(b) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 4.
(c) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 4. Cf. D. Pl. XXXVII (53) and pp. 53–54.
(d) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 4.

See Text, Ch. IX, pp. 175–177.

All four are similar: but coarse repairs to hands etc. have introduced variations. In three of the sculptures the standing Buddha in the centre raises his left hand to the shoulder (once to the breast); in three his right hand hangs in varada mudrā over the kneeling Sāriputta. Brahmā on the right (the Buddha’s left) is specially graceful in the N. Hall. Indra on the left (the Buddha’s right) may hold his Conch, though this may be passing into an almsbowl. In all four the Buddha is backed with architecture. The W. Hall sculpture maintains the Gandhāran tradition (cf. de Silva-Vigier, Life of the Buddha, Pl. 2) of showing the three stairways, of jewels, silver and gold.

Plate 301.

V. The Nativity. See Text, Ch. IX, pp. 157–159.

(b) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 5. Cf. D. Pl. XXXII (12) and pp. 77–78.
(c) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 5.
(d) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 5.

All four are fuller in detail than the Corridor Sculpture (supra, Pl. 280 d). By omitting one of the girl-attendants, they find room on the left for the descent of Indra, the three-tiered reception of the Babe by Brahmās, Devas and Men, and the taking of the first Seven Steps. But the sandstone is friable, especially at the base of sculptures, where the gold leaf has worn away; and one has only to compare our Pl. 301 b with Duroiselle’s photograph of the same sculpture in ASI 1914, to see how much it has deteriorated within half a century.

Tree-spirits (vrksa devatā) in Ancient India, to promote fecundity, would bend down a branch and kick the trunk near the root (see Heinrich Zimmer, Myths and Symbols in Indian Art and Civilization, p. 69). So Māyā sometimes in Burma art has her legs crossed, as if kicking the tree (see, e.g., the Pagan bronze, Pl. 433 b, c). Not understanding this detail, but not daring to omit it, our sculptor in the W. Hall makes Pajāpati cross her legs, instead of Māyā.

Plate 302.

VI. Parinirvāṇa.

See Text, Ch. IX, pp. 180–182.

(a) E. Hall. Sculpture No. 6.
(b) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 6.
(c) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 6.
(d) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 6.

As in Nagayôn Hall (Pl. 194 b, c), Parinirvāṇa and Conception sculptures face each other across the inner sides of the Halls, broader than the other reliefs. Those in the Nanda are the broadest and most full of detail. The Buddha lies hierarchically, as always, on his tilted bier, head to the left. Ānanda prays at his feet. The bier rests between two sāla trees, whose spirits bring their offerings. A triple- (or double-) roofed pavilion rises above the bier, replacing the Cetiya, the first symbol of the scene, as more suggestive (perhaps) of the cremation. To the left of this, behind the Buddha’s head, stand Brahmā and Indra in worship, Brahmā, as senior, on the left. To the right of the pavilion are two tiers of worshippers with lotus buds. Above, 5 Devas enter, hasting and diagonal; below them, square and controlled, 4 Monks seated. Below the bier, between the censers, 6 or 8 kings, hands raised in supplication. In the bottom right corner, a drummer and a dancer. In the N. Hall only, near the head of the bier, above the first king, sits a lonely figure with face averted.

For a far simpler scene of the Parinirvāṇa, in one of the Nanda cross-passages, see Pl. 319 e.

Plate 303.

VII. The First Sermon.

See Text, Ch. IX, pp. 172–173.

(a) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 7. With predella.
(b) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 7. With predella.
(c) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 7. With predella.
(d) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 10. With predella.

The Buddha sits above in padmāsana, dharmacakra mudrā, under a tree, on double lotus. The predella shows a Deer couchant at either end, and 4 seated figures worshipping in the centre. These should be 4 out of the 5 Pañcāvaggyā. But Sculpture No. 10 in the S. Hall (displaced, presumably, from the E. Hall) shows at least one Brahmā seated on the right. Since it was Sahampati who had persuaded the Buddha to preach his Dhamma, his presence here is justified. There is no sign of the Wheel.

Plate 304.

VIII, IX. Earth-touching Buddha between Brahmā and Indra.

See Text, Ch. IX, p. 167.

The scene is the first triumphant sitting in vajrāsana on the grass-throne under the Bodhi tree. There is no double lotus; but Brahmā on the right (Gotama's left) upholds the Chattrā, and Indra on the left (Gotama's right) winds his Vijayuttara Śāṅkha. This is before Mára's assault. It may be called the Approach to Buddhahood – a theme dear to Kyanzittha. Already in the Nagayon, 2 sculptures illustrate it: see Pls. 194 e, 201 d. In three of the Nanda Halls, in Niches VIII and IX on either side of the entrance to the temple proper, these sculptures take a prominent place, warning each worshipper who enters that he, too, is on the road to Bodhi. For some reason these sculptures are missing from the W. Hall, the main entrance. They are found at the following places:

VIII. E. Hall. Sculpture No. 8.  IX. E. Hall. Sculpture No. 9.
N. Hall. Sculpture No. 8.  N. Hall. Sculpture No. 9.

From these 6, we select 4 for the purpose of this plate: namely

(a) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 8.
(b) E. Hall. Sculpture No. 9.
(c) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 9.
(d) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 9.
Plate 305.

X. Buddha in dhyanamudrā on lotus, under gables.

(a) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 10.
(b) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 10.

There are only 2 such sculptures. The theme, I think, is the Buddha's stay in the Rata-naghara, 'House of Gems', where he thought out the Abhidhamma. This, according to the later Jātaka version, took place in the 4th week after the Enlightenment.

To complete the plate, we include two similar displaced sculptures, not easy to identify: — Earth-touching Buddha under tree, on double lotus, with predella. Architecture behind.

(c) E. Hall. Sculpture No. 7.
(d) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 15.

The predella of (c) shows 4 monks seated in prayer or converse. That of (d) also shows 4 monks in prayer or converse, with a fifth figure, damaged, on the extreme right. Compare Pl. 311 d, which may illustrate the same scene.

Plate 306.

XI. Māyā’s Dream. The Conception.

See Text, Ch. IX, pp. 155-157.

(a) E. Hall. Sculpture No. 11.
(b) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 11.
(c) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 11.
(d) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 11.

Another broad sculpture, corresponding to the Parinirvāṇa on the opposite wall. All four reliefs are in situ, but damaged by loss of gold-leaf and sandstone weathering, and even more by crude repairs. Māyā lies in hieratic pose against the tilted bed-frame. Between the legs of the couch are 3 basons on stands. In the lower corners sit two or four of the Mahārājas. Above the couch their queens offer lotus buds. Above these, a kūrtimukha frieze loops its tassels of pearl. At the top, a flat-arched pediment, six-lobed below, ends at the sides in vyālas with reverted heads, and at the apex is a sort of double-bodied kūrtimukha mask. The White Elephant, conspicuous in the top right corner of the Nagayon Hall sculpture (Pl. 194 c), is here either absent or lost.

Plate 307.

XII. The Standing Buddha.

See Text, Ch. VIII, pp. 140-143.

(a) E. Hall. Sculpture No. 12. No predella. Architecture behind.
(b) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 12. No predella. Architecture behind.
(c) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 12. No predella. Architecture behind.
(d) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 13. No predella. Architecture behind.

The Buddha stands with robes evenly spread behind him, and hands brought together before the breast. The hands have doubtless been repaired from time to time, and got changed in the process, so that he often seems to be holding something (e.g. his Hair-knot, as in Pl. 289 d). But I think the original hand-pose was just a borrowing from dharmacakramudrā. Cf. other renderings: Pl. 142 f (Kyaukku Ōhmin); 192 a (Nagayon Shrine); 202 a (Nagayon Corridor).

Perhaps no special scene is indicated. Or is it the Animisa station?
Plate 308.

XIII. The Walking Buddha.

See Text, Ch. VIII, p. 143.

(a) E. Hall. Sculpture No. 13. No predella. Architecture behind.
(b) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 13. No predella. Architecture behind.
(c) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 15. No predella. Architecture behind.
(d) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 12. No predella. Architecture behind.

The Buddha’s right arm hangs naturally, his left is doubled up to touch the left shoulder. His robes swing towards the right, free of the hanging right hand.

Perhaps no special scene is indicated. Or is it the Ratanacāṇkāma?

Plate 309.

XIV. Gotama in dhyānamudrá. Sujātā, Puṇṇā and the Goat.

See Text, Ch. IX, pp. 165–167.

The offering of milk-rice is not shewn. The sculpture is a mere mnemonic, not a realization of the scene. Gotama sits, without almsbowl, under the nigrodha tree. He sits on double lotus, not, as in the Nagayón relief (Pl. 202 c), without lotus. Sujātā and Puṇṇā are shown on the predella in pastoral style. The woman in the centre has a stick over her shoulder, and holds the goat by a halter. The goat serves to indicate that this is the Goatherd (ajāpāla) banyan tree.

Plate 310.

XV (?). Buddha seated on double lotus in padmásana, dharmacakramudrá.

The sculptures now occupying Niche XV in the four Halls are all different: one cannot be sure which is in situ. We group here 4 sculptures, with predellas, all showing the Preaching Buddha, other than those illustrating the First Sermon. All 4 predellas show 4 figures: on (a) and (b) these are 4 monks seated in worship; on (c) 2 monks in worship on the left, and a third on the right, with a fourth (right centre) in pose of converse; on (d) 2 monks in worship on the left, and perhaps a questioner and his wife on the right.

(a) E. Hall. Sculpture No. 15. Tree above. Architecture behind.
(b) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 16. Tree above. Architecture behind.
(c) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 9. Tree above. Architecture behind.
(d) S. Hall. Sculpture No. 13. Tree above. Architecture behind.

Compare also N. Hall, Sculpture No. 3 (not shewn), where there is a similar Preaching Buddha, but the 8 figures sunk on the predella are indistinguishable.

Plate 311.

XVI. Buddha in dhyānamudrá. Below, a king-donor, Bimbisāra(?).

(a) E. Hall. Sculpture No. 16. Tree above. Architecture behind. The Buddha sits on double lotus. The great king kneels on the left of the predella. To the right of him are 4 smaller royalty holding up bowls of alms. The scene very likely relates to the Buddha’s second visit to Rājagaha, when Bimbisāra entertained him at the palace, and dedicated the Bamboo Grove, Veluvana.

(b) N. Hall. Sculpture No. 16. Tree above. Architecture behind. The Buddha sits on double lotus. The great king, very tall, with perhaps a prince behind him, kneels on the left of the predella. On the right kneel three palace-ladies. All are offering bowls, and the king a cooking pot with handle.

(c) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 16. Tree above. Architecture behind. The Buddha has no lotus-mat, as in (a) and (b); so there is more room on the predella. This shows 7 kneeling persons, the king third from the left, with two queens (?) behind him. 4 other royal persons or ministers on the right. The king offers a document, perhaps the deed of gift of the Veluvana. The rest hold pots, bowls, etc.

Plate 312. Miscellaneous Hall sculptures.

Included in the Halls are a few single sculptures, probably intrusive, of well-known scenes in the life of the Buddha: –

The Tolsure. Gotama sits in padmāsana on double lotus. The ūrnā is plain. The pose is almost the same as that in the Corridor relief (Pl. 289 c), but there the right elbow is a little higher, making the action more energetic. Cf., too, Pls. 313 c, d and 410 c, infra, and Pl. 141 c (Kyaukku Ōnham). See Text, Ch. IX, pp. 163–164.

(b) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 2. No predella. A little architecture behind.

The Pārīleyyaka retreat. Compare the simpler rendering in Nagayon Hall (Pl. 193 b). Here a second monk is added, on the right. The Monkey here is shown twice, offering the honeycomb, and falling (?). But the general arrangement, including the Buddha’s pralambāsana, is common to both. Duroiselle discusses the story learnedly at ASI 1914, pp. 95–96 and Pl. XXXVII (54). See Text, Ch. IX, pp. 177–178.

(c) W. Hall. Sculpture No. 3. No predella. Architecture behind.

Taming of Nālāgiri elephant. The Buddha stands in varada mudrā, with left arm doubled so as to touch the left shoulder. Compare Pls. 319 c (Nanda) and 410 f, infra, and the hieratic treatment of the theme at Kyaukku Ōnham (Pl. 141 f). But the life and drama have gone out of the story. See Duroiselle, ASI 1914, pp. 96–97, and Pl. XXXVII (56). Also Text, Ch. IX, pp. 178–180.

Conversion of Āḷavaka (or Āṭavika) Yakkha. The Buddha stands in preaching attitude in the centre, with a monk standing in worship on the left (the Buddha’s right), and the stout square-jawed Yakkha on the right, with knees half-bent towards the Buddha. See Duroiselle’s learned note on the story at ASI 1914, p. 96, and Pl. XXXVII (55). For a very different treatment of the scene in painting, see ASI 1936, Pl. XXXI (e), and p. 79 (Sāyamthu temple, Pagān). See Text, Ch. IX, p. 178.
We have now accounted for all the sculptures in the four Halls, except for one – W. Hall, Sculpture No. 1, which is a good normal Earth-touching Buddha, seated on double lotus under the Bodhi tree. Scene: the Enlightenment.

Plates 313 to 315. HIGH SCULPTURES IN THE FOUR SHRINES.

See Text, Ch. XVIII, pp. 371–372.

In the two side-walls of each Shrine-recess, at about shoulder-level of the colossal standing Buddhas in the centre, are 3 niches in two tiers, thus , facing each other across the 4 Shrines. Out of the total of 24 gilded images which they contain, we select 12 for reproduction.

Plate 313.

(a) S. Shrine. E. wall. Lower tier. Inner side.

Prince Siddhattha seated among women in his palace. – This is a finer rendering of the same Mahāyānist theme as the Corridor sculpture, Pl. 283 b. Under three umbrellas and a richly gilded gable, the young Prince sits like Lokanātha between Tārā and Hayagrīva, right hand on knee in varada mudrā, left fingers bent as if to hold a climbing lotus-stem. Two queens facing front, kneel in worship beside him. Below, on the predella, four women, gracefully kneeling, hold his requisites: water pot, betel box on stand, beaker and fan. Note the rich simplicity of woodwork of the pavilion architecture.

(b) N. Shrine. W. wall. Lower tier. Inner side.

Prince Siddhattha viewed sideways on his chariot. The driver stands before him under the banana-leaf flag. Behind him, the umbrella-holder has been given two heads, the sculptor momentarily supposing him to be Brahmā. The central figure here is large, like Māyā on her litter (Pl. 280 c). Contrast the Four Omens and the Return (Pls. 285 b, c, d; 286 a, d), where the Prince is shown small, mounted on a high throne, so as to transfer interest to the Omen or Messenger in the bottom right corner. To prop this empty corner under the Makara, the sculptor inserts a floral pattern, like a seven-headed Nāga.

(c) N. Shrine. W. wall, top. No predella. Faint architecture behind.

The Tonsure. Compare with this and (d) the renderings in Nanda Corridor (Pl. 289 c, d) and Hall (Pl. 312 a); also Pl. 410 c. In (d) Gotama is shown still dressed as a Prince (elsewhere, prematurely, as a monk); but the left hand is too low, and the right too high, for the operation. (c), where the āṇāṇā is clear, deftly combines the Tonsure proper with the Scene that follows it in the Corridor – the descent of Indra with a casket to recover the severed Hair-knot. In both Gotama sits on double-lotus throne.

(d) S. Shrine. E. wall, top. No predella.

The Tonsure. Another version. See (c) above.

Plate 314.

(a, b) The Walking Buddha.

(b) W. Shrine. S. wall. Lower tier. Inner side.
(b) shows the left foot slightly lower than the right, implying that the figure is in motion; and this is confirmed in both by the swing of the robe to the right, with the left hand holding the robe at the shoulder. The contrast between the Standing Buddha (robe evenly spread, both hands together before the breast), and the Walking Buddha (robe swung to the left, left hand at the shoulder), is clearly seen in two Nagayôn reliefs: Pl. 202 a, b. In our present plate the Buddha’s feet appear to stand on mountain-caves. Is any special scene suggested? – e.g. the Ascent to Tâvatiśsa?

(c) S. Shrine. W. wall. Lower tier. Outer side.

(d) N. Shrine. E. wall. Lower tier. Outer side.

The dhyānamudrā is normal in this scene. Apart from this, these renderings are very different from the pastoral scene shown in the Halls (No. XIV, Pl. 309), where one lady appears to be dealing forcefully with her goat, and the offering of milk-rice is not shown. Here the goat is absent, and the women kneel in prayer against the double lotus. In (d) Sujātā holds her golden bowl. Cf. also the Corridor rendering (Pl. 293 c) and the Nagayôn relief (Pl. 202 c). The same scene recurs perhaps on a relief in the E. Shrine, S. wall, Lower tier, Outer side.

---

(a) W. Shrine. N. wall. Lower tier. Inner side.

No lotus-seat. Four trees are shown on the predella, and in the midst of them, presumably a donor. He is seated in prayer – a man (I think), but not a king. Perhaps he is the rich man Anātha-piṇḍika, seṭṭhi of Sāvatthi, donor of the Jetavandrama.

(b) W. Shrine. N. wall. Lower tier. Outer side.

Here the Buddha sits on double lotus, against which a king, presumably a donor, is kneeling, holding up what looks like a book or document. Compare the attitude of the king in the Hall sculpture, Pl. 311 c, whom I take to be Bimbisāra offering (after the meal) the Veluwanandrâma. The Buddha there sits in dhyānamudrā, an attitude not uncommon where gifts of almsfood are concerned. For a gift of land, the Earth-touching attitude, as here, seems more appropriate.

(c) W. Shrine. N. wall. Top.

Here too the Buddha sits on double lotus, against which a donor is certainly engaged in preparing rice, curry and liquid refreshment. – Could this be the last fatal meal of sūkaramaddava which Cunda the smith, in all innocence, prepared for the Buddha at Pāvâ, near Kusinâra?

(d) W. Shrine. S. wall. Top.

Here the Buddha sits under a tree, touching Earth. There is no lotus seat, but a predella showing 7 ladies, some if not all wearing coronets, all seated in worship. – Is this one of the many benefactions of Visākhâ, foremost of the women-donors to the Order – e.g. the Migārā-mūtupāsāda in the Pubbârâma, E. of Sāvatthi?
Plates 316, 317. SOME UNUSUAL MUDRAS.

Unable, as yet, to deal adequately with the main bulk of stone reliefs in the corridors, we content ourselves for the moment with the following haphazard selection of a few images in the lower tiers of niches which strike one immediately as unusual:

The predella shows king (?) and queen on the left, and 2 ladies on the right, all seated in worship. Gotama sits on double lotus, without usṇīṣa.

(b) Outer corridor. Inner wall. S. face. Bottom tier. 2nd niche W. of S.E. corner.

The predella shows a king in the centre, facing left, between 4 monks. All are seated in worship. Gotama sits on double lotus, without usṇīṣa.

(c) Outer corridor. Inner wall. E. face. 3rd tier from the ground. Niche near N.E. corner.

The centre panel of the predella shows a man (?) seated, facing right in worship. Floral fountains fill the two side-panels. Gotama sits on double lotus, without usṇīṣa.

Plate 317. Buddha (?) in padmāsana on double lotus. Right hand against breast, left in lap. No usṇīṣa.

The predella shows 4 men seated in worship, facing each other. Čṛṇā visible, but no usṇīṣa.

(b) Outer corridor. Inner wall. W. face. 2nd tier. Niche near S.W. corner.

The predella shows 4 monks seated in worship, facing each other, with foliated stem in centre. No usṇīṣa.

(c) Outer corridor. Inner wall. S. face. 3rd tier. Niche near S.W. corner.

The predella shows 2 monks (?) seated on the left, facing 2 Devas (?) seated on the right, all in worship. Branching stem in centre. No usṇīṣa.

The predella shows 2 monks seated on the left, facing 2 Devas or kings seated on the right, all in worship.

Plates 318 to 323. SCULPTURES IN CROSS-PASSAGES.

See Text, Ch. XVIII, pp. 368–370.

Plate 318. Life of the Buddha (i).

(a) Outer wall. W. face. 2nd cross-passage. N. side.

Upper panel: Bodhisattva seated on pedestal in lalitāsana, varadamudrā, between a kneeling woman (left) and 2 children (right). All have haloes.

Lower panel: 4 tall Devas kneeling in prayer.

Possibly the scene is that of Setaketu's acceptance, in Tusita, of the universal request of gods and men, that he should be reborn as a man and attain Buddhahood. Cf. Pl. 278 a.
(b) Outer wall. N. face, 6th cross-passage. W. side.
Upper panel: a large Buddha seated in \textit{padmásana}, \textit{dhyānamudrā}, between two leafy trees. On the left sits a king, on the right a queen (?), in pose of converse (?).
Lower panel: 2 boys (left) and 2 girls (right) seated in worship. Post in centre.

The scene might illustrate the Miracle at the Ploughing Festival, where the Child (here magnified) was deserted by his nurses, but the Rose-apple Tree's shade did not move. Suddhodana and Pajāpati, hearing of the miracle, came to worship the child. Cf. Pls. 141 b, 283 c.

(c) Inner wall. W. face. 3rd cross-passage. N. side.
The Bodhisattva, with conspicuous \textit{jaṭāmukūṭa}, seated in \textit{dhyānamudrā} on pedestal under carved gable-roofs.
The scene may be on the eve of the Great Departure, when, after bathing, as he sat meditating in his pleasance, Indra sent Vissukamma to dress his hair royally for the last time. Cf. Pl. 247 c.

(d) Outer wall. S. face. 1st cross-passage. E. side.
Top of reredos broken off. Gotama sits, with \textit{ūrṇā} and \textit{uṣṇīṣa}, in \textit{dhyānamudrā} on double lotus. Two boyish Devaputtas press tubes behind his ears, instilling ambrosia. – The scene is the \textit{Dukkhabariya} or Fast. Cf. Pls. 141 d, 292 c.
\textit{Neg. 1617 (1916–17).}

(e) Outer wall. W. face. 1st cross-passage. N. side.
The Buddha sits in \textit{dhyānamudrā} on throne under a vast beaded halo. A hermit with two-horned headdress sits in worship on either side of him. – Perhaps this scene is the Conversion of \textit{Uruvela Kassapa} and his brothers.

(f) Outer wall. N. face. 2nd cross-passage. W. side.
The Buddha sits under a large halo (now broken) in \textit{padmásana} on throne; his right hand drooped, palm open, in \textit{varada mudrā}; his left, perhaps in \textit{vitarkamudrā}, before the breast. On either side a woman kneels in prayer. – We take this to be the scene at Vesāli, when \textit{Pajāpatī Gotami} at last obtained the Buddha's consent for women to enter the Order as nuns. Strictly speaking, they should have had their heads shaved before getting the Buddha's consent.
\textit{Neg. 1616 (1916–17).}

\textbf{Plate 319. Life of the Buddha (ii).}

(a) Inner wall. S. face. 3rd cross-passage. W. side.
The Buddha stands on double lotus in walking pose, left hand raised to left shoulder, robe swinging to that side. On each side stands a young layman with knotted girdle, hands in worship.
– Possibly this scene shows the conversion of \textit{Yasa} and his friends, early converts of the Buddha.

(b) Inner wall. E. face. 1st cross-passage. N. side.

(c) Outer wall. N. face. 5th cross-passage. E. side.

Taming of Nālāgiri elephant. The Buddha is in walking pose, left hand raised before the body, robe swinging to that side, right hand hanging as if to stroke the raised trunk of the elephant, whose other head crouches at his feet. A monk with almsbowl stands impassive on either side. Note the ‘wooden’ treatment of this stone relief. Cf. Pls. 141 f, 245 d, 312 c, 410 f. Neg. 1610 (1916–17).

(d) Outer wall. E. face, 1st cross-passage. N. side.

(e) Inner wall. E. face. 2nd cross-passage. N. side.

Parinirvāṇa. The Buddha lies hieratically, head to left, on tilted couch with beading. Between the legs of the couch is carved an elaborate floral pattern. Below the couch is a danda-dīp, with two praying monks seated on either side of it. Above the Buddha, the bare arch of the reredos, now broken. Cf. the broader and more elaborate stone reliefs in the Nagayōn and Nanda Halls: Pls. 194 b, 302 a, b, c, d. Cf. Neg. 1629 (1916–17).

Plate 320. Unidentified scenes.

(a) Outer wall. S. face, 1st cross-passage. W. side.

Under a fine tree branching like a fountain, a high-crowned queen with royal ornaments is seated sideways on a throne, facing left. She is handing a bag of money (?) to a prince (with jaṭāmukuta and knotted girdle), who stands on the left with hands raised to receive it. On the right, behind the queen, a woman-attendant sits in worship. Neg. 1615 (1916–17).

(b) Outer wall. N. face. 1st cross-passage. E. side.

(c) Outer wall. E. face, 2nd cross-passage. S. side.

(f) Outer wall. S. face. 4th cross-passage. W. side.
A room with three orders of arching, and radiating window (?) in back centre. In the foreground two royal figures seated facing each other. On the higher throne, to the left, sits a robed figure with combed and knotted hair – probably a queen, but crownless. On the lower throne, to the right, sits a crowned king or Deva, with hands raised as if making request.

Plate 321. Jātaka scenes (i).

(a) Outer wall. W. face. 5th cross-passage. N. side.
Stout figure, probably a woman, with combed hair, large ear-tubes and navel showing, seated on a low pedestal under a tree on the left. She is in converse with a standing king or Deva on the right. – Is this an illustration of the Kaṭṭhahārī Jātaka, No. 7, telling the loves of Brahmadatta, king of Benares, and the faggot-gatherer? – A similar tale recurs in the Sakuntalā story of the Mahābhārata; also the Thambhula/Kyanzittha romance in Burma, and elsewhere.

(b) Outer wall. S. face. 5th cross-passage. W. side.
Left: a small leafy tree with Monkey in it.
Centre: a rock in a river, with (male) crocodile on it, and (female) crocodile below.
Right: a large branching tree on the further side of the river. – Clearly this illustrates Vānarinda Jātaka, No. 57.

(c) Outer wall. W. face. 3rd cross-passage. S. side.
Two kings – Brahmadatta of Benares and Mallika of Kosala – with umbrellas and drivers, riding on their respective horse-chariots, meet head on. Consort of clouds above. – See Rājovāda Jātaka, No. 151.
Neg. 1608 (1916–17).
Plate 322

(d) Inner wall. E. face. 1st cross-passage. S. side.
On the left, a strong standing figure, headless – Sakka (or Indra). On the right, the wise Hare in the furnace of the burning coals. – See Sasa Jātaka, No. 316.

(e) Outer wall. S. face. 4th cross-passage. E. side.
Upper panel: a ‘two-horned’ hermit, Mahākañcana, seated in dharmacakra mudrā on a pedestal, between a similar hermit, Upakañcana, and Sakka (Indra), both seated in prayer.

(f) Outer wall. E. face. 5th cross-passage. N. side.
Top broken but not lost. Square-pillared hall with crenate bargeboard, pointed roof and finial, looped frieze and tasselled capitals. The Mahābrahma Mātaṅga standing on the left, right hand before breast, left hand touching the knee of the female figure, Ditthamangalika, seated on throne on the right, her hands raised before her breast. – See Mātaṅga Jātaka, No. 497.

Plate 322. Jātaka scenes (ii).

(a) Outer wall. W. face. 6th cross-passage. N. side.

(b) Outer wall. W. face. 6th cross-passage. S. side.
Three bushy trees in background. In right centre, enthroned in front of a portico, a Deva (?), with jaṭāmukuta but no ornaments, sits in dhyānamudrā. On the left, two women kneel towards him in prayer, facing front. On the right kneels in prayer a king with kirītamukuta. – Can this be the scene in Sudhābhojana Jātaka, No. 535, when Mātali, sent by Sakka, calls on the hermit Maccharikosiya to choose between Sakka’s four daughters: Āsā, Saddhā, Sirī and Hiri? – Very doubtful.

(c) Outer wall. W. face. 2nd cross-passage. S. side.
A great Deva sits central in the clouds in dhyānamudrā. Below, a woman (?) on the left faces a crowned king on the right, both seated in worship. – Possibly this is the scene in Nāradakassapa Jātaka, No. 544, when Rujā fails to convince her father, king Aṅgati of Videha; and Nārada, the great Brahmā, “stands in the sky” and frightens him with the pains of hell. But if so, one would expect Nārada to appear, either disguised as a hermit, or four-faced as a Brahmā.

Upper panel: a royal person seated in ardhaparyāṅkāsana, right hand before body, left resting on pedestal. A lady on either side is seated sideways in worship, but facing front.
Lower panel: on the left, an elephant and horse in profile; on the right, 2 men facing them, kneeling in worship.

Can this be Vessantara, with Phusati and Maddi, giving away 700 elephants, 700 horses, etc? See Cowell’s translation, Vol. VI, p. 261.

(e) Outer wall. N. face. 3rd cross-passage. W. side.

Top of backslab broken off. In the centre, waterpot raised in his right hand, stands Vessantara. With his left hand he holds Jāli, who is followed by Kanhājinā. He is about to pour water of dedication, and hand over his children to the stout brahman Jūjaka, standing on the left. – See Cowell, Vol. VI, pp. 280–3.

(f) Outer wall. N. face. 5th cross-passage. W. side.

A double arch formed by a branching tree. On the right, under the higher arch, stands the ‘two-horned’ hermit, Vessantara, bidding farewell. On the left, Jūjaka (head broken) is dragging off Jāli and Kanhājinā (centre), after tying their hands together. – See Cowell, Vol. VI, pp. 283–6.

Plate 323. Jātaka scenes (?) (iii).

(a) Outer wall. W. face. 1st cross-passage. S. side.

Top right corner broken. Under a gable-roof with corner-shields and pinnacle, sits on a pedestal the gilded figure of a ‘two-horned’ hermit, in padmāsana, dhyānamudrā. On the right, the gilded figure of a woman-hermit sits, also with ‘two-horned’ headdress, supporting with both hands a large bundle on her head. On the left sits a king or Deva in worship. – The scene may well be taken from Sambulā Jātaka, No. 519, with the leper-hermit Sothisena, his faithful wife Sambula, and Sakka (Indra). – See Cowell, Vol. V, pp. 48–52.

Top right corner broken. A ‘two-horned’ hermit stands in the centre, holding up in his right hand a water-goglet. With his left hand he holds the forearm of a beautiful young princess, wearing a coronet, elaborate headdress and ear-tubes. On the left side stands a fine young man with knotted girdle, holding a plantain-leaf fan in his left hand. His right hand is outstretched. He is about to be married to the princess. – Is the scene the marriage of Prince Siddhattha and Yasodharā? Or that of Saddhodana and Māyā?

Neg. 1612 (1916–17).

(c) Outer wall. N. face. 6th cross-passage. E. side.

A venerable bearded hermit sits in the centre, under an arching tree, in dhyānamudrā. Seated in worship sideways facing him, sit a young man and a young woman. – Is this part of the marriage scene presented in (b) of this plate?

(d) Outer wall. S. face. 5th cross-passage. E. side.

In a gabled portico, and almost touching the roof, sits a tall hermit, ‘two-horned’, on a massive throne, in dhyānamudrā. On either side sit two tiers of persons facing him: top left, a king or Devā; top right, a woman-hermit(?) – these in conversation; in the lower tier, two women-hermits, worshipping.

Plates 329 to 334. Ground-Plinth Tablets.

See Text, Ch. XVIII, pp. 359-362.

Note. We now descend to the ground-plinth, with their two series of terracotta tablets, inscribed in Mon. One series, on the W. side of the temple, between the S. and N. entrances, shows the animals and monsters of Māra’s army who attacked Gotama on the eve of his attaining Buddhahood. The other series, on the E. side, between the N. and S. entrances, shows the celestial beings celebrating the Buddha’s victory. The legends at the base of the tablets repeat themselves over and over again; and I regret that I am unable to locate exactly where each is to be found. These ground-floor plaques, whose vocabulary and pictures are particularly precious, have suffered more than any others from the modern disease of whitewashing. To prove this, one has only to compare photographs taken in 1905–06 with any of the rest (except those kept in the museums) taken since the end of the second world-war. The photographs shewn below, except where otherwise stated, were taken by Tin Oo.

Note. This famous quadrilingual inscription, wrongly known as the Myazedi inscription, exists on two contemporary four-faced pillars. The smaller, but better-preserved one, Pillar A, is now Stone io at Pagán Museum. It stands 4 ft. 7 in. high; 14½ in. broad (N. & S.), and 14 in. broad (E. & W.). It was originally found on the N. side of the present Myazedi pagoda. The larger, finely engraved Pillar B was found in scattered fragments, now reassembled on the platform S. of the Myazedi pagoda. The Myazedi, a solid stupa, is a modern erection within the precincts of the old temple (gū) of Rājakumār. The contents of the inscription prove that the temple was built by Kyanzittha’s son, Rājakumār, c. 1113 A.D., shortly after the death of his father. The arrangement and measurements of the four faces on the two pillars is as follows:

[phot. Tin Oo]

For a reproduction in colour, see A. B. Griswold, Burma Korea Tibet (Art of the World, 1964), Pl. 9, p. 55. The upper line of gloss (not visible on this print) says: – “The devaputta Subrahmā with 500 women comes to listen to the Law, and attains the state of Stream-winner.” For the story, see Malalasekera, Vol. II, p. 1226.

(c) S. wall, W. of top of arch.
Neg. 3316 (1930-31).
The gloss at the base begins: – “King Ajātasatru comes....” Probably this refers to his visit by night, with Dr. Jivaka, to the Buddha in the Mango Grove at Rājagaha. See Malalasekera, Vol. I, pp. 31-32.

Plates 349, 350. Old Mon glosses below paintings on sides of archway leading to Shrine.
[phot. Tin Oo]
The Mon text of these and the other ink-writings in this temple is edited in full in Vol. II of the Bulletin of the Burma Historical Commission, from p. 331 onwards. Of the glosses here illustrated (mostly concerned with the coming of Buddhism to Ceylon, according to the Mahāvaṃsa), we give only the bare translations, together with the serial number of each gloss as printed in the Bulletin.

Plate 349.

(a) Gloss 185. The Buddha’s first visit to Laṅkā (S. wall. Tier A).
   “At the site of Nāgavana garden, all the spirits [Yakkhas] who dwelt in Laṅkā were about to fight. The lord Buddha stations himself in the sky above, produces a hurricane, creates darkness, and frightens them (till) they beg release from terror.”
(b) Gloss 186. The Buddha’s first visit to Lāṅkā cont.

“In the island of Lāṅkā the lord Buddha spreads his leather mat. That leather mat extends further and further. Those spirits [Yakkhas] dwelling in the island of Lāṅkā descend into the water of the ocean up to their necks. He frightens them once more (†)”

(c) Gloss 190. The Buddha’s visit to Nāgādīpā (S. wall. Tier B).

“In Nāgādīp two Nāga kings, nephew and uncle, were about to fight. The lord Buddha came and confronted (?) the two Nāga kings, and warned and reconciled them again to one another.”

“This is king Kāla, king of the Nāgas. He creates a likeness of the Buddha, and shows it to king Dhammāsok” (Aśoka).

Plate 350.

(a, b) Gloss 194. Dhammāsok sends gifts to Devānampiyatis (S. wall. Tier E).

“In the island of Śīṅghal [Ceylon], it was king Devānampiyatis who was reigning. He was a friend of king Dhammāsok. King Dhammāsok sent him ornaments of sovrainty, (including) three shoulder-loads of water of Anowatāt [Anavatapta Lake], and other valuables also. He said to his friend: – ‘These Three Refuges – may he make his real harbour therein!’ After that, king Devānampiyatis went hunting in the forest, and had his private interview with (?) the reverend Maheśaṁhin [Mahinda]. The reverend one called the king and asked him the question about the Mango Tree. After that, the king came to welcome him, and took him back to the city.”

“In the city of Indapathanagr [Delhi ?], king Dhanañjay of the Korappa dynasty observed the Law of the Kurus. Even as he observed it, these ten persons also observed it. At that time, in the (capital) city of Kālinga kingdom, rain had not fallen for twelve years. The king sent (persons) to come and ask for the Elephant. But though the Elephant duly came, the rain still did not fall. They then came and wrote down the Law (which) that king observed, and came back home and observed it. Thereupon the rain fell and the famine cleared.”

Plate 354. Paintings on the E. wall of Shrine.
(a) Dussa Thūpa in Brahmaloka (top tier, S. side).

"A thūpa built in the Brahma-world by Ghaṭikāra, enshrining the garments worn by the Buddha at the time of his Renunciation" (Malalasekera, Vol. I, p. 1100). The fragmentary Mon inscription below the painting reads as follows: – "The ...... of the lord Buddha which remain in Brahmaloka, worshipped at all times by all the Brahmas who dwell in Brahmaloka."
(b) Vejayanta pāsāda of Sakka in Tāvatīṁśa (top tier, centre).
Painting (top part only) above the Buddha seated in the centre. (See Malalasekera, Vol. II, p. 915). The fragmentary Mon inscription below (2nd line, S. side) reads as follows: – "…………... (in) Tāvatīṁśa on the [throne] Paṇḍukambala, under the Coral Tree Pārikajāṭ [Pāricchattaka, Erythrina indica], in Vejayanta pavilion of Sakra king of Devas, [the lord Buddha] preached the Abhidhamma..." etc.

(a) Top tier, 3rd panel from S. W. corner.
Gloss: – "8th nipāta. Kaccāyanagotta Jātaka [The Bodhisattva] was king In [Indra]." i.e. Kaccāni Jātaka, No. 417 (first in the 8th Nipāta). The gloss is in Old Mon.

(a) 6th tier, panels (4 scenes) from S.W. corner. Mahājanaka Jātaka.

(b) 7th tier, 8th scene from S.W. corner. Suvanāsāma Jātaka.

The Burmese writing below is crushed and faint: “The Bodhisattva makes his mother and father stay in the hermitage. He draws water and gives them to drink. He searches for fruits and gives them to eat. King Pilayak leaves the village and goes hunting and eating deer. On seeing the Bodhisattva, and wanting to know (who he is), he shoots an arrow just as he was drawing water and drinking it. When king Pilayak knows that the Bodhisattva is dead, he raises the palms of his hands above his head and weeps.” ... See Cowell, Vol. VI, pp. 42 follg. Cf. Ba Shin, op. cit., pp. 60, 98, 129.

(c) 10th tier, 4th scene from S.W. corner, on the S. side of the arch-window.

Candakumāra (or Khandahāla) Jātaka. — The Burmese gloss, here large and clear, reads: “The brahman called Kandahāl is taking the king’s beloved wives and children, his elephants, horses, buffaloes, cattle and goats, to give them as food to the fire.” ... See Cowell, Vol. VI, pp. 70 follg. Cf. Ba Shin, op. cit., pp. 60, 98, 129.

   (1957–58).
   This inscription, the northernmost in Old Mon yet discovered, records the building of a baddhasim, or permanent Buddhist Chapterhouse, at the site with the permission of the Pagán mahāthera and the king of Pagán (Shin Arahan and king Kyanzittha ?).
(b) Old Mon inscription on a brick from a ruined pagoda on Kyündaw island (Old Burm. Prañlawśā klīwān) in the Irawady, 4 miles below Mi-gyaung-yè, Magwé district. 5 lines.

See Text, Ch. VI, p. 105.

Our print is taken from rubbings kindly supplied with transcription, by Mon Bo Kay of the Burma Archaeological Department.

This inscription, together with many at Pagán, marks the western limits (so far as we know at present) of written Mon, apart from a few votive tablets left at Bodhgaya in India. The writing is in good 11th century cursive of rather an archaic type.

c) Old Burmese inscription on a brick from a ruined shrine in a field S. of Shwehsandaw pagoda, Pagan. 2 lines.

See Text, Ch. VII, p. 123.

Our print is taken from a photograph generously supplied by the Government of Ceylon, together with relevant volumes of Epigraphia Zeylanica. The inscription, first edited by H. C. P. Bell in 1892 (Archaeological Report on the Kegalla District, Ceylon Government Sessional Papers, No. XXX of 1892, pp. 73-76), has been re-edited, with facsimile plate, by Dr. S. Paranavitana in Epig. Zeyl. Vol. III, Part 6, pp. 312-325: “No. 34, Devanagala rock inscription of Parākramabāhu I.” It is dated in the 12th year of that monarch, 1165 A.D. Compare also the longer account of the invasion of Burma in Ch. 76 of the Cūḷavamsā (13th century A.D.).

Plates 400 to 406. ‘ANDAGU’ (DOLOMITE ?) STONE PLAQUES carved with the Eight Scenes (and Seven Sites).

See Text, Ch. IX, pp. 151-153.

Plate 400. (full pl.). Stone plaque found in Sept. 1922 by Shwé Mya of Nyaung-u West village, in a field close to the Shwēzigōn pagoda, Pagán. It is now thought to be lost. It measured 8½ in. high by 6½ in. broad.

Neg. 2304 (1922-23). See ASB 1923, Pl. II, fig. 1, and pp. 30-31; 1959, p. 89, fig. 59; ASI 1923, Pl. XXXIII (d) and p. 123.

The Eight Scenes are arranged as follows: – Cetiya and Parinirvāṇa at the top. Nālāgiri Elephant, First Sermon, and Nativity, in tiers down the left side. Descent from Tāvatiṁśa, Twin Miracles, and Pārīleyyaka monkey, in tiers down the right side. Large in the centre sits the Crowned Earth-touching Buddha. Two Bodhisattvas, Maitreya and Padmapañi, stand on either side of the Buddha. Above them, a forest of figures indicates the Assault of Māra. Below, two Nāgas support the Buddha’s lotus throne. In the bottom corners four dancing women represent the Temptation by Māra’s daughters. In bottom centre Elephant and lions crouch on guard.
Plate 401. (full pl.)

The arrangement is as follows: – Under the Cetiya and Parinirvāna at the top, an archway of peepal foliage shades the main figure – a Crowned Earth-touching Buddha, seated between two standing Bodhisattvas, with Māra and his demons possibly above them. Two wide-straddling Nāga kings support the lotus-throne, framed at the sides with Elephant, Vyāla, and Makara superposed. Beyond the Bodhisattvas at each side, are two columns of figures in four tiers. The top three tiers of the two outer columns present the usual six Scenes: on the left, Nālāgiri Elephant, First Sermon, and Pārīleyyaka retreat; on the right, Descent from Tāvatirtha, Twin Miracles, and Nativity. In the lowest tier, Mucalinda Nāga sheltering the Buddha on the right, and the Fast or Dukkhacariya on the left. The two inner columns show Standing Buddhas in the top tier; Buddhas seated, without almsbowls, in dhyanamudrā under trees, in the 2nd tier; Buddhas in dhyanamudrā also in the 3rd tier; but here the one on the left has the almsbowl (? Sujātā’s offering), and the one on the right is sheltered once again by the Mucalinda Nāga. In the 4th tier there are just two saints, probably Sāriputta and Moggallāna, kneeling in prayer. A crouching elephant and lions guard the base.

See ASI 1930-34, Part I, p. 180 (items 4 and 5), and Part II, Pl. C (d, c).

(a) Neg. 3394 (1930-31).

“A small sculptured stone slab illustrating the eight principal scenes from the life of the Buddha, recovered from among the debris of a ruined temple.... N. of Tawya-yaung monastery.” (U Mya’s Plate C d). “Total height: 3½ in.”

Below Cetiya and Parinirvāna bier at the top, a large-leaved peepal tree spreads an arch above the Buddha, seated as a monk, uncrowned, on leather mat, touching Earth. He has the uṣṇīṣa, and ānūṇā above the joined curves of his eyebrows. Two straddling figures below support the corners of the lotus throne. A childlike Bodhisattva stands on either side, with (possibly) Māra above on the left and two demons on the right. There is only one column of side-scenes on each side: on the left, Nālāgiri Elephant, First Sermon, and Pārīleyyaka retreat; on the right, Descent from Tāvatirtha, Twin Miracles, and Nativity. Elephant and lions guard the base. – This plaque is, pretty certainly, crude local work, though based on North Indian models. Before assigning these ‘andagu’ plaques to either country, one would like to identify the stone (translated ‘dolomite’ in the dictionaries), and know whether it is found in central Burma.

(b) Neg. 3402 (1930-31).

“5. Another slab of stone sculpture of the same type as No. 4, but larger in size. It measures 6½ in. in height, and contains additional scenes, the number of scenes being fourteen instead of eight as ordinarily represented (Plate C c).”
The surface of the plaque is worn; and while it is larger than (a), there are four tiers and double columns on each side; so that the scenes are crushed, and admit only a single figure, usually a Buddha in one of his normal attitudes. This makes several of the scenes hard to identify except by comparison with other stone plaques (see Pls. 401, 403 a, b and 405).

Cetiya and Parinirvana scene fills the top, as usual. In the centre the Buddha sits touching Earth between standing Bodhisattvas. The lotus throne is supported by straddling figures. Elephant and lions guard the base. The arrangement of the six side-scenes, outer columns, corresponds to that on Pls. 403 a, b and 405, with the Nativity on the left edge and Pārīleyyaka on the right; not to that on Pl. 401, where these positions are reversed. Here, too, the Buddha is robed as a monk, not crowned as a king in Pl. 401. The scenes on the inner columns roughly agree with all the others: standing Buddhas in the top tier (the one on the left, as in Pls. 403 a and 405, probably has both hands in vitarkamudrā); seated Buddhas in dhyanamudrā, without bowl, in the 2nd tier; with bowl, in the 3rd tier (sheltered by Mucalinda Nāga on the right). In the 4th tier, inner column, there are praying monks, as in Pls. 401 and 403 a, b; in the outer column, as in Pl. 403 a, a pair of seated Bodhisattvas.

Plate 403.

(a) Neg. 953 B (1962).

Stone plaque from Myinpagān, with bottom left corner lost. See ASB 1923, Pl. III, fig. 1, and pp. 30–31. “For purposes of comparison”, says Duroiselle, “I reproduce ... a similar slab of stone measuring 7 in. by 6 in. It may now be seen in the Museum, Pagān. Originally, it was found in the possession of a Buddhist monk at Myinpagān, according to whom it was discovered while clearing the débris in the relic chamber of a ruined pagoda” near the village... The central figure is broken across the waist.....”

The arrangement of this four-column plaque is almost the same as that in Pl. 402 b. Apart from the loss of the bottom left-outer figure (probably a seated Bodhisattva balancing its fellow on the other side), it is less damaged and broader, the inner columns being stepped up to prevent confusion with the outer. Under the Parinirvāṇa bier, the arching peepal merges on both sides into a jungle of Māra’s army, above the pair of graceful standing Bodhisattvas. The monk Gotama, touching Earth, is backed with hansa-shouldered architecture, as in many sculptures of Kyanaizitha’s reign. In the top corners are Devas flying in the clouds. The standing Buddhas of the top inner tier are distinguished: if the one on the left is in double vitarkamudrā, the one on the right stands in abhayamudrā. Minute but clear detail makes this intricate stone carving a joy to the eye.

(b) Neg. 3142 (1928–29).

Stone plaque unearthed at a mound E. of Nyaunggwè S. village, Mandalay. See ASI 1929, Pl. LII (e) and p. 113. “Certain persons”, says Duroiselle, “digging for bricks at an old mound at Nyaunggon, Mandalay, discovered the fragments of a stone sculpture which were afterwards pieced together. The sculpture ... measures 7¾ in. in height, and is of exquisite workmanship.... It resembles very closely the fragment found at Sarnath by Mr. Oertel” [ASI 1905, p. 84, fig. 8], "and sculptures found at Pagán.... According to Dr. Vogel" [J.A.S.B. 1915, pp. 301–2], "who describes a similar sculpture from Ceylon, these Pagán sculptures may be assigned to the ancient Magadha country, i.e. Southern Bihar, and to about the 11th–13th century A.D. The sculpture at Mandalay was found with terracotta votive tablets of the Pagán type belonging to the 12th–13th century."

This tall narrow plaque is of the four-column type, with side-scenes meagre and crowded. The straddling Nāga kings supporting the lotus throne are conspicuous, displacing the additional 4th (bottom) tier. In the 3rd (outer) tier the Nativity is shown on the left, corresponding (no doubt) to the Pārileyyaka scene on the right; the latter is lost except for the feet of the Buddha, who doubtless was shown sitting in pralambanāsana.

This broad and beautiful plaque, with its abundance of detail almost intact, is of the two column type, i.e. presenting the Eight Scenes but not the Seven Sites. In the Nativity (bottom left), Pajāpati stands gracefully on the right of Māyā; on the left, the Babe is taking his first steps. Tiers of Devas frame the Buddha preaching his First Sermon (mid left), with Wheel (full face) and Deer affronted below. The Nālāgiri elephant (top left) is shown on the inner side of the walking Buddha. In the Descent from Tāvatimśa (top right), Brahmā and Indra are shown, with a dancing Devi above the latter, and Sāriputta half-kneeling below. In the scene of the Twin Miracles (mid right), two small nirmanā-Buddhas are shown in pralambanāsana, with flying gods above them, on either side of the Buddha seated crosslegged in dharmacakra mudrā. In the Pārileyyaka scene (bottom right), the Monkey is seen gambolling in the trees above, approaching the Buddha from the left with the gift of honeycomb, and (probably) falling head foremost down a well on the right. In the Parinirvāṇa (top), the Cetiya fills the peak; Ánanda kneels weeping below the Sāla tree on the right. The Earth-touching Buddha (centre) is robed as a monk, has his ūrṇā and flame-tipped usṇīṣa, and sits against a background of hamsa-shouldered architecture, set within the living arch of peepal, Māra’s monsters, and a slim pair of Bodhisattvas; who both stand in abhayamudrā, making their bends adornings. Exquisite, too, is the grace of the two Nāga kings, striding and straining forward with their tilted crowns and ear-lobes, to uphold the lotus.

[phot. by courtesy of U Öhn Maung, Yamethin]

Another specimen, mostly well-preserved, of the four-column type, but narrow, so that the side-scenes are meagre, and confined usually to a single figure apiece. The three aspects show how the planes recede from the centre to the edges; so that the inner columns, seen in the round, are more distinct from the outer, than one might think from the purely frontal view. One notices also the soft roudure of the Buddha-type in these ‘andagu’ slabs, so different from the strong tall torsoes of the early terracotta plaques of the ‘Aniruddha type.’ The latter appear to stem from East Bengal models. Whether the ‘andagu’ slabs are of similar origin, is a moot point. A similar difference makes itself felt between the sculptural types affected by Aniruddha, and those favoured by Kyanzittha.

Plate 406.

(a) Neg. 4131 (1938–39).

‘Andagu’ fragment found in a field near an old tank S.E. of the Nanda enclosure-wall, Pagán. See Lu Pe Win, ASB 1939, Pl. IV a, and p. 9.

This fragment appears to come from the top right corner of a stone plaque carved with the ‘Eight Scenes’ and ‘Seven Sites.’ It includes the right side of the arch enshrining the central Buddha, now lost. At the base is the slim Bodhisattva standing in abhaya mudrā. Above him are two soldiers of Māra’s army, attacking. On the right, are two tiers of scenes, perhaps from an ‘inner column’ showing the Seven Sites: – above, a haloed Buddha standing on double lotus, his inner hand raised in abhaya mudrā, his outer drooped (perhaps in varada mudrā; below, a haloed Earth-touching Buddha (not in dhyāna mudrā, as is usual).

(b, c) Miniature model (fragmentary) in ‘andagu’ stone of the Śikhara of the Śrī Vajrāsana (Mahābodhi) temple, at Bodhgaya in India. Obtained from a monk at Shwegyaung monastery, N. of the circular brick tank, Taungbi village. Now in the possession of U Tin Aye, headmaster of the Lacquer School, Pagán. Height 4 (+) in. Breadth at base 2 in.

(b, c) – Front and Corner aspects. [phot. Ba Shin]

Note the āmalaka fruits at each alternate corner-tier, and at the top. For a similar miniature of the Bodhgaya temple, in bronze, see ASI 1928, Pl. LVII (a) and p. 184. It was found in 1927 at Jhewari in Chittagong district, together with 61 Buddhist images, etc., “the biggest hoard of images ever found in Bengal... [They] belong to the Mahāyāna form of Buddhism prevalent in this part from the 7th-11th centuries A.D. Stray examples of Buddhist cult images have been recently recovered in Chittagong, but the present find proves the existence of a local centre of Buddhist art forming a valuable link in the chain of its development and its migration to Burma. Some of the specimens show clear affinities to the bronze images of the Nalanda school, certain others to Burmese bronzes. Thirty-three of the images represent Buddha in the bhūmisparśa mudrā, the heights ranging from $15\frac{1}{2}$ in. to $2\frac{1}{2}$ in. Other important objects... are a miniature of the Mahābodhi shrine at Bodhgaya studded with semi-precious stones of which some are still left, and approximately assignable to the 10th century A.D., and a votive stupa crowned by two umbrellas.” For a different miniature model of a Bodhgaya śikhara, see Pl. 427 c, infra.

MISCELLANEOUS IMAGES, mostly stone reliefs now at Pagán Museum.

Plate 407.

(a, b, c). The Enlightenment. – 3 relief-sculptures in soft sandstone, now at the E. shed, Pagán Museum.

They show the Buddha seated on double lotus in padmāsana, touching Earth. Right shoulder bare. Left shoulder-flap clear, and two hems above the ankles. Flame-niche above the uṣṇīṣa.
Back-slab bare except for the chattrā, faintly visible at the peak. The image-style may be called 'Old Mon', of the solemn early 'Aniruddha type', with tall torso and long fingers and toes delicately carved.

Height about $31\frac{1}{2}$ to $33\frac{1}{4}$ in. Breadth at base $20$ to $21\frac{1}{2}$ in. Depth at base $8\frac{1}{2}$ to $10\frac{1}{2}$ in.

(d) The Fast. – Relief-sculpture now at the E. shed, Pagan Museum. The Buddha sits in padmāsana, dhyāna mudrā, under a tree. No lotus mat. His ribs are conspicuous, and stomach indrawn. On each side of him stands a Deva in namaskāramudrā. In the predella sit 5 Devas offering lotus stalks.

(e) Relief-sculpture now at the E. shed, Pagan Museum. The Buddha sits in padmāsana, dhyāna mudrā, almsbowl in lap. No lotus mat. There is hamsa.shouldered architecture behind his beaded nimbus. In the predella sit 7 royal figures or Devas, making offerings (bowls of food ?). – Is the scene that of Bimbisāra’s offerings, when the Buddha visited Rājagaha after his Enlightenment? Height 34 in. Breadth at base 26\frac{3}{4} in. Provenance not stated. Top broken.

(f) Relief-sculpture now at the E. shed, Pagan Museum. The Buddha sits in padmāsana, dhyāna mudrā, almsbowl in lap. No lotus mat. There is hamsa.shouldered architecture behind him, with foliations. In the predella sit 8 royal figures, mostly offering bowls of food or flowers, the king in left centre upholding a document (?). – The scene, similar to (e) but better preserved, refers very likely to the same occasion, at Rājagaha, when Bimbisāra made his offering of the Veluvana (Bamboo Grove).

Plate 408 (a, b, c). The Enlightenment.

Negs. 2516, 2517, 2518 (1924–25).

A stone relief “found in a small ruined temple near the Ananda temple at Pagán.” See Duroiselle, ASB 1925, Pl. III, fig. 1 (side-view), and pp. 25–26; ibid., p. 54, No. 15, where it is said to have been “originally found in the Hna-kyeik-shit-su temple near the Ananda.” See also ASI 1925, Pl. XXXIV (h), and pp. 110–111. On p. 111 it is described, perhaps wrongly, as coming from the Kubyauk-gyi: there are several temples of this name at Pagán, but none, I think, that is near the Nanda; and comparison with ASB 1925, p. 54, Nos. 12–14, suggests to me that there has been a further confusion with Wet-kyi-in Kubyauk-ngè, i.e. Shwé Chaung Kubyauk-ngè.

The Buddha sits in padmāsana, touching Earth, on double lotus, against an architectural backslab, with lozenges (symbolizing the holy Rays) at the shoulders. The image is inscribed on the back.

(a) Front view.
(b) Side View.
(c) Rough Old Burmese inscription on the back: –

\[\text{pan phây sà nā (r)eñ “Nga Reñ, the blacksmith’s son” – presumably the donor.}\n
In style, one may class the image as Mon/Indian.
(d, e) Neg. 2038, 2039 (1919–20), Obv. and Rev.

Head and torso of an inscribed sandstone image of a smiling Buddha found within the precincts of Nanda temple. The left hand was probably in the lap. The large ears reach to the shoulders. The right arm is broken below the shoulder. The shoulder-flap is clear. Nimbus, vertical shoulder-gnomon, and plain square-pillared frame are seen on the right of the backslab. At ASB 1920, p. 33, Nos. 48–49 (List of photographs), and again in List of Archaeological Photo-Negatives of Burma, p. 26 (Nos. 2038, 2039), it is wrongly described as a “terracotta plaque.” The stone is now in the E. shed at Pagán Museum. The style is typically ‘Mon’.

Height 11½ in. Breadth 7½ in. Thickness 1½ in.

(e) The Reverse, shows the beginnings of 2 (or more) lines of Old Mon: –

(ढाँत्यात) ... wo su(n) .......

“Musician-dancer (?) ....... this ....... the sumbeñ (?) .......” – Perhaps the donor was a high Mon official called a ‘thambyin’.

Height 10 in. Breadth 5¼ in. Thickness 2½ in.

Markings: No. 9/55, 4/168.

(g) Neg. 2279 (1921–22).

Large brick and plaster image, typically ‘Mon’, of the Buddha seated in Earth-touching attitude. It is in Gu 2278, a furlong E. of Mingalazedi. The roof has now (1960) fallen in, and only parts of the top of the image down to the waist are visible. The top of the head is mostly gone, except for the brick backing and right ear, and the fine stone-tenon carved to form the smiling lips and chin.

Plate 409.

(a) Neg. 1744 (1917–18).

The Buddha sits in padmāsana, dharmacakra mudrā, on double lotus, against an architectural backslab with hamsas at the shoulders. Fine ‘Mon’ type.

Height 44 in. Breadth 27 in. Depth at base 9½ in. The ink writing at the side says it comes from “Wet-pyauk pagoda.” This name is not now known. Mon Bo Kay suggests that it may be an abbreviation of Wet [-kyi-in Ku-] pyauk [-ngê], i.e. Shwe Chaung Kubyauknge temple.

(b) Weather-worn stone relief of the Walking Buddha, now at the E. shed, Pagán Museum. The Buddha stands on double lotus stool against a back slab broken on both sides. His robe is swinging to the right. His right arm, hanging, is damaged below the elbow. His left hand is against the breast. Left shoulder-flap visible, right shoulder bare. ‘Mon’ type.
Height 32 in. Breadth of back-slab 16\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Depth at base 8 in.

(c) \textit{Neg. 3116 (1928–29).}
Terracotta image of \textit{Vessabhū} Buddha, found in relic-chamber of a mound in Aung Hla’s field S.W. of Htilominlo temple. See Duroiselle, \textit{ASI} 1929, Pl. LII (d), and pp. 109–111. The same relic-chamber contained two images of the Fat Monk (Pl. 91 a), and votive tablets of the Buddha seated between two “hermits, chiefs of the \textit{Saṅgha}” (Pl. 59 a, Mon/Pali gloss). The same mound contained several five-figure tablets signed by Aniruddha (Pl. 8 a). The unique image of Vessabhū, large-handed, which sits with high conical \textit{uṣṇīṣa}, on its bare pedestal touching Earth, “corresponds”, says Duroiselle, “in every detail to Gotama, the identity being revealed only by a two-line [Pali] inscription round the pedestal: – \begin{quote}
\textit{yo vessabhū sarādharo ca anantabuddhi sattuttamo desa[balo].... [dhamma]}

bare. Face and torso full and somewhat effeminate: in style quite different from the ‘Aniruddha Mon’ type, and perhaps rather later. But the carving of hands and toes still careful and delicate.

\textbf{Plate 410.}

(a) \textit{Neg. 3558 (1932–33).}
\textit{Suddhodana presents the Babe to Kālādeva.} The top part of this beautiful relief is lost, and much besides is damaged. Of the five figures shewn, all have lost their heads, except the bearded Rishi; and of his 'two-horned' headdress, part is damaged. Suddhodana and he kneel, knee to knee, in the centre. The king's hands support the body of the Child, and the Rishi's hands his feet. The Child sits up facing the Rishi, with left hand raised in abhayamudrā. Behind the king, kneels (probably) Pajāpati. Behind the Rishi, sits his little nephew, Nalaka. For the story, see Malalasekera's Dictionary of Pāli Proper Names, s. v. Asita. Height 23 (+) in. Breadth 23 in. Thickness 7\frac{1}{2} in.

(b) Terracotta image of the Buddha seated on his mat in padmāsana, dhyāna mudrā. Said to come from a ruined temple near the Hpetleik pagoda, Thiripyitsaya. Note the stout arms, legs and torso.

(c) The Tonsure. Stone relief with broken top, originally from the Shwé Chaung Kubyauk-ngè temple, Now at Pagán Museum.

Gotama sits in padmāsana on double lotus. He has undone his hairknot (contrary to the texts) and has his right arm high to cut it near the head, and his left hand low holding the end of the hair. Height 32 (+) in. Breadth 18 in. Thickness 8 in.

[phot. Tin Oo]

(d) Neg. 3182 (1929–30).

Yasodhara sends Rāhula to ask his father for his inheritance.

This fine stone relief, “found in a ruined temple” at Pagán, is badly damaged, the top, including the heads of the Buddha and Yasodharā, being lost. She stands in prayer on the left, with a little girl hiding behind her. Young Rāhula, with ear-tubes and coif, stands graceful and confident facing his father, who stands on the right with monastic robes outspread, holding his almsbowl before him. For the story, see Malalasekera's Dictionary, s. v. Rāhulamātā. Height 27 (+) in. Breadth at base 23\frac{1}{2} in. Thickness at base 6 in. Now at Pagán Museum.

[phot. Tin Oo]

(e) Visākhā and the elephant. (?)

The top of this weatherworn stone relief is lost. On the left is a small elephant being pushed back by the tusks (it seems) by a gigantic figure whose body is lost above the waist. The scene is watched by a row of 7 women with hairknots, shown on the predella. For the story, see Malalasekera's Dictionary, Vol. II, p. 902. The scene is also shown in painting, on the N. face of the archway leading to the shrine, in Rājakumār's Myinkaba Kubyaukgyi temple. (For the gloss, see Bull. Burm. Hist. Com. II, p. 402, no. 216).

Height 12 (+) in. Breadth 16\frac{1}{2} in. Thickness 7 in. Provenance not stated. Now at Pagán Museum.

[phot. Tin Oo]

with hamsa shoulders and lotus-leaf nimbus. A rug-fringe falls over the pedestal below the Buddha’s feet. – This image, Burmese, not Mon in style, may well belong to the latter part of the Pagan period. Height 42 in. Breadth 24\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Thickness 13 in. Provenance not stated.

Plate 411.

(b) Cf. Neg. 3926 (1936–37).

[phot. Tin Oo]

Stone Dyad relief. Found in a small temple “about 300 ft. to the W. of Kyazin” temple, Myinpagan. See Duroiselle, ASI 1937, p. 78, and Pl. XXX b.

On a ledge-mat edged with lotus leaf resting on a high double lotus pedestal, sit two figures, almost equal in height. On the left, slightly taller, sits the Earth-touching Buddha in padmāsana under an incised nimbus, his almsbowl perhaps resting on the large hand in his lap. On the right (the Buddha’s left) sits the Pyu type of the Bodhisattva Maitreya in rājalilā pose. He wears a pointed crown (kiritamukuta), hanging ear-ornaments, torque, upper armlets (keyūra), wristlets, anklets and sacred thread (upavīṭa). His right hand rests on his right knee, his left on his left thigh. At the back of both, there is a plain pointed backslab.

(c) Neg. 3466 (1931–32).

(d) Neg. 3185 (1929–30).

“A crowned Buddha standing on a lotus – both hands missing – found at a mound near Tawyagyaung,” Myinpagan. – See ASI 1930, Pl. XLI f, and p. 158. He stands with robes outspread on double lotus. His hollow arms are lost below the elbow; the hands were probably raised in some double mudrā (vitarka or abhaya ?). There is a plain arching backslab.

(e) Neg. 3415 (1930–31).

sculpture in relief with the upper portion missing was found among the débris inside a relic-chamber beneath the main pedestal on the ground floor of the temple. It contains in the centre an image of the Buddha seated cross-legged in the earth-touching attitude on a lotus throne. Flanking him are two Bodhisattvas, both seated in the lalitamudrā with the right leg pendent. Below the throne ... there are ten seated figures, nine ... in the namaskāra mudrā. The figure on the extreme right has a shaven head and is seated cross-legged in the bhūmisparśa mudrā.”

“Fragment of a stone sculpture in relief, showing a four-armed Bodhisattva flanked by two Śaktis, found in U Pyant’s field east of Seinnyet temple”, S. of Myinpagán. See Duroiselle, ASB 1938, Pl. II (b), and p. 8: — “The central figure is four-handed, but the head is missing and the legs have worn off. It is flanked by two females; the one on the left has become much damaged. In its present condition it is difficult to identify exactly the principal personage, who is a Bodhisattva attended by two Śaktis; thus, the sculpture is Mahāyānist in character and belongs to the 12th to 13th century.”

Crude stone statue, portrait-figure of a Donor (?). Found in “a circular mound of bricks measuring 50 ft. in diameter at the base with a height of 8 ft. in the centre. ... 2 furlongs N.W. of Kôktheinnayôn at Myinpagán.” See Duroiselle, ASI 1937, p. 77: — “(2) Stone figure (2 ft. 6 in. high) seated in the ‘adamantine pose’ with both hands brought together against the chest, palms inwards. He wears a belt round his waist and the usual ornaments round his neck; his hair is gathered in a low knot on the top of the head. This is probably a representation of the founder.”

[phot. Tin Oo]
(b) Stone plaque (damaged at top right corner), perhaps illustrating Sambula Jātaka (No. 519). On a long carved pedestal sit three figures: in the centre a bearded hermit (? Sotthisena) - head now lost - seated in padmāsana, touching Earth (?); on the left a king (? Sakka) in namaskāra mudrā; on the right a woman (? Sambula) with round ear-plugs, also in namaskāra mudrā. Cf. supra, Pl. 323 a. Height 13 (+) in. Breadth 15½ in. Thickness 43 in.

[phot. Tin Oo]

(c) Fragment of a small terracotta plaque, perhaps illustrating a Jātaka. No writing. On the left side (all that remains) stands a strong man wearing a waist-cloth with tassels on each side, and carrying with both hands a pole (?) behind his shoulders. Style rather similar to that of the Hpetleik Jātakas, but the size here is smaller. Height 11 in. Breadth 6¼ (+) in. Thickness 2¼ in.

[phot. Tin Oo]

(d) Right side of a large terracotta plaque in two fragments. It has Burmese markings in black ink - \(\frac{218}{61}\), (the top), and \(\frac{4}{296}\), (the bottom). There is no old writing. It was found at the side of the road, about 200 yards N. of Saw Lu Gôn, the junction with the road to Chauk of the side-road to Thiripyitsaya. It shows 8 or more men wearing striped waist cloths, and high-towered hair-knots with waving tassels, apparently dancing with swords and other weapons in each hand. Height 20½ in. Breadth 16½ (+) in. Thickness 3 in.

"A small stone Stūpa found within a relic-chamber of the mound in Shwé So's field N. of Sōmingyi pagoda." Now at Pagán Museum. See Duroiselle, ASI 1928, p. 124: - "Four feet from the top, there was found a miniature stone stūpa in a small brick chamber; this chamber was 2 ft. 6 in. in height ... The stūpa itself is 1 ft. 2 in. in height and 8 in. in diameter at the base. It consists of a dome resting on two circular terraces and surmounted by the diminishing rings that now represent the stone discs of the umbrella in old Indian stūpas, and crowned with an āmalaka. The dome together with the mouldings above is detachable from the terraces. Within the cavity in the latter were found some ashes ... and small caskets of extremely thin plates of gold and silver. On the four sides of the stūpa were found eight stone bricks, two on each side, one being laid over the other with, between them, two very thin plates, one of gold and one of silver..." The stone bricks measure 4 in. x 2 in. x $\frac{3}{4}$ in. For other miniature stone stupas at Pagán, compare ASI 1930–34, Part II, Pls. XCIX (e), CVII (b), CVIII (c).

(d) Stone Lotus finial, with overlapping petals and hollow centre. – From Hsutaungbyi pagoda, W. Pwazaw. Marking in black ink 260/62. Now at Pagán Museum. Height 6 (+) in. Circumference at base 15$\frac{1}{4}$ in. Diameter at base 4$\frac{1}{4}$ in. [phot. Tin Oo]

(a) Stone head of a Bodhisattva (or king or Deva), with high pointed kiritamukuta. Eye-ridges joined. Almond-eyes. Indian style. Now at Pagán Museum. [phot. Tin Oo]

(c) Stone head, with brow-arches, goggle-eyed, conical jatāmukuta. Now at Pagán Museum. [phot. Tin Oo]

(d) Headless Brahmanical seated image of light white stone. The god (? Viṣṇu) sits in padmāsana on fretted mat and thick squared double lotus throne. His right hand holds a rosary before the body; his left arm is broken, but the hand rests, palm upward, on the right sole. An incised hem of clothing falls diagonally from left shoulder to waist. The stone appears to have been integrated with pillar or backslab behind. Now at Pagán Museum. Height 5 (+) in. Breadth at base 4 in. Thickness at base 3 in. Compare Pl. 417 (a), infra. [phot. (e) A Chinese god (?), headless, with feet squared and ribbed standing on a bed of overlapping petals. Robes heavy, creased and tumbled, hooks and trinkets looping from the shoulders. Hands holding mace and paraphernalia. Now at Pagán Museum. [phot. Tin Oo]

BRAHMĀ.

(a) Neg. 1104 (1912–13). A stone relief, now at Pagán Museum. Brahmā seated in padmāsana, and doubtless namaskāra mudrā, on plain pedestal, against plain backslab. Top left corner of backslab broken. The god has the usual three fully visible heads
(the fourth invisible), and three broad jaṭāmukṭa merging into one – here a little damaged at the top.

(b) An almost identical stone relief image of Brahmā, but much better preserved. Now at the Indian Museum, Calcutta. The crowning double-lotus finial is clearer than in (a).

(c) Neg. 855 (1909–10).

Height 1 ft. 4 in. Breadth 1 ft.

Height 4 in. Breadth 3½ in.

Plate 417. VIṢṆU.

(a) Small sandstone image of four-armed Viṣṇu, seated, now at Pagan Museum. Provenance not known. He wears a pointed kirīṭa mukūṭa, and sits in pādāmāsana on fretted mat and thick squared double lotus and pedestal. In his upper right hand he holds the Wheel (cakra); in his upper left possibly the Club (gadā), but the backslab is damaged. He seems to hold a fruit in the lower right hand before the chest, and in the lower left, resting on the right sole, perhaps the Conch (śaṅkha). Compare Pl. 415 (d) supra.

Height 8 in. Breadth at base 5½ in. Thickness 4½ in.

[phot. Tin Oo]

(b) The top half of a much-weathered stone relief recently found on the Buddha’s throne in Pagan Shwegugyi. It seems likely to present the crowned head and torso of an ancient image of the four-armed Viṣṇu, such as one finds at several spots at Śri Kṣetra: see Neg. 621 (1908–09) from Pogaungkan; Neg. 784, 785 (1909–10) from Pokungôn; Neg. 3765 (1934–35) from E. Žegu. The attributes of the four arms in the Pagan sculpture are not easy to identify: the lower two are lost below the elbow. At Śri Kṣetra the two upper hands usually hold the Śaṅkha (Conch) and the Cakra (Discus): the lower left hand rests on the Gadā (Club), the lower right may hold a fruit (māṭulungā? or āmalaka?). Now at Pagan Museum.

double lotus and high indented throne, his right foot on the apasmāra puruṣa, lit. epileptic, the symbol of Dirt. See Duroiselle, ASI 1929, p. 112: "The image of Śiva was found ... close to a tank, where it was gradually exposed by flood. The figure is very much damaged. . . . It has four hands, but their attributes are defaced and cannot be made out. The stone measures 2 ft. 4 in. × 1 ft. 6 in. with a thickness about 9½ in." Cf. Ray, Brahm. Gods in Burma, Pl. XVII 22 and pp. 60–61, 92. Ray dates it 10th–11th century A.D. "The apasmāra-puruṣa," he says, is "known only in South India as associated with Śiva" (see Coomaraswamy, Hist. Ind. Indon. Art, p. 39 and ff. 242).

A weather-worn five-sided pillar-base, broken at the top. The five corners are each guarded by standing crowned Devas, probably Hindu, bearing clubs and other attributes (not clear). Found in a mound N. of Myinkaba Kubyauk-ngè temple.

Height 13½ (+) in. Breadth 5 to 6 in.

Plates 419 to 423. WOODCARVING (now at Pagan Museum).

Plate 419.

Descent from Tāvatiṁsa. On round double-lotus footstool, the Buddha stands as if walking, in graceful tribhāṅga pose, left hand swinging his robe at the shoulder, right hand broken at the elbow. Brahmā with broad triple jaṭāmukūṭa stands on the right (the Buddha’s left) in sunlight, holding the shapely chattrā above the Buddha’s head, casting a dome of shade. Leaning between them, is a neat little ladder, with rungs extended beyond the verticals, to simulate the triple staircase. On the other side Indra, with high coiled jaṭā within the kīrīṭamukūṭa, ear-plugs and ear-flaps soaring and sinking, torque, sash and tasselled waistcloth, holds the almsbowl. Sāri-putta, kneeling in sunlight at the Buddha’s feet, adds depth to the whole design. A low throne with inner band and two recessions to the sides, supports the group, and the bare, shouldered reredos arches it. – While closely following Indian models, the mastery of the local artist in woodcarving relief, is beautifully revealed. Height 27½ in. Breadth at base 17½ in. Thickness at base 8½ in. Height of Buddha 18½ in.

(b) Neg. 1101 (1912–13). Teakwood. Find-spot at Pagan not stated.

The Buddha standing between Sāriputta and Moggallāna. – Note the contrast between the intricate but powerful carving of the lower half, and the plain simplicity of the three holy figures, standing on lotuses above. At the base, a boldly modelled kīrīṭimukha holds in teeth and hands two twining lotus-stems with climbing ganas, which shoot up at the sides to form the pericarps, on which two childlike monks stand facing front, their robes spread open at the ankles. Their heads reach barely to the level of the Buddha’s waist. Their hands are joined in worship. On the broad arching back of the kīrīṭimukha, sit a lion and two vyālas, frontal and half-frontal. These, in turn, support the squared throne, projecting in the centre, retreating to the sides, and top and bottom. On it rests the round double-lotus footstool on which the straight-towering Buddha stands, robes widespread, right hand in varada mudrā, left before the body. The narrow nimbus, pointed at the peak, descends in steep, broadening steps to form the sides. – I do not know if any special scene in the Buddha’s life is here intended. Height 56 in. Max. breadth 22\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Thickness at base 7\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Height of the Buddha 30\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

(c) Neg. 1100 (1912–13). Teakwood gilded. Find-spot at Pagán not stated.

The Buddha standing between Sāriputta and Moggallāna. – As in (b), all three figures are straight and towering. Design similar to (b), but shorter and a little simplified. The Buddha’s nimbus has only one bend at the shoulders (its top right corner is lost). The lotus stems at the sides are not twined. There are no climbing gaṇas. – It is quite possible that (b) and (c) date from the latter (Burmese) part of the Pagán period. Height 49\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Breadth at base 18\(\frac{3}{4}\) in. Max. thickness at base 7\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Height of the Buddha 30 in.

Plate 420.

Wooden Buddha (or Monkey simulating a Buddha ?), dressed as a monk, with uṣṇīṣa and left shoulder-flap, seated on a thick waisted wooden stool in pralambānāsana, hands crossed against his breast. – Rather crude and perhaps late work.

(b) Wooden group-carving (Mahāyānist). – On a high recessed wooden throne with receding facets (damaged down the centre), sits, in the round, the Earth-touching Buddha, within a pointed openwork nimbus framed with worshippers. The lowest tier of the throne is borne on the heads of a line of elephants. At the bottom corners Devas support lotus-stalks and flowers, upon whose pericarps kneel the two aggasāvaka, Sāriputta and Moggallāna; their heads rise to the level of the Buddha’s elbows. Standing behind and above them are two Bodhisattvas, whose crowns (kīrtamukuta enclosing a lotus finial ?) are almost as high as the Buddha’s flame-niched uṣṇīṣa. The Bodhisattva on the left (the Buddha’s right) appears to be offering him a casket or a crown (?). – Is the scene that of the ‘Transfiguration of the Buddha’ (cf. B. Rowland, The Art and Architecture of India, Pl. 88 B), or that at the conclusion of the Lotus sūtra, when Gadgadaśvara and Avalokiteśvara offer the Buddha, in his sambhoga kāya, objects of adornment? See supra, Ch. X, p. 187.

Said to come from Halin. Now at Pagán Museum. Height 29 in. Breadth 16\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Thickness 7\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. [phot. Tin Oo]

Height 18 (+) in. Breadth 5 in. Thickness at base 4 in. [phot. Tin Oo]
(d) Weatherworn standing wooden Buddha-statue now at the E. shed, Pagán Museum. The Buddha has the usual long ears and usṇīṣa (no crown). He stands on a small rounded double-lotus pedestal. His robes hang open and even. His right hand hangs stiffly; his left is raised against the breast. Height 63\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Breadth (of robes) 18 in. Thickness (of pedestal) 9 in.

[phot. Tin Oo]

(e) Three gilded wooden Buddhas, one standing. Now at Pagán Museum.

[phot. Tin Oo]

On the left is a seated Buddha with high crown, probably touching Earth. He has a high kīrīṭamukūta, enclosing a still higher coiled jatā, topped with lotus and ‘plantain-bud’. The high rising and low falling ear-flaps are mostly lost on the right side; also the earth-touching hand, much of the crossed legs (apart from the soles); and the front of the pedestal eaten by insects. Left hand in lap complete. Height 44\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Breadth at shoulders 12\(\frac{1}{2}\) in.

On the right, better preserved, there is a similar but smaller crowned Earth-touching Buddha, seated in vajrāsana on double lotus. The statue is reddened and gilded. Above the high kīrīṭamukūta, the coiled headdress is lost; also most of the right ear-ornaments; and the fingers of the left hand are damaged. Otherwise, rather modern-looking. Below the torque, the dress is that of a monk. Height 30 (+) in. Max. breadth 14\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

Was this elaborate high style of royal headdress confined to wood-carving? For rather different styles in the stone sculptures of Nanda temple, see ASI 1914, Pls. XXXVIII, XXXIX.

In the centre, there is another standing wooden Buddha statue, similar to (d), but better preserved, and reddened and gilded. Lotus-stool and toes are damaged. Right hand hangs stiffly in varada mudrā; the left holds a piece of the lapel against the breast.

Plates 421, 422. Bodhisattva-Kings (?)

All now at Pagán Museum. They come from several different temples at Pagán. Most are approximately lifesize. Each appears to be carved from a single tree-trunk. All (if intact) wear pointed leaf-and-bud kīrīṭa crowns, enclosing coiled and tapering braided hair (jatā); also elaborate ear-plugs and ornaments, flame-edged torques, and a long open robe down to the ankles. All stand (or stood) on double lotus footstools. All droop their right hand stiffly in varada mudrā, and raise their left hand, palm inwards, against the breast.

See Text, Ch. XIV, p. 291, where “the 12 wooden carved figures” which Forchhammer found at Kyaukku frånmin, are discussed. The question is, are these wooden statues ordinary Bodhisattvas, or crowned Mahāyānist Buddhas? Or are they portrait-statues of dead Pagán royalty, idealized as Bodhisattva-kings in Devaloka, and placed perhaps in temples of their own building?

(b) Ink Nos. 24/55, 6/112. Also from Thingayaza pagoda, No. 347. Found in 1955. Feet below knees lost, also the jaṭā above the well-preserved kirtī. Right hand has only 3 fingers left. Left hand before the breast is complete, holding lapel of robe.
Total height 53 in. Breadth 14 in.

(c) No ink number. Crown and braided hair complete. Also right hand in varada mudrā. Left hand against breast mostly lost. Feet lost below the open robe, from the ankles downwards.
Total height 60 in. Breadth at shoulders 15\(\frac{3}{4}\) in.

(d) No ink number. Crown and braided hair complete, also left hand. Right hand lost. Top half of lotus-stool remains.
Total height 75\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Breadth at shoulders 15\(\frac{1}{2}\) in.

(e) No ink number. Badly weathered. Nothing left below robe. 4 fingers of right hand remain, and 3 of the left.
Height 61\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Breadth 12\(\frac{3}{4}\) in.

(f) No ink number. Kirtī complete. Jaṭā above it lost. Feet mostly lost below ankles. Right arm lost from shoulder. Left arm before breast complete.
Height 63 in. Breadth at shoulders 13\(\frac{3}{4}\) (+) in.

Plate 422.

(a) One of the better-preserved statues. Found in 1928 at Hnit-kyeik-shit-su pagoda, with single entrance, N. of Min-o-CHANtha pagoda. Crown and hair-braid nearly complete. Front half of feet and lotus-stool lost. Right-hand lacks thumb; left hand lacks top of forefinger.
Height 69 in. Breadth at shoulders 15 in.

(b) The best preserved of all. Slight damage to nose and top of hair-braid. Otherwise complete down to double-lotus stool. Ear-flaps and ornaments especially good; also the hands. Left hand holds the lapel.
Total height 74 in. Breadth at shoulders 17 in. Marked “VI 2” (but register lost).

(c) Identified as “1922. – No. 95. From the Ānanda.”
Statue painted red and gilded. Height almost complete down to double-lotus stool. Ear-flaps and ornaments lost; also right thumb. Left hand complete, with lapel.
Height 73 in. Breadth 15\(\frac{1}{2}\) in.

(d) No ink-number. A ‘child’, judging by the height, which is almost complete. Feet and left half of lotus-stool damaged. Ear-ornaments mostly lost. Has long fingers; the two little fingers damaged. Otherwise complete.
Height 46\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Breadth 10\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.
(e) Identified as ‘1924. From small red temple W. of the Min-o-chantha.’ A ‘child’, judging by the height, which is complete except for the hair-dress above the crown. Ear-ornaments lost, and most of the lower part of the robe. Right hand damaged. Left hand complete; also the feet and Natural wood-colour. Hair-dress above crown incomplete. Feet and lotus-stool mostly lost, but height not far from complete. Breadth incomplete: right arm, shoulder and ear-flap all lost; also the robe – entirely lost on the king’s right side, and mostly on his left below the elbow. Left hand damaged, but mostly there; including the lapel.

Height 76 in. Breadth 15 1/3 (+) in.

(g) Ink Nos. 6/55. 6/107. Found in 1955, in Thingayaza Gu 347, 1/4 mile N. of Thiripyitsaya. Headdress lost above the crown. Feet and lotus-stool mostly lost, but height nearly complete. Top part of ear-flaps lost, but lower part, including the large lotus ear-plugs, and flame-edged torque remains. Thumb of right hand lost, and fingers flattened. Left hand and lapel mostly complete.
Height 77 in. Breadth 18 1/2 in. (complete).

Note: Owing to conflict of evidence, I am not sure if the above assignment of 3 statues (Pls.
421 a, b; 422 g) to Gu 347 is correct.

A common Pyu and Gupta reredos for a seated Buddha, consisted of three tiers: an Elephant-head at the base; a Vṛyāla or Lion Rampant in the centre; and a gaping Makara or Capricorn with raised trunk at the shoulders. The Old Burman knew the elephant; but the other animals were strange to him. In these wooden carvings he could not help wondering what they did when ‘off parade’.

(a, b) Front and side views of a hollow gold-plate image of the Earth-touching Buddha, now at the Treasury (bhaṇḍā-laik) within the enclosure-wall of Nanda temple. Originally one of the three found in the 2nd temple from the East in the Acawlat group, just N. of Ananda Kyaungdaik. [phot. Ba Shin] Height 10\(\frac{3}{4}\) in. Breadth at base, and from knee to knee 7\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Depth at base 4\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Skull detachable. Neck also, but joined by little nails to the head. This hollow gold image is now lined with lac, and so heavy. It is said to have weighed about 40 ticals of gold before the lac was added to strengthen it.

(c, d) Neg. 3270, 3271 (1930–31).
Front and side views of a similar gold image of the Earth-touching Buddha, without lotus-mat or reredos. Found among the ruins of a temple N. of Ananda Kyaungdaik. The original is said to be “in the possession of U Wilatha of Alê-kyauung monastery, Ananda Kyaungdaik.”

(e) Neg. 3123 (1928–29).
“A standing image of the Crowned Buddha in relief on gold plate.” Said to be at Págan Museum (I have not seen it there). Find-spot not stated. This image of repoussé gold has a high-pointed kirîmamukuta, and torque, also probably ear-flaps. Below the chest, he is dressed as a monk. His right hand is raised before the right shoulder in vitarka mudrâ (?). The left hangs at the side. There is a double-lotus mat at the base, and a narrow geometric border pattern at the sides.

Plates 425–428. BRONZE LOTUSES

Note. For parallels in Mahâyânist Pâla art, Duroiselle (ASI 1927, p. 171) cites the Vajratârâ bronze lotus shown at “fig. 101 of Ananda K. Coomaraswamy’s The Arts and Crafts of India and Ceylon, and in fig. 5 in Foucher’s L’Iconographie Bouddhique de l’Inde, Part II. The latter is in the Indian Museum ... it was found at Pâthargâtâ in the Bhagalpur district of Bihar.” The Pâthargâtâ Vajratâra lotus is illustrated also by R.D. Banerji, on Pl. 72 (a, b) of his Eastern Indian School of Mediaeval Sculpture (Delhi, 1933), together with a similar bronze lotus, the so-called Mâjavâdi Vajratâra (Pl. 72 c, d), found in a tank in Mâjavâdi village, 2 miles W. of Kotâlipâdu police-station, Faridpur district. This latter lotus is now in Dacca Museum; and N. K. Bhattachasali, in his Iconography of Buddhist and Brahmanical Sculptures in the Dacca Museum (pp. 45–53) gives a full account of both lotuses (Pls. XV, XVI, XVII). Note, for comparison with the Tuywindaung Lotus (our Pl. 425 a, b) the follg. details of the Mâjavâdi one: – “The flower rises from a thick stem, and on its two sides two young double Nâga girls, their bodies bifurcating from a single up-turned tail, are represented as gracefully supporting the fixed petals of the lotus.” Elephant, lion, and other animals also occupy the foliated circles of the base. The Pâthargâtâ Lotus is also shown at Fig. 180 of B. Bhattacharyya’s Indian Buddhist Iconography (1958, Calcutta).
Bronze lotuses were similarly used to enshrine Vaishnava themes: see Art and Letters, Vol. XXXVI, No. 2, pp. 28–29, and fig. 3 (right): “Viṣṇu, within a lotus, bronze, ... from Nepal or the North Gangetic plain. ... It is of the 12th century A.D. And each of the 8 petals (there is one missing) carries a small bronze figure of one of the incarnations (avatāras) of Viṣṇu ... .”

(a, b) Earth-touching Buddha Lotus, closed and open. From Tuywindaung.

Neg. 2702, 2703 (1926–27).

See Duroiselle, ASI 1927, p. 171, and Pl. XXXIX (g, h): “Found in 1925 by the Buddhist monks of Tuywindaung while digging post-holes for a resthouse ... The lotus can be made to open and close by means of a spring, and contains in the centre a seated image of Buddha. On the inner sides of the petals, which are 8 in number, are represented the principal scenes in the life of the Master, the Nativity, the Preaching of the first discourse at Isipatana, the Offering of honey by a monkey, the Parnirvāṇa, etc. When closed, the lotus is crowned by a small stupa. The lotus is mounted on a stand ornamented with floral designs. The two stalks which branch off from the main stem of the stand are supported on the hands of two Nāgini; a devotee is seen seated in the attitude of prayer on a lotus, at the upper end of each stalk, in the scrolls of which are figures of lions and elephants.”

Plate 426.

(a, b) Cetiya Lotus, closed and open. Dug up in 1955 by U Htwe Sein at a pagoda-ruin 20 yards N.E. of Upali Thein, where the bronze lotus of Pl. 427 infra, and the “andagu” stone plaque of the Eight Scenes (Pl. 404 supra), were also found. All three are now at Pagan Museum. See ASB 1955, pp. 13–14, and Pl. 8 (p. 25).

The lotus bud is closed by a cap in the shape of a small cetiya, a miniature copy of the large cetiya within. When this is removed and the 8 petals opened, the large cetiya is seen in the centre of its mandala. On the inner side of the 8 petals, are embossed little cetiyas at the top, and the Eight Scenes below. Both crowning cap and central cetiya are detachable; each is inset with 4 silver lotuses in niello. Four praying saints are enclosed in the lotus rings below the petals. In the 7 rings around the base, 7 figures are enclosed: lion, man, elephant, disciple, bull, virgin, and another man.

3. Descent from Tāvatimsa (Buddha’s right hand in varada mudrā, left holding robe at shoulder. Brahma holding chattrā. No other figures).
4. First Sermon (Buddha in dharmacakra mudrā. Below, Wheel front-face, with couchant Deer).
5. Enlightenment (Earth-touching Buddha on double lotus under Bodhi tree).
6. Nalāgiri elephant (Buddha droops right hand above tiny crouching elephant. On the left, a vyāla-like elephant attacking ?).
7. Pārileyyaka retreat (Buddha in pralambanasana facing front, holding almsbowl. Monkey on the right, making offering. Flying figure above).
8. Parinirvāṇa (placed along the petal. Cetiya above. A mourner in front of couch).

Plate 427.

(a, b, c) Bodhgayā Śikhara Lotus. – Like the bronze Lotus of Pl. 426, this one was dug up in 1955 by U Htwe Sein at the same ruin 20 yards N.E. of Upali Thein. Both are now at Pagan Museum. See ASB 1955, p. 13, and Pl. 7 (p. 24). Height 15\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

(a) Neg. 5878 (1954-55). The lotus bud closed.

(b) Neg. 6036 (1954-55). The lotus open, with Śikhara in centre.

(c) Neg. 5885 (1954-55). The Śikhara, after removal of the 8 petals.

The Śikhara is thought to be a small model of that of the Vajrāsana (Mahābodhi) temple at Bodhgaya, as it may have been about the 12th century A.D. But there is not much resemblance here to the other miniature in ‘andagu’ stone shown supra at Pl. 406 b, c; which, in turn, is closer to the Jhewari bronze model found in 1927 near Chittagong (see ASI 1928, Pl. LVII a). Perhaps there was more than one temple at Bodhgaya which provided models. At the base of the Śikhara, in a tier of trefoil niches, are shown the following Eight Scenes: (i) the Enlightenment (Earth-touching Buddha), (ii) the Nativity, (iii) the Twin Miracles, (iv) the Descent from Tāvatimsa, (v) the Parinirvāṇa, (vi) the Pārileyyaka retreat (vii) the First Sermon, (viii) the Taming of the Nalāgiri elephant. On the inner side of the 8 petals, Cetiyas with streamers are shown at the top; and below them saints seated in worship. On the back of the petals, N.E. Indian numerals are engraved. Below the bud and the flat open bract below it, two whorls of foliation hold four figures seated back to back – Bodhisattvas (?) in lalitāsana or abhayamudrā. The bell-like base has two small openwork tiers enclosing jewels.

See Duroiselle, ASI 1930, p. 157:—‘Such bronze lotus shrines seem once to have been rather popular; for isolated objects forming parts of such shrines were dug up occasionally... at Pagán. One of these, which was found during the year 1926–27 in a mound near the Mingalazedi pagoda, was a small bronze image of a Nāgini. Another object of this character was found during the year under report in the débris inside a ruined temple near the Shwéhsandaw pagoda at Pagán. This is a small standing bronze image of the Buddha, about 1½ in. in height, standing on a lotus, which certainly formed part of a lotus shrine. The same débris yielded a small bronze image of a Bodhisattva (height 1½ in.) seated on a lotus with one leg pendant... Both these figures are of Indian workmanship, and their date is supplied by a fragment of a terracotta votive tablet, bearing an effigy of the Buddha on the obverse face, and a Talaing [Mon] inscription of about the 11th–12th century A.D. on the reverse.’

XXX c, d, e:—“To the W. of the Shwéhsandaw pagoda and quite close to it within the same enclosure, is a small roofless temple measuring about 20 ft. square. ... In the S. wall of the temple which has canted outwards, a long and wide vertical crack has appeared, revealing at a height of about 10 ft. from the floor a relic-chamber which measured 1 ft. 6 in. square and 2 ft. in height, and contained the images. ... These may be assigned to the XIth or beginning of the XIIth century.”

(a) Neg. 3935 (1936–37). Height 2 ft. ½ in.

(a) Neg. 1090 (1912–13). Provenance not stated. Formerly at Pagán Museum. See ASB 1917, Pl. II A. Dated 11th century A.D.

(b) Neg. 3925 (1936–37).

See Duroiselle, ASI 1937, p. 77, and Pl. XXX a. From the relic-chamber of “a small ruined temple in Po Saw’s field about half a mile S.W. of Kōktheinnayon (Kusinārum) at Myin-pagan. . . . A small bronze image . . . standing on a lotus with the right hand in the abhayamudrā, the left in the varadamudrā. It is a good piece of work of the mediaeval period.” – For abhaya-read vīrakṣamudrā. And I doubt the varada mudrā. It seems that the left hand holds, as usual, the lapel of the robe; but this has become detached, both here and in (a), from the robe proper, since it was not understood. The image is interesting as local Burmese work based on Indian models. Date doubtful, but presumably Pagān period. Duroiselle gives 5½ feet as the height of this “small image” – presumably a slip for 5½ inches.

(c) Neg. 2054 (1919–20).

See ASI 1920, p. 30, and Pl. XXV (e): – “At Sameikshé village in Thazi township, Meiktila district, there was unearthed a small standing image of Buddha in bronze in a brick chamber buried underground.” – The writer adds that it represents the Buddha Dipaṅkara and “dates apparently from the 13th or 14th century A.D.” – Almost all these Buddha-bronzes in Burma derive from, and follow closely, the colossal Late Gupta Sūlțāṅgāṇī image (see Coomaraswamy, Hist. Ind. Indon. Art, XLI, 160): there is no good reason to say they represent Dipaṅkara. And in view of the other finds in the neighbourhood, including Old Mon writing, the 11th to 12th century is a much more probable date. The style is Mon/Indian, somewhat timid perhaps, but careful and solemn: high flame-niche above uṣṇīṣa; both shoulders covered, faint rippling robe-hems. The one ‘extra’ is the large double-lotus throne.

(d, e, f) Three standing bronzes now at Pagān Museum (provenance not stated). These are included by way of contrast to the normal Early Pagān Mon/Indian type. In actual pose they all follow, strictly if clumsily, the North Indian model: right hand raised from the elbow in abhaya mudrā; left hand held out in an otiose sort of varada mudrā – this as a substitute for holding out the hem of the robe. The lotus throne tends to get exaggerated, the uṣṇīṣa to get thick or conical, with loss of the flame-niche. The Ideal comes down to the Real. – All this, I suggest, points to the Later Pagān period, and to Old Burmese workmanship. Mr. A. B. Griswold, however, suggests the possible influence of the Nāgapaṭṭīnām Buddhist bronzes (see Bulletin of the Madras Government Museum, New Series, Vol. VII, No. 1, 1954). He may well be right.

Plate 431. (full pl.) – Tall bronze standing image of the Buddha on the N.W. side of Ananda Kyaungdaik, Pagān.

[phot. Tin Oo]

Cf. Neg. 1631 (1916–17), and ASB 1917, Pl. II C. Height 3 ft. 8 in., from feet to flame-niche above uṣṇīṣa. Max. breadth 1 ft. 4½ in. At present the image is set against a modern back-screen and throne with glass inlay. Our photographer, Tin Oo, has managed to cut out these modernisms, and show this fine image in its original purity – solemn, noble and concentrated. Mon/Indian type. As for the date, I suggest c. 1100 A.D.
Plate 432. Two bronze standing Buddhas (Pagan Chitsagon). (See Text, Ch. VI, p. 102.)

These were the first finds at this important site: see Duroiselle, ASI 1926, pp. 117–8: "the discovery of two small bronze images by a man named Maung Chit Sa while ploughing in his fields." Maung Chit Sa lived at Taungbi village, but his field, or mound ('Chit-Sa-gôn'), where some of the oldest writing in Burmese was found in the following year (see Pls. 31, 40–48), is not at Taungbi, but East of Nanda and South of Pagan-hmyaw temple. The two bronzes are of normal Mon/Indian type, in the Late Gupta Sulṭānāñjī tradition: right hand raised from the elbow in abhaya mudrā, left hand holding out a lapel of the robe. But the flame-niche has been added at the top of the usnīsa, and a double lotus below the feet. The two bronzes are easily distinguished by the presence or absence of the ūrnā.

(a, b, c) Front, side and back views of the image without the ūrnā. Height 1 ft. 8 in. Negs. 2672, 2673, 2674 (1925–26).

Note the pointed chin answering the pointed flame-niche. The figure is erect and alerted, with robes short and tempestuous.

(d, e, f) Front, side and back views of the image with the ūrnā. Height 1 ft. Negs. 2675, 2676, 2677 (1925–26).

Note the squarer face answering the squarer hang of the robes. This is closer to the Indian model, but lacks its mobile grace.

Plate 433.

(a) Crowned image of the standing Buddha in bronze. From Pagan. Now at Pagan Museum. Negs. 3125 (1928–29). Height 5½ in. Breadth of robe at base 1½ in. The image is unusual: short, soft, full-cheeked, square-faced, with breasts prominent, and flame-niche mounted on the hair within the kiriṭa crown. Stands on double lotus, right hand in abhaya mudrā, left half-lowered, holding the lapel. For the Crowned Buddha, see Ch. X, pp. 184 follg.

(b, c) Nativity group, in bronze, front and back views.

The group stands on a rounded pedestal with downturned lotus leaves. Only Māyā, Pajāpati, and the Babe are shown. There is no sāla tree left, but Māyā raises her right arm as if to hold the branch, and leans her left arm on the shoulder of Pajāpati, who presses it. She also kicks the (invisible) tree with her right foot – the correct obstetrical act for an ancient Tree-spirit. The Babe is shown twice: crosslegged on her right hip as usual, and also standing on waterpot pedestal below, preparing to take his Seven Steps, his straightness firming the tribhāṅga leanings of the two women. – For the Nativity Scene, see Ch. IX, pp. 157–159.

(d) Pre-Nativity group (?), in bronze.

Neg. 2726 (1926–27).

"Two women standing with a tree between, on a stool. Found in a relic-chamber of Shwedandaw pagoda, Pagan." Height 4½ in. Breadth 2½ in. – I guess that the scene just precedes the Nativity. Māyā and her sister Pajāpati descend from their litters to admire the sāla trees (Shorea robusta) in the Lumbini grove.

The Buddha, with radiant flame-leaf aureole, ārṇā, and flame-tipped usṇīśa, sits beneath a floral kīrtimukha at the peak, whose mouth on either side disgorges wreaths of foliation, ending in outward facing hanısas at the shoulders. The shoulder-crossbar ends in mākaras, with coiled trunks and mouths agape. The crossbar is supported by rampant vyāḷas, who face outwards holding vertical lotus-stalks. The vyāḷas stand on elephant-heads, just projecting at the base of the double lotus. Below these, the terraced throne is broken by an inner band, enclosing lions with reverted heads at the corners, and in the centre by an elephant (?) facing front.

Coomaraswamy (Hist. Ind. Indon. Art, p. 250, and Pl. CIV 315) dates this image 12th century. Perhaps it is older.

The Earth-touching Buddha, with ārṇā, flame-tipped usṇīśa, and radiant flame-leaf aureole, sits on divided lotus against a plain double-arched reredos, rimmed with flowers of fire. Above him at the peak there is a Cetiya, and branching sprays of peepal. Below, on either side of the reredos, sit two Bodhisattvas in lalitásana, their outer legs hanging, their right hands in abhaya mudrā, their left resting on the knee and twined with their respective flower-stems. The one on the left (the Buddha’s right) holds the stem of a lotus, and is therefore Padmapāṇi (Avalokiteśvara). The one on the right (the Buddha’s left) holds the nāgakesara stem, and is therefore Maitreya. At each bottom corner, below them, there is a man crouched in adoration, with a woman behind him. In front of the throne’s base, the Wheel is seen full-face between two couchant Deer. The scene should therefore, in spite of the Buddha’s Earth-touching attitude, be the First Sermon in the Deer-park near Benares; but since two Bodhisattvas are present instead of the five Pañcabaggiyā, the intention may rather be the first Mahāyānist sermon, Saddharma-puṇḍarīka-sūtra, ‘Lotus of the Good Law’. See also Ray, Sanskrit Buddhism in Burma, fig. 2, and pp. 45, 111.

(c) Neg. 1094 (1912–13). Now at Rangoon Archaeological Office, but the detachable side-pieces with deer and seated disciples are lost.

Against a plain double-arched reredos, rimmed with floral tongues of flame, and crowned with a floral kīrtimukha, the Earth-touching Buddha sits on coiling double lotus. His head, faintly raying, is topped with the flame-niche. There is no ārṇā. Below the lotus, the terraced throne projects in front to form trays for offerings. From either side spring lotus stems into tendrils that enclose outward-facing Deer; then double back to form pericarps, on which cross-legged sit praying saints, Sāriputta and Moggallāṇa. But these, of course, were not present at the First Sermon in the Deer-park.
Plate 435, 436 a, b. Worship of the Four Buddhas.

The component parts of these groups – the Buddhas, their back-screens, the stands, the worshippers – are detachable. U Khin Maung Zaw found many of these components loose in a box at Pagan Museum. Eked out by a few more at Mandalay Archaeological Office, he carefully cleaned them and put a number of them together to form Pl. 436 a, b. U Tin Oo subsequently assembled, with the same materials, two somewhat different groups (Pl. 435 a, b). We cannot therefore, vouch for the accuracy of the arrangement; but obviously something like this was intended.

Many, if not all, of the components came from the 'Scovell' Pawdawmu site (Pl. 259 b). The first incomplete report comes in ASI 1920, p. 31: - “During the year 1918–19 the discovery was reported of an encased stupa at Pagan which now proves to be of some antiquity, as is shown by certain finely modelled bronze figures belonging seemingly to the end of the 11th century, which have been found in a relic-chamber at its base. The most interesting of these were the two figures shown in Plate XXV a and b, the former a Bodhisattva” [our Pl. 446 a], “and the latter the Buddha.” . . . Nothing is said of the groups.

In his full, but somewhat obscure account of the find (ASB 1920, pp. 26–27), Duroiselle describes the Buddha shown at ASI 1920, Plate XXV b, and continues: - “This figure of the Buddha is made to fit in a small hole in the centre of one of the sides of a small rectangle made of the same metal; the three other sides of the rectangle are occupied by 18 small figures, each a little over 2 in. high; they are all in the namahkāra attitude. They are very well modelled. Some seem to repeat themselves except for trifling differences in their ornaments. One represents an Indian ascetic; another a rakṣasa or ogre; one a Nāga king with a three-headed cobra rearing itself over his head; one is what I take to be a queen; one a king; one a minister; two others common people, man and woman. All the images in this scene are numbered in Burmese figures of the archaic type, that is, of the XIth century, and resemble very closely the figures used in numbering the plaques of the Petleik pagoda and those of the Ananda temple. All these little personages resemble closely those depicted on the plaques of the two monuments just mentioned, in the style of their dress, ornaments, the way of doing up the hair, in the cast of countenance, etc.; and must have been made at Pagan itself by the same class of Indian artists who modelled the figures on these plaques, that is, near the end of the 11th or the beginning of the 12th century.”

The worshippers shown on Pl. 435 c, d, e, are presumably some of the “18 small figures” found by Duroiselle. Perhaps that number is not the whole tale. If 4 were assigned to each platform (as seems clear), one would expect not less than 5 platforms. If all 24 (or 28) Buddhas were included, there should be 6 (or 7) platforms. And if they are all numbered in Old Burmese, as Duroiselle says, it should be possible to arrange them in the intended order. And this might help to determine who they are. Personally I do not accept the view that they resemble the figures on the Jātaka plaques. Are they just Pagan royalty and courtiers, in costumes more or less contemporary? Or are they all (as Col. Ba Shin once suggested to me) figures from the Buddha-vamsa, showing Gotama in his earlier existences paying homage to preceding Buddhas?

  surface of the ground.”

  On a rounded pedestal with downward-turning lotus petals, the Buddha sits touching Earth against an openwork bronze nimbus, horse-shoe-shape, with floral edging. At the nimbus-peak stands a Cetiya, with peepal leaves or sprays at the base; and on the crosspiece, behind the Buddha’s neck, a leaf-halo and (but these are sometimes missing) two lotus buds. Behind the LIV a).

The Buddha sits, right leg on left, on high throne or pedestal, the upper half shaped like double lotus. Behind him, is a solid oval reredos with rim weatherworn. At the top, there is a projecting ledge from which two sprays of peepal rose and branched above the Buddha’s head. The left branch remains; the right has broken off.

He sits buoyant on his leather mat and double lotus cushion. Above the light suspended hands, the robe flap clings to the left shoulder. The face and body are alive with inner concentration. The ūṃā is its symbol. The flame-niche marks the aspiration. A Mon/Indian masterpiece.

(d) Neg. 3396 (1930–31).
From débris of ruined temple N. of Tawya-gyaung monastery, Thiripyitsaya. The weathered Buddha sits in vajrāsana, touching Earth, on fretted leather mat and low down-turning lotus-petal pedestal.

In the list of finds made by U Mya when he opened 16 mounds N. of Tawya-gyaung in 1930–31 (see ASI 1930–34, Part I, p. 181), the item most likely to be this, is No. 7 – “A small bronze image of a seated Buddha. Height nearly 2½ in.”

(e) Bronze image of the Earth-touching Buddha seated on double lotus pedestal. Now at Mandalay Archaeological Office.
Height 8½ in. Breadth at base 6½ in. Breadth from knee to knee 5 in.

(f) Side-view of a different but similar Earth-touching image, seated on double lotus. Now at Mandalay Archaeological Office (“No. 19” on white label). Height 8½ in. Breadth at base 6¼ in.

Another specimen of the tall ‘Aniruddha’ type, but more erect and not so stout as (e). Robe cut away over the left thigh. Profile of face down to nose-tip almost vertical. The tenon at the back is holed for locking.

(a, b) Cf. Neg. 1229 (1913–14). Found in the débris of Pāhtothāmya temple, within the walls of Pagan.

[phot. Tin Oo]
See ASI 1914, Part 1, Pl. XII (b, c) and p. 10: “the small but excellently preserved bronze statuette representing the Bodhisattva Gautama.”

But this is an Earth-touching Buddha, seated in vajrāsana on fretted leather mat and tall double-lotus pedestal. He is not a Bodhisattva. He wears only the kīrīṭa crown, karnāpūras, necklace and torque. Below this, he is merely the Monk – with shoulder-flap, bare right shoulder, monastic robes. He has a small square head with ūrṇā, joined brow-arches, almond eyes, sharp nose, and smiling mouth.

(c, d) Negs. 2274, 2276 (1921–22). Front and back views of a bronze Earth-touching Buddha, seated (without lotus) on a high recessed throne. ‘Found within the relic-chamber of a ruined pagoda, near Pāhtodaw-gyi pagoda, Hsameikshe, Thazi township, Meiktila district.’

For Duroiselle’s account of these sites, see ASB 1922, paras 27, 28, pp. 9–11. I suspect that this image is his “beautiful bronze image of a Bodhisattva, which may be ascribed to the 11th or early 12th century,” recovered from the sīmā at Aungbintha village, “a few miles to the S. of Sameikshë.” He gives a photograph of the site at Plate III, but not of the bronze image. Cf. ASB 1959, figs. 69, 70.

This, once again, is not a Bodhisattva, but a Buddha seated in vajrāsana, touching Earth. But so far as clothes and ornaments are concerned, it is indistinguishable from a king or Bodhisattva. It is modelled on the beautiful Maitreya bronze found in the relic-chamber of Mahāmuni temple in N. Arakan (see Negs. 1296, 1297 of 1913–14). Both are shown and discussed by U Mya in his Burmese note on the coming of the ‘Jambupati’ image: see ASB 1959, pp. 28–37, and Plates 65 and 66, 69 and 70 (pp. 93, 95). Such ‘Crowned Buddhas’ become common in Central Burma during the early Ava period; but they were certainly known at Pagan (usually shown there as half-king, half-monk). One hesitates, I admit, to date the Thazi image as early as Duroiselle does; but most of his other finds in this neighbourhood confirm his date; and this appears to be an early and a good copy of the Mahāmuni bronze.

(e, f) Another Earth-touching Buddha (front and back views), heavily loaded with royal attributes – crown, ear-flaps and ornaments, breastplate, coat of mail, armlets, gauntlets, etc. Found by the Inspector of Schools, U Thaung, at the brick monastery, Tabayin, Shwebo district, together with the ‘andagu’ stone plaque shown at Pl. 40. The latter surely belongs to the early Pagan period. The ‘Jambupati’, perhaps, may be of Early Ava date. Saya Thaung has kindly supplied the prints.

Plate 441.

Last seen at Rangoon Archaeological Office.

Height 7 ft 8 in. Breadth at base 4 ft in.
This beautiful image sits in padmāsana, dhyāna mudrā, on high double-lotus pedestal. There is a flame-tip on the broad uṣṇīṣa; no āṁrā; prominent necking; but excessive frontality is avoided by the diagonal sway of the robes over the left shoulder, and the flap over the right. The whole treatment of the robe is quite un-Burmese.

(b) Neg. 2723 (1926–27). “Found in a relic-chamber of Shwéhsandaw pagoda, Pagán.”
This large-headed Buddha, with long ears, broad mouth and thick neck, sits touching Earth without mat or lotus pedestal to sit on. The image is clearly of archaic non-Indian type, possibly Pyu, like so many other finds at this pagoda, built by Aniruddha c. 1060 A.D. The right shoulder is bare. The flap of the robe falls, as usual, over the left shoulder.

(c) I have no information about this bronze image of the Buddha, seated, right hand on left, right leg on left, in dhyāna mudrā, on double lotus pedestal, with pairs of lotus petals and pericarp between. The position of the legs, right on left, is usually a sign of antiquity in Burma. The right shoulder is exposed, the flap is over the left shoulder: this, too, is unusual with images in dhyāna mudrā. The long ear-lobes are perforated and touch the shoulder. A flame-niche crowns the uṣṇīṣa. There seems to be some old writing on the front of the pedestal, above the double lotus. – The image was probably photographed at Mandalay Archaeological Office.

(d) Small Earth-touching bronze Buddha of archaic non-Indian type, with outsize hands, and uṣṇīṣa absent or lost. Features all exaggerated. Seated on low pedestal. Now at Mandalay Archaeological Office.
Height 3\(\frac{1}{2}\) in. Breadth at base 3\(\frac{1}{2}\) in.

Height 4\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Breadth at base 3\(\frac{3}{4}\) in.

(f) A strange bronze image of the seated Buddha, said to come from Pagán. Now at Mandalay Archaeological Office. Under its high flame-niche, the image has a round head with brow-arches over wide-goggling eyes. He sits in padmāsana on fretted mat and downward-turning lotus. His right hand rests on the knee in varada mudrā, with a fruit or round object in the palm. Could this be Gaṇḍa’s mango?

(g) Small bronze image of the Earth-touching Buddha, now at Mandalay Archaeological Office. Prominent āṁrā. No flame-niche. Flap of robe over left shoulder. The Buddha sits on fretted cammakhaṇḍa (leather mat) resting on a curious udder-like band of down-turned lotus.

Plate 442. Bronze images from Shwéhsandaw relic-chamber (Local work ?).

The Shwéhsandaw was one of the first great pagodas built by Aniruddha, c. 1060 A.D., after the rescue of Pegu and (perhaps) the capture of Thaton. See Text, Ch. XIII, pp. 260–262. Some of the oldest bronzes, as well as votive tablets, have been found in its relic-chamber, including a good many not mentioned in Duroiselle’s account of the search at ASI, 1927, pp. 161–5.
(a) Neg. 2722 (1926–27). Three seated Buddhas. The two outer ones are touching Earth. The two on the right sit on double lotus; the other on a plain mat or pedestal. The one on the right has the usual flame-niche above the usnīsa, the one on the right a sort of two-storeyed usnīsa, like that of the taller standing Buddha in (c) infra. The central Buddha (Neg. 2721) is the most archaic, seated right leg on left, with both hands propped at the wrist and raised in double vitarka mudrā (see infra, Pl. 443 a). It has a plain usnīsa, without flame-niche.

(b) Neg. 2720 (1926–27). Three seated Earth-touching Buddhas. The one on the right, with double-lotus pedestal and flame-niche on usnīsa, shows most Indian influence. The other two thick-necked images – the one on the left with left arm lost, and the central one with deeply indented pedestal, are the least Indian.

(c) Neg. 2719 (1926–27). Two standing Buddhas, short and tall. The short one stands on a low round pedestal, the taller on a higher one raised on concentric rings. Probably both had their right hands raised from the elbow in abhaya mudrā, and left hands held out, possibly in varada mudrā, holding the lapel of the robe. The right hand of the taller image is lost beyond the elbow. Robes cover both shoulders, and doubtless spread out at the base. The taller, less idealized one, has a ‘two-storeyed’ usnīsa, and ears touching the shoulders.

Plate 443.

(a, b) Archaic bronze image of the seated Buddha, from relic-chamber of Shwehsandaw pagoda. This is an enlargement of the central figure in the group shown at Pl. 442 (a). Front and side aspects.

[phot. Tin Oo]

On semi-circular double lotus pedestal, the Buddha sits crosslegged, right leg on left, with hands raised from the elbow in double vitarka mudrā. The right wrist is supported by a prop, the left by the robe-hem. The nose is sharp and prominent. The ūrṇā is clear. There is no flame-niche above the usnīsa. Both shoulders appear to be covered. The pose is reminiscent of bronzes in Dvāravatī Mon Art (Dupont, L’Archéologie Mōne de Dvāravatī, figs. 423–455), but these are mostly standing images. The seated pose, right left on left, is common in Śrī Kṣetra art, but comparatively rare at Pagan, where the padmāsana is normal.

(c, d) Archaic bronze image of the Buddha, seated cross-legged on round double-lotus pedestal, with both enormous hands raised from the elbow in double abhaya mudrā. The head, too, is very large. The right wrist and elbow are supported by props, the left by the robe-hem. The right leg rests on the left. There is no flame-niche on the usnīsa. Both shoulders appear to be covered. Height 4 in. Breadth at base 2 in.

(c) Front aspect [phot. Tin Oo]
(d) Back aspect [phot. Lavaud]

(e) The above archaic bronze in double abhaya mudrā, and the two others shown on this print, are said on their label at Pagán Museum to have been found in a “stone mound W. of the Myazedi, 4 furlongs W. of the main road.” – I suspect that this refers to the ruined Paunggu temple (see Ch. XIV, pp. 294–296). Of the three bronzes, the middle one – the ‘Pyu Maitreya’ type – is described at Pl. 444 (e, f) infra. The Earth-touching image on the right (height 4½ in.) is labelled I2/55. It has a large head with tall usśīṣa, thick neck, ears touching shoulders, short body, and legs crossed right on left.

Note. Several years ago, while searching the locked cupboard in the S. room of Pagán Museum, I noted the following old bronzes:

(i) “a small image of ‘Pyu’ type, headless, with tiny round legs and feet barely crossing, and both large hands in abhaya mudrā.”

(ii) “a crude Earth-touching image of ‘Pyu’ type, with large head and broken nose.”

See Duroiselle, ASI 1927, Pl. XXXIX (f) and pp. 164–5: — “The figure is seated on a low pedestal. The legs do not cross, but the feet meet at the middle, with the soles turned upwards. The right knee is slightly raised and rests on what appears to be a cushion. The figure possesses all the attributes of a king: crown, ear-rings, necklets, armlets, bracelets, anklets and a waistband; and a long string passing over the left shoulder and the right arm falls loosely on the seat in front of the figure just before the feet. The right arm is stretched out, the wrist resting on the knee, and the fingers are slightly bent as if holding something. The left arm has broken off just below the shoulder, but the wrist and hand may be seen resting on the knee, palm upwards. Around the seat is an inscription in Pyū; but it is badly worn away in several places and, save for a few characters, is illegible. On the proper left side, the following can still be read ḥā: . . . Metriya ḍā:

‘Metriya’ most probably refers to the image itself. . . . The Pyū script on the base of the statuette makes it clear that the latter was made in Burma: but the probability is that it was not made in Pagán, though found there. The general style of the figure which differs from that of the Pagán school, and the form of the characters tend to show that it is older than the middle of the XIth century.” . . . Duroiselle concludes that Aniruddha must have brought it back after his conquest of Śrī Kṣetra.

For Paunggu temple, see Ch. XIV, pp. 294–296.

Though there is no Pyu inscription on this bronze, it is clearly a more perfect example of the Pyu Maitreya than (a, b) supra; and even enables us to check Duroiselle’s careful description (quoted above) of the Shwéhsandaw specimen. Thus when he says that the left hand rests on the knee “palm upwards,” this doubtful statement is contradicted by the Paunggu bronze. And since specimens of this Pyu Maitreya were found in more than one temple at Pagan, I doubt if one can conclude that all were brought back by Aniruddha from Śrī Kṣetra, especially as the same Maitreya type recurs on terracottas and stone sculptures (see Pls. 55, 411 a, b). It seems more likely that there still were Pyu artists living at Pagan, carrying on their old traditions. Note the details of dress and ornaments in (c), much fuller and clearer than in (a).

(e, f) This, the third of the Pyu Maitreyas, appears already in the centre of the group shown in Pl. 443 d. It is now at Pagan Museum, labelled 13/55. I have suggested supra that it may also have come from Paunggu temple. More weathered than (c), Maitreya’s pose is identical, and ornaments, including the upavīṭa (Brahmanic cord) are similar in all three.

(a) Neg. 3397 (1930–31).

“A bronze image of a Bodhisattva recovered from among the debris of a ruined temple N. of Tawya-gyaung monastery, Thiripyitsaya,” in Shwe Doe’s field.

Height 3½ in.
See U Mya, ASI 1930–34, Part II, Pl. C (b), and Part I, p. 180: – “6. A small but very fine bronze image of a Bodhisattva seated in the latita mudrā on a lotus seat. The hair is done into a high mukula, but without a crown. A sash is seen round the body, and the lower garment is a pair of close-fitting trousers. The right hand is raised in the abhaya mudrā, and the left is resting on a lotus.” See also Ray, Sanskrit Buddhism in Burma, Fig. 5 and p. 112. Ray rightly, in my opinion, identifies this bronze as “probably Maitreya.” He dates it “c. 10th–11th century.” The two nāgakesara stems framing the image confirm the identification.

See Taw Sein Ko, ASB 1919, Pl. I, fig. 2, and p. 43, para 78: – “It has a headdress, parts of which are missing, and ... large ear-ornaments....” It is quite doubtful whether this fine fragmentary image represents Maitreya. But it seems to me that (possibly under influence of the glorious Maitreya bronze of Mahāmuni – see Ch. X, p. 188, n. 30) there was in Old Burma – at Śrī Kesetra and Pagán as well as North Arakan – a tendency to lend his images a certain ‘panache’, a youthful grace and rich variety of decoration.

[phot. Tin Oo (front and side views)]

Head and torso of a bronze image now at Mandalay Archaeological Office. It is identified as ‘Jambupati’, i.e. the Crowned Buddha (see Ch. X, pp. 184 follg.): but it is easier to regard it as a Bodhisattva, possibly (in view of his elaborate ornaments) Maitreya.

Height 4½ in. Breadth at base 2½ in. From knee to knee 2¾ in.

[phot. Tin Oo]

See ASI 1920, Pl. XXV (a) and p. 31; ASB 1920, Pl. III, fig. 1, and pp. 26–27 (para 47); Ray, Sanskrit Buddhism in Burma, fig. 7, and pp. 48, 112.

“It is beautifully modelled and of pure Indian workmanship” says Duroiselle. “It is seated on a lotus in the lalitásana ... The right hand, resting on the knee, is in the varada mudrā ... , the left hand, brought a little before the breast, holds the stalk of a lotus; it wears the usual tiara; some of the ornaments, on the head, thighs and feet and round the neck, are inlaid with silver; another lotus rises from behind on the right side.” Duroiselle doubtfully identifies the image as Maitreya; but Ray (p. 48) is certainly right in correcting this to Lokanātha. He dates it c. 11th to 12th century A.D. See quotation infra, under (b).

(b) Neg. 1516 (1915–16).

Found, together with the Pyu Maitreya shown at Pl. 444 c, d, at Paunggu temple, Myinkaba. Deposited in Pagán Museum; but now (I think) at Mandalay Archaeological Office. Ray (Sanskrit Buddhism in Burma, fig. 6, and p. 48) describes the (a) and (b) of our plate together: – “The Ananda Museum, Pagán, shelters two bronze images [of Lokanātha] seated on lotus-throne. In each case the right hand is in the varada mudrā, and the left gracefully holds the stalk of a lotus flower. On the right and left side there rise the stout stalks of lotus-flower in a delicate curve ending in flowers and foliage. Both figures are richly ornamented with necklace, waistband, karnapāras, armlets, wristlets and anklets, which are all elaborately, though not very delicately, moulded. Their heads are crowned with a jatamukuta consisting of long locks of curly hair. The iconographic features of these two images conform exactly to the sādhanaṇa devoted to the Lokanātha variety of Avalokiteśvara ...”

(c) Neg. 1516 (1915–16), the original photograph taken by the Archaeological Department showing the ‘Indian’ Lokanātha side by side with the ‘Pyu’ Maitreya, as discovered and placed in Pagán Museum in 1916. In that year (see ASB 1916, p. 37, para 86), the Museum acquired “eleven stone, and two bronze figures, which were found at Paunggu Paya ... One of the bronze figures is that of a deva or Nat, and the second is that of a seated image of the Buddha." Most of the stone figures are shown on Pl. 153 supra. After studying the "List of Photographs" taken during 1915-16 (ASB 1916, p. 52), I think it pretty certain that Neg. 1516 shows the two Paunggu bronzes, wrongly described as a Deva and a Buddha. This is confirmed by Negs. 2930, 2931 (1927-28) showing the 'Pyu' Maitreya "found in Paunggu temple."

Plate 447. Avalokiteśvara. Tārā devī.

(a) Neg. 1515 (1915-16). Originally photographed at Pagan Museum with (b) infra: see ASB 1916, p. 52, item 25 "1515. Figures of Avalokiteśvara and of Tārā (in bronze)." Duroiselle comments (ibid., p. 3): - "Two figures, rather rare in Burma, are found in this museum. One is a small bronze Avalokiteśvara standing in his usual attitude of 'charity', varamudrā, and holding a lotus stalk in his left hand. He is easily identified by the figure of his Dhyāni Buddha, Amitābha, sitting in his tiara crosslegged, with his hands one upon the other in his lap. Another, rarer still - I think the one in the museum is the only one up to now found in Burma - is Tārā, the consort of Avalokiteśvara, easily recognizable by her attitude." See also Ray, Sanskrit Buddhism in Burma, fig. 3, and pp. 41, 111: - "A small bronze standing in a slight tribhanga pose with the right hand in varada mudrā, and the left holding a lotus-stalk. ... Pagan, c. 10th-11th century." Cf. Text, Ch. X, pp. 195, n. 77; 198, n. 88.

(b) Neg. 1515 (1915-16). See Duroiselle's note in (a) above; also Ray, op. cit., fig. 4 (the image is bronze, not stone), and p. 111: - "Tārā ... Pagan. c. 10th-11th century. Slight tribhanga pose. Forearms broken, feet mutilated. [Ornaments:] kundala [Ear-rings], keyīra [Upper Armllets], mekhala [Girdle]." This standing figure is now at Mandalay Archaeological Office. Height 3\(\frac{1}{2}\) in.

(c, d) Negs. 1775, 1776 (1917-18). Front and back views of a "figure of the goddess Tārā in bronze, from Manawgôn village, Myothit township, Magwé district." Figure seated in padmāsana on a pedestal of down-turned lotus petals.

Total height 3 in. Now at Pagan Museum.

See ASB 1918, pp. 31-32, para 65; ASI 1918, Part I, Pl. XVII, figs. 1 and 2, and p. 27. Taw Sein Ko writes: - "Found among the débris while digging around an old and ruined temple near Manawgôn ... [Tārādevi] is represented as seated crosslegged on a lotus throne, with her right hand in the Charity mudrā, while her left holds by its stem the long stalk of a blue lotus (utpala). She wears anklets, bracelets, armlets, a necklace, earrings and a crown, and her hair is done up into a knot at the back of her head in the fashion of the South Indian coiffure. The anatomy of the figure, especially its deep navel, slender waist, and well-developed bosom, indicates its Indian origin." See also Ray, op. cit., p. 45. The left hand, they both add, is in vitarka mudrā.

The Tārā is the Green Tārā, Śyāmā or Khadiravanyi Tārā, as shown by the pose varadamudrā, and the flower, the blue lotus (utpala). See B. Bhattacharyya, The Indian Buddhist Iconography (1958), pp. 226-227.

It is now at Mandalay Archaeological Office. Ray (Brahmanical Gods in Burma, Pl. XII 17, and pp. 45–47, 91) notes that from "the stiff rigid modelling of the body, the hard expression of the face, the paucity of ornaments in so late an example (belonging not earlier than the 13th century A.D.), the rough and rigid convention of the different features, and, last but not least, the conventional curving flame designs at the ends of the two shoulders, so common in Burmese images of a later date, we are led to believe that the image had ... been locally cast by an indigenous craftsman in the service of a Brahmanical master. ... The distended ear-lobes, a characteristic feature of Buddha images, are noteworthy, and the simple and crude workmanship of the ornaments is interesting.

The god has four hands, the two upper hold the cakra and the śankha ... the lower right is in the varada [Read abhaya] "pose, and the lower left is placed upon ... the gaddā. The yajñopāvita or the sacred thread across the body, is easily recognizable, but interesting is the udarabandha or the belt round the belly. This seems frankly to be bhogasthānaka mūrti of Viṣṇu" [image for the women’s apartments].

(d) Inscribed bronze Bell, small but heavy. The tongue inside is lost. Struck by the finger, it gives a pure musical note. It was "picked up in a field E. of the Tamani Okkyauk, S.E. of the Myinkaba village. It is 12 1/4 in. high and 1 3/4 in. thick at the mouth whose diameter is 6 in. and circumference 19 3/4 in." See ASB 1938, pp. 7-8, Pl. II (a), and Appendix H, p. xi, No. 6. It is now at Pagan Museum. [phot. Tin Oo]

The inscription, 1 clear line of Pali engraved around the lower rim, is given by Duroiselle as follows:

I therassa tambaliñkassa jinasāsanadhārino ārāme ratane cetye ghanḍam pūjeti satthuno amaṅgonāma nāmena sāsanāṭhajjhako naro
```

"The man who has the welfare of Buddha's religion at heart, Amaṅga by name, offers this bell to the Teacher at the Ratana Stupa in the monastery of Thera Tambalinka, the upholder of the religion of the Conqueror."

"Palaeographically," he adds, "it may be dated as the 13th--14th century A.D. The therā Tambalinka is otherwise unknown."

This, however, is not so. 'Tamani,' written Tāmaṇi, is a modern misreading of Old Burmese Tāmalin. This site, where the bell was found, was a large monastic settlement in the latter part of the Pagan period, presided over by the mlat kri Tamalin, "Most Venerable Tāmalin." His original inscription (I.B. Pl. III 265, 266), a pillar with three inscribed (but damaged) faces formerly set up in situ (I think it has now been moved to Pagan Museum), records a series of dedications between 1262 and 1280 A.D. The donor of the bell, probably a minor Burmese official called Amaṅ, is described (so I read it) as a sāsanāṭhambhako, "Pillar of the Religion."

(a) Neg. 4015 (1937–38), "A shallow bronze bowl found by coolies while repairing the road on the W. of Myinkaba-gyi monastery", Myinpagan. See Duroiselle, ASB 1938, p. 8: "4 1/2 in. in width, and 15 in. in circumference at the brim, and 2 in. in height." Cf. ibid., Appendix F, p. vii, No. 10.

(b) Neg. 3405 (1930–31). "Two bronze trays [or gongs] found in a mound close to the N. of Tawya-gyaung monastery, Thiripyitsaya," in Shwé Doe's field.

(d) Two bronze Bowls now at Pagan Museum.
[phot. Khin Maung Zaw]
One measures: – Height 3\(\frac{3}{4}\) in. Diameter at top 6\(\frac{1}{4}\) in., at base 4\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. The other (labelled No. \(\frac{5}{10}\)) measures: – Height 3\(\frac{3}{4}\) in. Diameter at top 6 in., at base 4\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.

(a) Neg. 3403 (1930–31). “A bronze water-goglet found in a mound close to the N. of Tawya-gyaung monastery, Thiripyitsaya,” in Shwe Doe’s field.

(b) Neg. 3404 (1930–31). “A bronze water-goglet found in a mound close to the N. of Tawya-gyaung monastery, Thiripyitsaya,” in Shwe Doe’s field. Spout broken off.

(c, d) A white bronze goglet (two aspects) dug up at Thiripyitsaya village, and now at Pagan Museum. Labelled No. \(\frac{1}{10}\). With long spout and open top expanding above the neck.
Height 5\(\frac{1}{4}\) in. Circumference of body 14 in. Length of spout 2\(\frac{1}{4}\) in.
Compare the earthenware goglet (Pl. 453 a).

Plates 452, 453. PAGÁN PERIOD POTTERY.

Plate 452.

See ASB 1920, Pl. II, fig. 3, and p. 25.
Found in the relic-chamber of a ruined pagoda, together with a bronze image of the Buddha (figs. 1 and 2) seated in prašamboinasana, both hands in vitarka mudrā [cf. Negs. 2179, 2180]. “The earthen vase,” says Duroiselle, “is a very fine specimen of pottery, the cover of which imitates the outlines of a stūpa; it was found empty, together with the seated Buddha, and probably contained relics.” He intended to deposit both in the Phayre Museum, Rangoon; but the elders of Twanté obtained permission from the Government to keep them at Twanté; “and for their proper exhibition and safe custody, Ma Nu, a daughter of the late U On Gaing, C.I.E., has undertaken to build a tazaung, at her own expense, on the platform of the Shwehsandaw pagoda there” (ASB 1921, p. 7). Enquiries made by the Burma Historical Commission at that pagoda, elicited the reply that they were not there, and are probably lost.”

(b) Neg. 3381 (1930–31). A similar earthenware vessel, without the lid, “found in the main relic chamber of the encased stupa situated close to a ruined temple (No. 441) near Seinnyet-nyi-ama pagodas,” S. of Myinpagan. See U Mya, ASI 1930–34, Part II, Pl. XCIX (b), and Part I, p. 177: “The contents of the principal relic-chamber consisted of an empty earthenware vessel.
(Pl. XCIX b) covered over and surrounded with terracotta votive tablets. All the tablets found here bear either the seal of King Anoratha or other marks pertaining to his period.” Note the stencilled fig-leaf pattern below the neck of both these pots.
Height 14\frac{1}{2} in. Breadth at base 11\frac{1}{2} in. Max. circumference 48 in. Found W. of the road, S.W. of Seinnyet pagodas. For historical conclusions drawn on the strength of these two pots, see Ch. II, p. 20.

(c) Neg. 3416 (1930–31). “Two bull-heart-shaped earthenware vases containing mercury, discovered at a mound close to the E. of Tawya-gyaung monastery, Thiripyitsaya.” See U Mya, ASI 1930–34, Part II, Pl. C (f), and Part I, pp. 179–180. Of the three mounds close to the E. of the Tawya-gyaung, “one marks the site of a monastery. . . . At the N.E. corner of the monastery-site and close to the foundations of a wall, there were found two bull-heart-shaped vases of burnt clay containing mercury. Each vase, about 5\frac{1}{2} in. in height, was glazed and strongly made.

(d) Negs. [2055 and] 2056 (1919–20). “An earthenware relic-casket found at a ruined pagoda, Hsimy İlk wireless village,” Thazi, Meiktila district. Found together with the bronze standing Buddha (Pl. 430 c) and the bronze mirror (Pl. 450 c). See ASB 1920, p. 33 (items 64–67) and pp. 23–24.

Plate 453.

(b, c) Two earthenware pots found by cultivators, in Oct. 1960, S. of Nat-hlaung-gyaung, in the moat just outside the city-wall of Pagán.
[phot. Ba Shin]
The taller one measures 14 in. high. Diameter of mouth 8\frac{1}{2} in. Max. circumference 36 in. The rounder one measures 11 in. high. Diameter of mouth 6\frac{1}{2} in. Max. circumference 32 in.

Plate 454. The Pagán Cetiya (elevation and cross-section) – hypothetical reconstructions by U Htwé Sein.

See Text, Ch. XIII, pp. 234 follg.
(a) Old Style – with harmikā.
(b) ‘Aniruddha’ style – without harmikā.
(a) Neg. 5524 (1953-54). Plan of brick monastery S. of Sōmingyi pagoda, \( \frac{1}{2} \) mile S. of Myinpagan. It consists of a chapel, 11 cells, lobby and two-storeyed frontage, with stone-flagged floors and staircase in S.E. corner. The central garth was once filled with a two-storeyed wooden building or college. The monastery measures 83 ft. from E. to W., and 79 ft. from N. to S.

See Duroiselle, A.S.I. 1936, pp. 71-72 and Pl. XXXI a, b; 1937, pp. 75-76 and Pl. XXIX. Two votive tablets found in one of the cells, are similar to others of ‘Aniruddha’ type found in Shwehsandaw relic-chamber, and one in a mound S. of the Taw-ya-gyaung with Pyu writing (v. A.S.I. 1927, Pl. XXXIX a, and 1928, p. 125).

See also the earlier notice by the architect Braxton Sinclair at J.B.R.S. Vol. X, Part I, p. 3 and Plate 7 ("Monastery S. of Apeyatana"), reprinted in Fiftieth Anniversary Publications No 2, p. 507 and Pl. 7. He notes "the windows and most of the doors" as having "flat arches with radiating voussoirs beautifully finished. . . . It is very doubtful and improbable that this refinement of the arch principle was even known to any nation in Europe at this period".

(b) Neg. 3915 (1936-37). Two-storeyed chapel with ambulatory, on W. side of the monastery S. of Sōmingyi pagoda.

(c) Compare similar plan of Salban Vihāra on the Mainamati hills W. of Comilla, in East Pakistan – the Patikkara of Old Burmese inscriptions. Reproduced, by kind permission of the Pakistan Government, from the plan shown facing p. 3 of Dr. F. A. Khan’s booklet, “Excavations on Mainamati Hills near Comilla (1956)”.

I am not a botanist. In this Index I merely assemble such material as has come to me in reading the Old Mon and (mostly pre-Standard) Old Burmese inscriptions of Pagán. The two chief sources have been: –

(i) the various lists, Mon and Burmese, of the Bodhi-trees of the 28 Buddhas (Text, pp. 391–397).
(ii) Sumedha’s Old Burmese list of trees, flowers, etc., engraved on the reverses of the thousand votive tablets at the Chitsagôn site (Text, pp. 102–104; and Catalogue of Plates 41–48) – perhaps the oldest writings in Burmese extant.

If my view about this Chitsagôn trove is right, both these lists originated from a desire to find equivalents in the two chief Burma vernaculars for terms, mostly botanical, encountered in translating Buddhist texts in Pali or Sanskrit. The common culture was Buddhist: but the three languages – Sanskrit/Pali, Mon and Burmese – had little in common; and the botanical climates in which their speakers lived were very different. Here one needs to distinguish – (a) the plateau-climate of Yunnan; and, in particular, the high wet river-gorges on its western side, along which the proto-Burmans had found their way into Burma; (b) the frost-line (around 3000 ft. above sea level) which sharply divides Burma’s temperate from its tropic flora; (c) the hot half-desert climate of Central Burma (Tattadesa), where the Mraññā settled, with a yearly rainfall around 30 inches; (d) the lush monsoon climate of Lower Burma, where most of the Mons lived, with a yearly rainfall at Thaton of over 200 inches, and two distinct seasons, wet and dry; (e) the Malayan climate to the south, with an almost daily shower throughout the year. The climate of India, no doubt, had contrasts equally great; but the flora, even of Magadha, often differs from that of Burma: e.g. the Sāla tree (Shorea robusta), prominent at the Buddha’s birth and death, is not to be found in Burma. Old Burmese and Mon scholars must have worked hard before they found, in Pentacme suavis, a worthy approximation. We must, in fact, expect in this Index a number of mistakes, inaccuracies and confusions, not only mine; but the reader may, I hope, reach my conclusion that Rājakumār and his hard-worked, fast-working, band of scholars did their work pretty well, considering all the difficulties.

With regard to Mon, one feels especially grateful to Halliday and Shorto for what they have done to define botanical terms; but here much remains to be done by the botanists, as the following fact will show: – H. G. Hundley and U Chit Ko Ko’s greatly enlarged Third Edition of the List of Trees ...... recorded from Burma with Vernacular Names (1961) devotes 131 pages to Burmese names and only 2 to Mon.

In the compilation of this Index I have consulted chiefly the following books (most are cited in the Bibliography):

Sawyer and Daw Nyun – Classified List of the Plants of Burma, Rangoon, 1927.
Lauffer, Bertold - Sino-Iranica - Chicago, 1919.
Abhidhānappadīpikā (Old and New Nissayas – Burmese) – see Bib. s.v. Kyaw-aung-san-hta Sayadaw and Aggadhammabhivamsa.

On the Burmese side I have also received precious help from our lexicographer U Wun, and on Old Khmer from Mme. Lewitz: in particular, from the recent article by J. E. Vidal, G. Martel and S. Lewitz, “Notes Ethnobotaniques sur quelques plantes en usage au Cambodge” (BEFEO, LX, 1969, pp. 171–232).

ABBREVIATIONS: – O.M., Mid. M., M. or L.M. – Old, Middle and Late Mon, transcribed. O.B., B. or L.B. – Old and Late Burmese transcribed. Phonetic pronunciations in square brackets. Skt. – Sanskrit. Lok. – Lokahteikpan. Botanical identifications generally given according to works mentioned above by Hundley, Burkill, and Shorto. Other references by names of authors of works listed above.

Acacia concinna 103. Soap acacia climber. Pl. 44 (m, n), 48 (b). O.B. kampon, kampwon. B. kaṅpwan: [kṭʰbō⁴] M. kapow [kapo], parop [parop].

Acacia leucophloea White-barked acacia of the Dry Zone. O.B. tannoḥ, tanhoṅ (I.B. 6⁴). B. t'annoḥ; t'anoḥ: [t'anoŋ].

Acanthus ilicifolius 103. Mimusops blossom. Pl. 45 (j) khirhā, khīrhrā. B. k'arā: [k'aya⁴]? M. keh [khi]? (Shorto gives the latter as Mimusops elengi).

Aglaia odorata 394-5. Skt./Pali* priyafigu. Pali piyafigu. O.M. biyai - given in the Nidānakathd as the Bodhi tree of Piyadassi, whereas the Buddhavamsa gives kakudha (Pentaptera Arjuna). O.M. dirkufi (as given in Alopyi’) has not been identified.

Antheocephalus [Nauclea] cadamba Skt./Pali kadamba, nipā. O.B. ma-‘ū [mâʔu⁸]. Sometimes given as the Bodhi tree of Sumedha, instead of the nimba (Melia indica). Lace and Rodger (List of Trees .... 1922 ed.) give prung as the Mon equivalent of Antheocephalus cadamba.

Bamboos 102–4, 394. Sujāta’s Bodhi-tree was the Great Bamboo (Pali mahāvelu, Skt. veṇu). O.M. dūn. M. dun [tun] = bamboo. O.B. wā. B. wā: [wa⁴]. Sujāta’s tree, as given in *W.K. temple, is kratūwe wā, B. kralui wa: [tjalo⁹ wa⁴], Dendrocalamus brandisii. Cf. M. dun tali [tun kabe⁷], Dendrocalamus giganteus. At Pls. 44 (k, l), 46 (i), 47 (c, d) O.B. kra’ klū, kra klū are terms which, according to U Wun, “appear to combine generic names or prefixes for Bamboo (kra) and Reeds (kyii).” See his note in the Catalogue under Pl. 44 (l). Once “Hermit’s Bamboo-Reed” appears to be mentioned (Pl. 48 c). O. B. wan possibly derive from Skt./Pali vanisra.
Botanical Index

Barringtonia acutangula? 171. Pali mucala, mucalinda (the tree whose guardian serpent sheltered the Buddha during his 3rd (or 6th) week after the Enlightenment) is so identified in the P.T.S. dictionary. O.M. has simply mohen and O.B. mucalin. In modern B. the white-flowered kyai, kyai: or kyai:krī: tree is so identified by Hundle, Judson and Mason.

Bauhinia acuminata 395. Hundle gives the white mahāhlega: as the Burmese equivalent of this. And mahālīkā, mahāliyā is given as the regular Old Burmese equivalent of the Bodhi-tree of Siddhattha. His tree in the Pali is kaṭikāra, Pterospermum acerifolium (see infra).

Benincasa cerifera, the white gourd or ash pumpkin, the ‘kyauk-payon’ or “stone-pumpkin” of Modern Burmese, the “silver pumpkin” (khāpī san, śī san, pronounced ‘hōpo’) of Modern Mon, the ‘winter pumpkin (tunga-kwa) of Chinese. Provisionally we identify it with the “Tamil pumpkin” (kieē phūrum) of the Chitsagōn plaques (Pl. 47 d). Note the Sanskrit name kālinīga (Sino-iranica, p. 445).

Bignonia [or Stereospermum] suaveolens 392, 396. Pali/Skt. pāṭali, the Bodhi-tree of Vipassī. O.M. (Kyazin) gives twew, L.M. c‘u tuoēa, “a tree in the Asura world” (Halliday), sc. Pali cittapāṭali, the pied trumpet-flower. O.B. gives either saṃsāta (Stereospermum fimbriatum) or sac-khok-wat, sakkhawat. L.B. saṃsāt [tə3θəsə], sakkhawat [tək‘uʔ], other species of Stereospermum. O.M. (Lokadheikpan) may give twon (Ricinus communis); but the reading is doubtful.

Borassus flabellifer I03, 233, 23340. Palmaya toddy-palm. Skt./Pali tāla. O.M. tā [ta]. O.B. t‘ān (Pl. 44 i, j) [t‘a:].

Buchanania latifolia 152. Pali rājyātana “king-steed”, royal tree of the fairies. Skt. kṣīrīka (the milk tree). O.B. laṅlwan, L.B. laṅ:īwan: [Iɪəθɪə], where the Buddha spent his final week near the Bodhi tree, and received rice-cakes and honey from Tapussa and Bhallika.

Calotropis procera or gigantea Mudar tree and blossom. O.B. muriw pwoṅ (Pl. 45 o). L.B. muriwui: [mɔʔyʊ]. Skt. mandāra. Pali mandārava (? Coral tree).

Careya arborea Skt. (Atharvaveda) pilu. O.B. pānpūy, pānpūy kri (Pl. 44 a, b). L.B. b‘an‘b‘we: [bəʔ bwɛθ].

Cicer arietinum 103. Gram. O.B. kulā pay “Indian bean” (Pl. 42 d). Query L.M. ḫai lóm [boa lóm], Chickpea?

Coix lachryma-jobi Job’s tears. 103. O.B. kli (Pl. 44 o, p). L.B. kyit [tjö?]. Malayan jelai, jali.

Crataeva spp. 394–395. 39518. O.M. birley. L.M. balai [hǎo]. Crataeva religiosa or roxburghii, the three-leaved Caper tree. Skt./Pali vana. This is given (in Kyazin temple) as the Bodhi tree of Piyaḍassi. Some O.B. versions give riy kan t’ak or riy k’an tak, L.B. re-khatak [yèfkkhàd], i.e. Crataeva hygrophila. But the Buddhavamsa gives Piyaḍassi’s tree as kakudha (Pentaptera arjuna), and the Niḍānakātha as piyāṅgu. O.M. dirkuṅ is not identified. The O.B. variant sisya is the emblc myrobalan tree (Phyllanthus emblica).

Cucumis melo According to Laufer and others (see Sino-Iranica, p. 440 and n. 2), this is the “sweet melon” (tien-kua) of the Chinese. Probably it isaeikwā hmy, “fragrant cucumis” of Old Burmese (Pl. 44 c, d). L. Mon ga-i tmā [hǎi mo].

Cucumis sativus Cucumber. v. Laufer, Sino-Iranica, pp. 300–301. Perhaps this is the “tender cucumis”, sikhwā nī of Old Burmese (Pl. 44 e), and the “yellow melon” (huang-kua of 6th century Chinese. O.B. si-k’wa [Oik’cwa] is assuredly connected with Archaic Chinese *kwa (Grammata Serica 4 a).

Dolichandrone [Markhamia, Bignonia] stipulata 393. O.B. p’okkram’, p’okkrān, p’lokkrām. Given in O.B. lists as the Bodhi tree of Anomadassi. Is the old word synonymous with L.B. t’okkram’ [t’nū tjàng], applied to Terminalia alata etc.? Elsewhere Anomadassi’s tree is given as Pali ajjuna, O.M. klon, Pentaptera arjuna.

 Dolichos lablab var. lignosus 103. O.B. pay kri “big bean” (Pl. 42 a, b). v. Sawyer and DawNyun, p. 11.

Emblica ribes (climber, fruit of). 103. O.B. ip mhūy (Pl. 44 f, g). Identified with Skt. vidāṅga, Pali bilaṅga. See U Wun’s note in the Catalogue of Plates; and Sino-Iranica, p. 582.

Eragrostis spp. O.B. saman: [bâm]. Identified on a Mingalazedi plaque (Kusanāli Jāt. 121) and elsewhere (v. Judson’s Dictionary, p. 1122) with Pali kusa, Skt. kuṣa. This is identified in the dictionaries as Poa cynosuroides. O.M. (same Jātaka) gus. L.M. lha khuinh [hila k’n̪h]. A different O. B. equivalent for Kuṣa is given in a Weteyi-in Kubyaukgyi ink-gloss (same Jātaka); but the reading is not clear.
Botanical Index

Erythrina indica 176, 379, 385, 387. Red Coral tree over Indra’s throne. Skt. pārijāta. Pali pāricchattaka ("shading all around"). O.M. taṁ pumpeṇ pārijāt (MK 70, 163), taṁ pumpeṇ pārikājāt (Lokahteikpan). L.M. bapeṇ [hapane], L.B. kasac [kāthi].

Erythrina fulgens 395. Coral tree or flower, one of the five celestial trees. Skt. mandāra. Pali mandarava.

Ficus glomerata 396-7. Sycamore or Clustered Fig. Skt./Pali udumbara, the Bodhi tree of Konāgamanas. O.K [K33] kwet. L.M. kwit [kwet].

Ficus religiosa 134, 167, 170, 392, 397. Skt. pippala, Peepal, the "horse-stand" asvattha tree of the Rig Veda. O.M. jrey asa; L.M. jrai [s6a].

Hibiscus rosa sinensis Shoe-flower. O.B. khoiran (I.B. I 51). L.B. khoi ran: [k'af3ya4].

Laufer, Sino-Iranica, pp. 411-414. Laufer spells the Indian word udambara, and traces similar names in S. China from the Tang dynasty onwards.

Mangifera indica Mango tree and fruit. O.M. truk (Ep. Birm. II, I, 60, 61). L.M. kruk [kr3k]. O.B. si-ryak (Pl. 42 e). L.B. sarak [fâye²]. Skt. âmra. Pali amba. The “fragrant mango”, Skt./Pali puñдарika, the Bodhi tree of Sikhi, is given as the “white mango”, sīryâk phuñ in O.B. (Text, p. 396, and S.I.P., p. 165), and kruk blâñ in L.M. Gañça’s mango tree at the gate of Sāvatthi was of this kind. For the Mango’s history, see Burkill, II, pp. 1403–06: Laufer, Sino-Iranica, p. 552.

Momordica monadelpha (?) The Bodhi tree of Dhammādassi is said to be Pali bimbajâla “golden net”, explained in a commentary as ratta kuravaka, “the red amaranth tree”. In Sanskrit bimbâ or bimbajâ is given as “Momordica monadelpha, a plant bearing a bright red gourd”; kuravaka as “red amaranth or a red kind of Barleria”. These. I think, are hedge-plants or shrubs, hardly suitable for a Buddha, 80 cubits high, to sit under. But Momordicas are climbers: they can be grown in shady pergolas, and their bitter fruits are popular eating. Of the two O.M. equivalents, one (hardly legible) suggests a silvery colour; the other is chu ŋyê mat “eye-disease tree”. Momordica is certainly used medicinally, but not (so far as I know) for sore eyes. The O.B. name, myañkhâ phan “face-flower”, is applied (so Hundley and Chit Ko Ko state on p. 375) to three shrubs or small trees: Ervatamia ophirrhizoides, Hemigraphis fava and Pavetta indica. The O.M. name for Momordica charantia was krawel (I.B. I 3⁴), L.M. kawew [kawe].

Musa sapientum Banana, plantain. O.M. brât. (I.B. III 300⁶) L.M. brât [prât]. O.B. nhâk pyow, nhâpyow (Pl. 42 c, d). For other O.B. spellings, nhâkpyiû, nhâkpylaw, nhâkpyiûw, see I.B. II 140 a⁸, b⁸. L.B. nhâkpyo: [hñé'pyó⁴].

Nymphaea esculenta Edible white water-lily. Skt./Pali kumuda. Mentioned in the Atharvaveda. O.M. kumuit. Is either of these O.B. kra tanc’ip [tja3 taz6?], the “Seal Lotus”? Or is this the Vedic/Pali pu.nḍarikaim, the white lotus? U Wun thinks the latter: see his note in the Catalogue of Plates.

Oroxylum indicum (Bignonia indica) 392, 394. Trumpet flower. Skt. śoṇa, śoṇakā; Pali sāṇa; the “Crimson tree”. Bodhi-tree of Paduma and Nārada. O.M. drāṇ ek, dluṅ ek. L.M. drāṇ ṭek [krēn eak]. O.B. kroṅ ṭiyā “cat’s tongue” [tjau3 dja3]. Other attempts to identify the tree are O.M. luntih (?), and O.B. mun (“bread tree”, Artocarpus ?) and klup [tjo?]. A “big klup tree” is mentioned elsewhere in a list of land-boundaries (I.B. III 2468).

Pandanus furcatus Screwpine. O.B. chapswā (Pl. 46 c). L.B. chapswā: [s’ə3 ʔwaʔ]. Or possibly Pandanus tectorius, the fragrant screwpine. L.B. chapswā: p’ui: [s’ə3ʔap’u4]. L.M. nāṃ pkau snī tū [nom kao hœʔ tao]. In O.B. chapswā is often mentioned (I.B. I 251, 318; III 273, 27430, etc.).

Pentacme suavis 3854, 394, 396. “Burmese Sal” (Burkill, II, p. 1690). corresponding to India’s Shorea robusta. O.B. ankryaṇ (given as the Bodhi-tree of Padumuttara and Vessabhū). The word may be a borrowing from O.M. aṅgreṇ (given as the Bodhi-tree of Śikhi. L.B. ankrāṇ: [I3dji4]. L.M. aṅreṇ [ehrēn], the “lard Shorea”.

Pentaptera (Terminalia) arjuna 380, 393, 394. Skt. arjuna; Pali aṣāṇa; L.M. arjuna (Skt. aṣāṇa) is the Thunderbolt; and so is L.M. gau, gaujiw; but O.M. -s would normally pass into -h, not -r or -w. This tree, according to our botanists, is L.B. thok kraṅ’ [t’au3 tja3]. In O.B. Tissa’s tree is almost always given as Pterocarpus (O.B. pitok, byatok, pyatofi); and so too in L.M. (nāḍu, māmdu), the gum-kino tree.

Phoenix spp. including the Date Palm, for the history of which see Laufer, Sino-Iranica, pp. 385–391; and Burkill II, pp. 1712–4. P. dactylifera hardly grows or fruits in Burma, though the modern name for the fruit - B. cwamripalwam [s03bal13], M. campalari [compolom] - is well known; and the Marsh Date Palm (L.B. safnpofi: 03bauf4) is not rare in Lower Burma. Gold models of date-palms (sindi) were offered in tribute to Kyanzittha: see Text, p. 64, and U Wun’s note 95.

Phyllanthus or Cicca emblica 395, 396. Emblic myrobalan. Skt./Pali āmalaka. The Bodhi-tree assigned to Phussa in the Nidānakathā. It corresponds to O.M. tirluy, tarluy L.M. taluai [kalbe], “Otaheite gooseberry”; and to O.B. sisyāt, sisyā, L.B. rhac rhā [jiʔ jaʔ]; but the usual Burmese name in the plains is now jхи:phrǐ [zi4 byuʔ], “white jujube”. v. Sino-Iranica, p. 378.

Pinus [longifolia] 394, 3944. Pine-tree. Padumuttara’s Bodhi-tree, as given in the Buddhavāsā, was sa.la. If this is the same as Skt./Pali sarala, “the straight tree”, it was a Pine. And this would agree with several O.B. lists which give tanrhum, tanruhm, L.B. than:ru: [t’ʧyu4] = Pine. The O.M. equivalent is show, which I do not find in the modern dictionaries.

Poa cynosuroides Identified in the dictionaries with Pali kusa, Skt. kusa. Cf. O.M. gus, L.M. [kamat] lha khüh [hlaʔ k’OH]. A bunch of it was Pali dabbha, Skt. darbha, ‘doob’; O.M. jiljip, jiljup, L.M. dajip, dajuip [hacip, hac3p]. See Cynodon dactylon, and, for the O.B. equivalent, Eragrostis.

Pterocarpus indicus 395. Gum kino tree, ‘padauk’. O.B. pitok, pyatok, byatok, pyatroń. L.B. pitok [pâdâuʔ]. L.M. mâmų, nâdî [nâdú, nêdû]. This, in O.B. and L.M., is normally given as the Bodhi-tree of Tissa, which, in Pali, is asana (Penlaptera tomentosa, q.v.). Has there been a confusion between Pali asana and Malay angansa (= Pterocarpus indicus)? For the latter tree, see Burkill, II, pp. 1829–32.

Pterospermum acerifolium Pali kankirä, kannikärä. Skt. karnikara. Bodhi-tree of Siddhattha. Our Burma botanists today identify it with the tall Taung-hpetwun tree [hill p‘eqw64], a Sterculia described by Rodger on p. 49 of his Handbook of the Forest Products of Burma. But in O.B. the equivalent of kankiärä is given as mahâlikã, mahâliyka, now generally identified with various species of Bauhinia.

Ricinus communis 385^, 392, 395. Castor-oil tree. According to the Buddhavamsa, the Bodhi-tree of Phussa was the āmaṇḍã (Skt. āmaṇḍa, manḍa), which Monier-Williams identifies with the castor-oil plant, also called in ancient India eranda. Old Burma texts, Mon and Burmese, generally follow the Nidâнакâthã in making the āmalaka Phussa’s tree. In MK Jâtakas 109 (Kunjakapîva) and 295 (Anta), where the Bodhisattva was a castor-oil tree spirit, the O.M. word is twon, L.M. toñ [toñ]; and in Lokahritekpan chu twon may possibly be the Bodhi-tree assigned to Vipassî, the Buddha next to Phussa. twon is also a possible reading for Saranâkhkara’s Bodhi-tree in Kyazin. The L.B. word for the tree is krrak chî [tjeʔ s‘u*]. For its history (it is thought to be African in origin), see Sino-Iranica, pp. 403–4; Burkill, II, pp. 1907–12.

Saccharum munja (? S. arundinaceum) Skt. (Rg Veda)/Pali muñja. The O.B. word occurs at Lokahritekpan 83 (q.v., with n. 34 on p. 94). Col. Ba Shin identifies the grass with L.B. phřu chain [p’yuu^sâ:], which has white plumes. The O.B. reading is doubtful: he reads (so)pit; I read (sap)it or (sam)it.
Botanical Index

Santalum album Sandalwood. 39, 103, 23680, 35216. Skt./Pali candana. Skt. gośîrṣa candana “ox-head sandalwood”; śrî khaṇḍa (B. sarakkhaṇa’, ōyîṣy’k’ā). O.B. tanc̥kū (Pl. a2 r; Lokhaṭeikpan 166). L.B. candakū: [sādāgu]. Mid. Mon candan (XII F4). L.M. caln [kalon]. For its history (probably Pacific in origin), see Burkill, II, pp. 1952-56; Laufer, Sino-Iranica, pp. 552, 554. Post-Vedic in India, its Indian name may well have spread with the spread of Indian religions.

Shorea [Vatica] robusta 157, 180, 313, 319, 353, 363, 385, 394, 396. Skt. sāla. Pali sāla. Bodhi-tree of Vessabhû, and (according to the Niddnakathā) of Padumuttara. This Indian tree is not recorded in Burma, but is identified with O.M. crah’, and tintān, tintīn, L.M. dhîthan [t‘t‘an]; and O.B. ankryaññ (Pentacme suavis, q.v.).

Solanum melongena Egg-plant, brinjal. O.B. bhattaky (?). See Pl. 45 f, and U Wun’s note in the Catalogue of Plates. Seems to be connected with Skt. vârtaki, Pali vatinigana. The plant, which grows freely all over Burma, both hills and plains, is now commonly called in L.B. kharahm: [k‘aya4]; and kharan occurs as the name of a village in O.B. (I.B. II 2294). The L.M. name is khaḍoññ [haďoññ]. Malay têrông. Khmer nanoññ.

Terminalia chebula 393, 394. Yellow or black myrobalan tree, full of tannin, “astringent and bitter”. Hence its Burmese name phan khâ: [p‘a³k‘a³]. In Mon the name of the tree is either gacwa [hacnọ]; or khamow [homọ]. Skt./Pali haritaki, “yellow myrobalan”. v. Laufer, Sino-Iranica, pp. 378, 581.

Terminalia bellerica. Belleric myrobalan. O.B. secchim (Pl. 44 h), sacchim’ (I.B. I 75 a48, etc.). L.B. sacchim’ [bī³ s‘e¹]. L.M. ma kluiw [mę‘kla³]. Skt./Pali vibhītaki.

Vigna catjang Cow Pea. O.B. pây lwan (Pl. 41 d). L.B. pai:lwâñ: [pe⁴ lō⁴]. Query L.M. Ḿai lôm [bòa lôm] = chick pea? Pê or Bê, the general term for beans, is widespread in Old Mon/Khmer (both North and South), Karen, and Old Burmese; but not in Dai languages.

Vitis vinifera 103. The Grape Vine from the Mediterranean East. Not grown in Burma. The L.B. word for the Grape, capyak (zab̄yi?), is probably from Persian zabīb “raisin”. O.B. mathunsara (Pl. a2 b), from Skt./Pali madhurasā (lit. “sweet taste”), seems most likely to mean the Grape, since local words for its other meanings (honey, sugarcane, etc.) were readily available. v. Laufer, Sino-Iranica, pp. 220-245, especially p. 241.
Wrightia spp.  O.B. lak thut-pwoñ [le³ t‘o³ blossom] (Pl. 45 c). Of the three applications given to this term by Hundley and Chit Ko Ko, Wrightia seems the most probable because of its “pretty flowers”. Alstonia scholaris (q.v.) is already provided with the O.B. name cañrañ. See U Wun’s note in the Catalogue of Plates.

Xylia dolabriformis  385², 396. “A tree pre-eminently of Burma, found also in Siam” (Burkill, II, 2274). “Pyinkado (Burmese ironwood ... found almost throughout Burma .... reaches a height of 120 ft.” (Rodger, Handbook of the Forest Products of Burma, p. 40). O.M. prañ [pran], given as the Bodhi-tree of Koñãgamana in Lokahteikpan – a strange mis-identification of Pali udumbara. O.B. plañ (I.B. IV 421 b³ – where it was used for the poles of a palanquin). Probably L.B. pyañ: katui: [pyI⁴ kãdo⁴], “musk-ironwood”.

OLD BURMA CALENDAR

Most calendrical terms, both in Old Mon and Old Burmese inscriptions, derive from the old sky-worship of the Sun, Moon and five Planets, common to Indo-Aryan astrology.

Days of the week

Sunday Vedic Aditi, Infinite Space, was mother of the 12 Āditya gods, ruling (it seems) the 12 months of the year. The Sun (Sūrya in the narrow sense) embraced the Āditya in a broader sense, determining the full year (samvatsara), reckoned in the Ṛgveda as 360 days.

O.M. adittawar (IX C22), adityawar (Lamphun, Vat Don A9). Mid. Mon aduit (XII E53). L.M. aduit [atät].

O.B. tannhāṅkunuy (I.B. I 229), tannhāṅkanuy (I 273), nweiy (I 198), etc. Comparing this obscure term with the similar term for Monday (tannhāṅ-la), we can perhaps suppose that tannhan implies ‘heavenly body’, and kunuy, kanuy means ‘sun’: if so, it may probably be a corruption of O.M. tney = sun; and -la may be Tibetan dła = moon.

Monday Moon-day. French Lundi (Latin lunae dies). Sanskrit candra, “shining one”.

O.M. candrawar (IX B12). Mid. M. can (XII E59). L.M. can [çon].

O.B. tannhāṅlā, tanhāṅla, 2 lā (I.B. I 44, 171).

Tuesday Day of Tiw = the planet Mars. French Mardi (Latin Martis dies). Sanskrit Aṅgāra, the “fire-brand” planet.

O.M. anāṅgār (IX C19), anāṅgārwār (Lamphun, Vat Don B13). L.M. anā [ənə].

O.B. anāṅkā, angā, 3 kā (I.B. I 149, 915).

Wednesday Day of Woden or Odin = the planet Mercury. French Mercredi (Latin Mercurii dies). Sanskrit Budha “the wise”.

O.B. puttahō, buddhahū, budhahū, putthahū (IB I 8 b3, 9 a4, 13a), butuhū (II 112a), 4 hū, 4 niy (I 30 a9).

Thursday Day of Thor = the planet Jupiter. French Jeudi (Latin Jovis dies). Sanskrit Bṛhaspati, “the lord of prayer”.

O.B. krisspati (IB II 112a), krāśbatiy (IV 365 b1), krāśapatiy, krasapatiy, 5 patiy, 5 neiy (I 71, 159, 24a, 94 a24; IV 374a).

Friday Day of Frig, wife of Odin = the planet Venus. French Vendredi (Latin Veneris dies). Sanskrit Śukra, “the bright one”.

O.B. sukhrā, sukkrā, sokkrā, 6 krā, 6 niy (IB I 8 a3, 10 a8, 129, 1959, 691; II 113a).

Saturday Day of Saturn = Skt. sani, śanaiscara, the “slow-moving” planet.

O.B. caniy, o niy (IB I 28 a2, b4, 104a).
The Twelve Months of the year

These, in Sanskrit, are named after the heavenly bodies near which the full moon of each month is seen to pass. Old, Middle and Late Mon terms follow the Sanskrit. Old Burmese has its own names, many of which look non-Burmese in origin, but still await definitive explanation. In timing, they correspond strictly to the Mon/Sanskrit calendar. Modern Burmese has lost three of these old names: Mlwdytd (Wazo), Namtkai (Wagaung), and Santũ (Thadingyut); which, falling within the period of the Buddhist Lent, have now taken on instead the old names originally confined to the full-moon-days of the three months.

March/April

Sanskrit Caitra
O.B. Tankho, Tankhū (IB I 22⁴; II 116¹, 121 b¹). L.B. Taṁkhū; Taṁkū: [tāgu⁴]

April/May

Sanskrit Vaisākha
O.M. Besākha (V³²). Mid. M. Basāk (XII F⁸⁹). L.M. Pasāk [pāsaik].
O.B. Kūchūn, Khuchun, Kuchun, Kachun (I.B. I 7¹, 24¹, 30 ã⁹; II 113⁵, 124 b¹¹). L.B. Kachun [kās⁵³].

May/June

Sanskrit Jyeṣṭha

June/July

Sanskrit Āṣāḍha
O.B. Mlwydtā, Mlwātā (I.B. I 6¹, 8 a³). L.B. Wāchūi (lit. to keep Lent) [wa³ zo⁹]. Wā from Vedic varṣa “rain; rainy season; year”.

July/August

Sanskrit Śrāvaṇa
O.M. Śrāwan (? VI³). L.M. Swan; Gaḍai Si [hādɔa sẹ] “middle of Lent.”
O.B. Naṁkā (I.B. I 60 a¹); Naṁkā la Wakoň satañ (IV 419 a⁹). L.B. Wākoň [wa³ gɔn³], “top of Lent”.

August/September

Sanskrit Bhādra, Bhādrapada
L.M. Bhat [phōt].
O.B. Tuĩśalāñ (I.B. I 60 a¹); Tawsłañ, Tawsalañ, Tāauslañ (I.B. I 14¹, 37³, 90¹). L.B. Tōsaļañ: [tɔ³ dɔl⁴].

September/October

Sanskrit Āsvina, Āsvayuj
O.B. Santũ (I.B. I 19⁵, 29¹; II 112¹). L.B. Satañ:kywat (lit. “release from Lent”) [tɔd⁴ dju³].

October/November

Sanskrit Kārttika
O.M. Kārtik (IX B¹¹; Nagayôn gloss⁶). Mid. M. Gratuik (Bangkok Museum⁴).
L.M. Kathuik, Kathuin [kɔtˈhôn].

November/December

Sanskrit Mārgaśīrṣa, Mārgaśīras, Mrgašīra
Old Burma Calendar

December/January
Sanskrit Pauṣa, Puṣya
L.M. Puh \([\text{paoh}]\).
O.B. Plaseiw, Plasuw, Plásuiw (I.B. I 4\(^a\), 7\(^a\), 15\(^a\), 27\(^a\)).
L.B. Prásui \([\text{pya}^a \, \text{do}^a]\).

January/February
Sanskrit Māgha
O.M. Māgha (IX C\(^1\)), \text{Mid. M. Māk (XII A\(^3\)}.
L.M. Māk \([\text{màik}]\).
O.B. Tapuiw'thay, Tapuiw'thay (I.B. I 981, 12).
L.B. Tapuiw'thai: \([\text{tābo'-dwāt}]\).

February/March
Sanskrit Phalguna
O.M. Phallagun, Phalagun (IX C\(^2\), E\(^2\)). \text{Mid. M. Phallaguin, Phārlaguin (XII E\(^3\), N\(^4\), 10).}
L.M. Phawraguin \([\text{p'orak?n}]\).
O.B. Tapofi (I.B. II 32; I I21).
L.B. Tapof: \([\text{tābu4}]\).

Note. The O. B. month-names nam-yun, nam-kā, as well as O. B. nam-nāk (I. B. I 369) “morning”, and L. B. nam “day of the week on which one is born” and nam-gruih “planet presiding at birth”, point to a connection with Tibetan gnam, gnam-mk’a, “the heaven, the sky”. O. B. yun “hare” may also connect with yos, which figures in Tibetan as a month-name, as well as in the Twelve Year Cycle. But nothing else in these O. B. month-names suggests the Twelve Animals so widespread in the calendars of Asiatic languages (see Chavannes, “Le Cycle Turc des Douze Animaux”, Toûng-pao, Série II, Vol. VII, No. 1, 1906).

Three Eras

I. Era of the Religion. This era in Burma is always reckoned from the date of the Buddha’s parinir-vāna, which in Singhalese sources is dated 544 B.C. (Modern scholars in general tend to date this event round about 478 B.C.: see Cambridge History of India I, p. 697). Reckoned from 544 B.C., this era is frequently used in Burma’s inscriptions, often side by side with the Common Era, but sometimes by itself. The following dates previous to 1200 A.D. may be cited: –

(i) I.B. III 299 (Bodhgaya Burmese inscription, now lost. Final date: 657 S./1295–6 A.D.). It begins with a reference to Siri Dhammasoka building his 84,000 pagodas in “the 218th year of the Lord’s Religion”. – This is the conventional date for Asoka’s abhiseka, as given in the Mahāvamsa (ch. V, v. 21).

(ii) I.B. II 110. This inscription, from a mound S.E. of the Nagayôn, and now at Pagán Museum, W. Shed, Stone 134, belongs (palaeographically) to the latter half of the Pagán dynasty. It begins with the date “1625 of the Buddha’s Religion, 443 s.”, i.e. 1081–2 A.D., and records a dedication of ricefields at Calañ (Salin) by Jayasabhaṅ. The date is about 3 years before Kyansittha’s accession. The sambeṅ Jeyasabhaṅ is mentioned again, some twenty years later, in Kyansittha’s palace-inscription (Ep. Birm. III, I, Inscr. IX A\(^3\) – see Text, p. 68, n. 139).

(iii) The first dated original inscription of Pagán, that of Rājakumār, begins on all four faces with the accession of his father Kyansittha “in the 1628th year of the Lord’s Religion”, i.e. 1084 A.D. (v. Text, p. 74).

(iv) I.B. V 572 a (W. face of Stone 149 in Mandalay Palace Shed). Provenance unknown, but certainly original. It records a dedication of pagoda-slaves in 1735 A.B./553 s., i.e. 1191 A.D.

(v) I.B. I 9 a (Mandalay Palace Shed, Stone 292). Provenance unknown, but certainly original. It records a dedication of pagoda-slaves in 1737 A.B./555 s., i.e. 1193 A.D.

(vi) A small two-faced stone, formerly at the Payagon, W. Wetkyi-in, Pagán, now at Kyansittha Onhmin. The obverse is dated 512 S./1150 A.D. The reverse, in similar hand, is dated 1741 of the Religion, i.e. 1197 A.D.

II. Era of the Sakas (Mahāsakarāja). Founded by the Kuśāṇa emperor Kaniṣka in 78 A.D. Owing to the Sakas’ patronage of Buddhism, their era became popular with the spread of the Religion. But by the time it reached Central Burma, it was no more than a name, applicable to any Buddhist era, but generally confined, in its proper sense, to inscriptions in Sanskrit or Pali. Thus Cañsū I's Shwégu-gyi inscription (v. Text, p. 85) is in Pali; but the concluding lines, giving the dates of the first building and the completion of the temple, in 1053 M.S. (1131 A.D.), are in Sanskrit (v. I.B. I 244, 45).

III. The Common Era (Cūlasakarāja). This era, starting from 638 A.D., is often called the Burmese Era; and it is the era commonly used in Burmese inscriptions throughout the Pagán and subsequent periods. But it was also used before them in Lower Burma, in Kyanzittha's earliest Mon inscriptions: - Prome Inscr. VI² sakarāja cnām 455, “the year 455 of the Saka era”, i.e. 1093 A.D.; Mt. Kelāsa Inscr. V61 sakarāja 460, i.e. 1098 A.D.; and Kyaik Tè inscription (I.B. V 549⁴⁰) (same date). It is also virtually certain that it was used by the Pyu, apparently under the name ta kīkha, in the royal stone urn-inscriptions of Śrī Kṣetra, under the dates 35 (673 A.D.), 50 (688 A.D.), 57 (695 A.D.) and 80 (718 A.D.) - see Blagden's “The Pyu Inscriptions”, Epig. Ind. XII, No. 16, pp. 127-132. These dates come so near the beginning of the era that it seems probable that the Pyu invented it, and indeed that it marks the date of the founding of their first Buddhist capital in Lower Burma, Śrī Kṣetra.

It is also obvious that this era can have had no direct connection with the Śakas of North-west India. The word sakarac appears to have puzzled the Kyaukṣe Burmans when they first learnt Buddhism and writing from the local Mons in the 10th century. For in several of their mica schist ('Webu stone') and marble inscriptions they spelt the word sakka instead of saka (I.B. II 161 a¹, 18; V 571 b¹, 573 b¹, 580 a¹); and this has become the normal spelling even today, giving rise (I suspect) to the fable that it was founded by Sakka or Indra (v. Glass Palace Chronicle transl., p. 25).

Twelve Year Cycle.

The year-number in the sakarac is usually followed, both in Old Mon and Old Burmese inscriptions, by the Year-name (samvatsara) in the Twelve Year Cycle, the Cycle of Jupiter. As stated above, the Twelve Year Cycle in the northern and eastern languages of Asia usually consists of a fixed series of animal-names: Rat, Ox (or Buffalo), Tiger, Hare, Dragon, Snake, Horse, Goat, Monkey, Cock (or Partridge?), Dog, and Pig; and not seldom combines this duodecimal cycle with a different decimal one, thus forming a sexagesimal cycle. But Sanskrit was originally content with the duodecimal cycle, for which it employs the same names as those of the Twelve Months. Old Mon, and here also Old Burmese, follow the Sanskrit: so it is not necessary to repeat the names. The important thing is to know which year is which. It was the late J. S. Furnivall (founder of the Burma Research Society) who first worked out the correct order according to the inscripctional evidence: see his article, “The Cycle of Burmese Year-Names” (J.B.R.S. Vol. XII, Part II (August 1922, pp. 80–95). For ready reference, the table on p. 334 gives the system of year-names covering most of the inscripctional period of this book, both the number in the sakarac, and the A.D. date roughly corresponding. In reading any inscription, it is of course important to check whether the year-number agrees with the year-name. If there is any discrepancy, there has been a mistake.
Twelve Houses (Signs of the Zodiac)

Often (especially in Old Mon inscriptions) the rāsi or sign of the Zodiac (1/12th part of the ecliptic of 360°) is included in the date, the essential point being to note the Sign “sticking” (Skt. lagna) to the eastern horizon at the given moment, i.e. in the ascendent. The twelve terms for these, both in Mon and Burmese, are taken from Sanskrit, and correspond closely to the terms used in the West:

One other auspicious lagna, mentioned frequently in O.M. (IX A12, B38, E44, G4, L9, Q6) is godhulī, Sanskrit godhūli, “earth-dust” (? cattle-dust), the moment at sunrise or sunset when mist rises from the earth (when cattle go out to, or return from, pasture?).
"Nakṣatra", says the Vedic Index, "is a word of obscure origin and derivation. ... The sense of 'star' appears to be adequate for all, or nearly all, the passages in which Nakṣatra occurs in the Ṛg Veda". In the Atharva Veda 28 constellations are enumerated, marking the ecliptic, the apparent path of the moon in the heavens. It makes one revolution, apparently among these stars, in 27 to 28 days; so Aḥbijjiv was added at the end of the earlier list of 27 Nakṣatras. It has been often pointed out that, whether by borrowing or independent observation, Indian Nakṣatras show striking correspondences, both with Arabic mandzil, and with the 28 Chinese 偃hsuí "mansions" (Grammata Serica 1029 *siôk. For a list of these, see H. A. Giles, Chinese-English Dictionary, 1912 ed., Vol. I, pp. 26–27). According to Henri Maspero (La Chine Antique, 1965 ed., pp. 512–3), the hsuí appear in Chinese texts towards the end of the 4th century b.c., and very likely more than a century earlier. The Twelve Year Cycle of Jupiter was also introduced into China "about 375 b.c." For a discussion of all these matters, including the influence of Greek science (from the 5th cent. b.c.) on Indian Siddhānta literature, see Prof. Jean Filliozat, L'Inde Classique, t. II, pp. 177–194, 720–738.

As I am not a mathematician, all I can do here is to record the meagre evidence in the inscriptions of our period, down to about 1200 A.D. Over a dozen of the 28 Nakṣatras are mentioned by name. In Post-Pagan inscriptions they are usually noted by their number in the series: –

(i) O.M. Inscr. VI.8-4. – Prome, Shwehsandaw, Kyanzittha's first inscription: "In the year of the sakaraḷya 455, [year-name] Mrigasiras, on Friday the ... waxing moon of Srāvan, Uttara Phalgunī nakṣatra, Kanya lagna [sc. Virgo in the ascendent]." Uttara Phalguni is the 12th lunar mansion.

(ii) O.M. Inscr. V61-55. – Kyanzittha's Mt. Kelāsa inscription (from Myatheindan pagoda, Ayetthē-mâ, some 30 miles north of Thaton). Blagden received poor rubbings of this inscription, and his readings can be improved by comparison with the Kyaiktē duplicate, I.B. V 549-58. There are two dates, recording the engraving and the setting up of the inscription. "In 460 of the sakaraḷya, year-name (sambacchar) Besdkha, on Friday the 3rd of the waxing moon of Besaikha, Haṣṭa nakṣatra, 4 nāḍī precisely (? tmin); entering Citra nakṣatra, (Sūla) joga, Kanya lagna [Virgo in the ascendent]. At that time this stone inscription was engraved. On Thursday the 9th of the waxing (?) moon of Besaikha, Uttara Bhādrapada nakṣatra, Siddhi joga, Methun lagna [Gemini in the ascendent], 3 nāḍī and 1 pāṭ precisely. At that time this stone inscription was set up."

Haṣta and Citra are the 13th and 14th lunar mansions; Uttara Bhādrapadā the 26th. Joga doubtless refers to the 27 yoga, or time-measurements of the movements of the sun corresponding to the 27 nakṣatras of the moon. For the list of both, see L'Inde Classique, t. II, p. 734; but the correspondences of Yoga and Nakṣatra there noted, no not seem to agree with those given in our inscription. A. nāḍī (O.B. nāḍi, nārī) was a period of 24 minutes measured on the tubular stalk or reed (Skt. nāṭika), serving as a water-clock (clepsydra). A pāṭ (Skt. pāda) was ¼ of a nāḍī, i.e. 6 mins. These terms, and also pahar, pahir (Skt. prahara, a "striking"), equivalent to ghaṭī = 7½ nāḍī, a day-watch of 3 hours, are frequently mentioned in Kyanzittha's palace-inscription.

(iii) O.M. Inscr. IX F38. – "the auspicious time of 2 pahir, Haṣṭa nakṣatra, Methuna lagna [Gemini in the ascendent]".

This was the great day (Friday, March 7th, 1102) when, after months of elaborate ceremonial, the posts of the Throne-room were set up in the presence of the king. But see Blagden's note (Ep. Birm. III, I, p. 53, n. 1): – "The time was apparently six hours after true sunrise, i.e. about 11:47 a.m. On that day Mithuna was lagna from 11:16 a.m. to 1:16 p.m. but the lunar mansion Haṣṭa was no longer current, having ended at 3:30 p.m. on the preceding afternoon. This is one of the several cases in these dates which seem to throw some doubt on the correct identification of the year or the applicability of the reckoning employed. Cf. E 22 n."

(iv) I.B. I 29-45. – Sanskrit conclusion of Caṅsī I's Pali stone inscription in Pagān Shwégugyí (Pe Maung Tin's translation): – "The Cave was set up on Sunday the 4th day of the dark half of 28 Nakṣatras or Lunar Mansions.
the month of Vaiaakhā, under the nakṣatra Uttarāśaḍha, Leo in the ascendent, in the Śaka year 1053. This Cave was completed on Wednesday the 11th day of the dark half of the month of Mārga-śiras, when the Sun was in conjunction with Indrāgniōdevatā, in Śaka year 1053” (Bull. Burm. Hist. Com., I, I, p. 24). 1053 M.S. = 1131 A.D. Uttarāśaḍha is the 21st lunar mansion; Indrāgniōdevatā (=Viśākhā) the 16th.

(v) I.B. III 311 a7-8 (Pagan Museum Stone 25, S. face). – “In ... s., on Thursday the 1st day day of the waxing moon of Tanchōnmhun [= Kārttiṅka], Svāti (?) nakṣatra, Tula [Libra] in the ascendent.” – This O.B. inscription probably dates from Cāṇśū I’s reign, after 1131 A.D. (see Text, pp. 115-116). Svāti is the 15th lunar mansion.

(vi) I.B. IV 367 b1-7. O.B. ink-inscription in Kyazin temple (see Text, p. 391). Three dates are given: – “In 487 s., year-name Śrāvaṇa, on the New Moon (lit. dead moon) day of Kuchuṇ [= Vaiśākhā], Kṛttikā nakṣatra, the donor of this Holy One, called Bārući, died. In 579 s., year-name Ceyya [= Caitra], on Thursday the 13th day of the waning moon of Tawslān [= Bhādra], Māgha nakṣatra, 1st day-watch (pahur), 1st nāḍī, Tula lagna [Libra in the ascendent], the enshrinement of this cave-temple of Bārući was made by the Saṅ (monk) Tra-uil. In 585 s., Asuc [= Āśvayuj] year, on Thursday the 7th day of the waning moon of Nattaw [= Mārgaśiras], Māgha nakṣatra, Messi lagna [Pisces in the ascendent], at the time of the 3rd day-watch (pahur), the monk Tra Uil named this Holy One. The name is Trai-lok-luḥoh buil [O.M. “Strong Comfort of the Three Worlds”].” Kṛttikā is the 3rd lunar mansion, Magha the 10th.

(viii) I.B. I 9 a1-8. This small O.B. inscription, of unknown of nn rigin, is now Stone 292 in Mandalay Palace Shed. It begins: – “When (1737) years of the Lord’s Religion had elapsed, in 555 s. (yearname Jai) [Caitra], on Wednesday the 1st day of the waxing moon of .......... (Abhic)it nakṣatra” ..........Abhijit is inserted as the 22nd lunar mansion (before Śravaṇa).

(ix) I.B. I 14-2. The W. face of Stone 12 at Pagan Museum, one of the thirty Burmese inscriptions collected from the Māhābodhi enclosure. Here (I surmise, see Text, pp. 7-8) they were taken for safety, when the N.W. corner of the city was eroded by the river in the middle of the Pagan dynasty. “In 558 s., year-name Āśādhā, on Tuesday the 4th day of the waning moon of Tawslān [= Bhādra], Punabbasu [= Punarvasu] nakṣatra”. Punarvasu is the 7th lunar mansion.

(x) I.B. IV 368 b1-4, 369 a, b, c. Ink inscriptions on the walls at Čaṇśū II’s Dhammarājaka pagoda, duplicating parts of the broken stone inscription (I.B. I 19, 20), which is here defective. This is the oldest extant original stone inscription by a king of Pagan. There are 3 dates: – “In 558 s., Āsat [Āśādhā] year, on Sunday the 13th day of the waxing moon of Santū [= Āśvina], king Čaṇśū offered, by the pouring of pure water, the wages ...... for the building of the royal pagoda at Śacamālī. In 559 s., Saravan year, on Friday the 7th day of the waxing moon of Santū, Mūla nakṣatra, Min lāk [Pisces in the ascendent], 3rd day-watch (pahur), he began to build ...... In 560 s., Phatsa [Bhādra] year, on (approximately) Friday the 2nd day of the waning moon of Santū, having set the crown on (the pagoda), he ‘released’ the following dedications ......”. This final date, according to U Ka, was Friday, Sept. 8th, 1198 A.D. Mūla is the 19th lunar mansion.

(xi) I.B. II 1161-2. Mica schist [Wébu stone] inscription at Hsutaungpyi pagoda, N.W. of Sunyē village, Kyaukse township. “In the year 559, on Sunday the full moon of Tankhū [Caitra], Hasta nakṣatra”. Hasta is the 13th lunar mansion.
At my request, U Ka, late Principal of Rangoon University and Professor of Mathematics, did valuable research on the Old Burma Calendar, with the object of checking and relating it to the Julian Calendar of the West. Unfortunately, our materials were lost during the last War, when the Japanese occupied Burma and nearly all our work perished. Until hundreds of inscriptions had been located, re-stamped, re-read, and re-indexed, it was not possible for U Ka to resume his task or bring it to fruition. But perhaps it is of interest to leave on record (so far as a non-mathematician is capable) a statement of the various methods tried, and the final method chosen, if very imperfectly achieved.

So far as Early Pagan is concerned, the fullest inscriptional evidence is in Mon, and has been given above. The fullest detail is in Kyanzittha's palace inscription; but in what remains of it, no year-date is mentioned. Dr. Blagden called in the help of the eminent authority on Indian chronology, Sir Robert Sewell (v. Epig. Birm. III, I, pp. 2–3, and n. i on p. 3), who determined the dates (no doubt correctly) as 1101–02 A.D., and worked out the details according to Indian rules. But in several cases these ran counter to the written evidence. One or two instances are cited above, leaving Blagden in doubt “on the applicability of the reckoning employed”. Such doubts were strengthened when Blagden went on to edit the Middle Mon inscriptions of the Kalyāṇī sīmā, Pegu (1479–80 a.d.). Meantime the learned Indian scholar, Mr. Swami Kannu Pillai, had attempted to check the dates in two of the six ‘elephant volumes’ of Burma inscriptions (v. A.S.B. 1922, pp. 14, 46–58; 1924, pp. 30–35, 64–101). He asserted, naturally enough, that “the most reliable guide in the verification of dates is the Śūrya siddhānta”; but Blagden faulted his calculation of at least 5 of the 17 “leading verifiable dates” in the inscription he was editing, which had led Mr. Pillai “to contradict the distinct statement of our record (both Pali and Mon) that the month of Āśāḍha was intercalated in the year” (1476 a.d. – v. Epig. Birm. III, II, pp. 86–87; also pp. 289–290).

Another brave attempt, from the Burma side, had been made, long before, by Sir Alfred M. B. Irwin, author of The Burmese Calendar (London, 1901) and The Burmese and Arakanese Calendars (Rangoon, 1909). At the suggestion of Sir Richard Temple, Editor of the Indian Antiquary, and the original ‘begetter’ of the six elephant volumes, he added a supplement (v. Ind. Ant., Nov. 1910, pp. 289–315) “with a view to facilitating the calculation and verification of Burmese inscriptional dates for the period before A.D. 1739. It is compiled on the assumption that the rules of Makaranda were observed in Burma from 0 to 1100 B.E. = A.D. 638–1738 .... The present table ... must be taken only as a working hypothesis for these 1101 years”. – According to Sewell and Dikshit (The Indian Calendar, 1896, p. 8), the Makaranda was composed at Benares in 1478. So one can rule out all direct influence of the work on our Pagan inscriptions, apart from the common debt to the (4th century ?) Śūrya siddhānta.

Duroselle, in his preface to A List of Inscriptions found in Burma (Rangoon, 1921), gently criticises the six elephant volumes on which his list was based: their modernized spelling, negligent copying, unreliable dates. The chief criticism which I should add is that many of the inscriptions classified as “original” are not in fact so. Even when their dates are correctly read, many can be proved by their palaeography and spelling to date from a period centuries later. Some volumes are better than others. The first, “Pagan, Pinya and Ava”, is the best. The last, “A” (Patodawgyi, Amarapura), is the worst. None, in my opinion, is a trustworthy substitute for rubbings of the original stones. My job was just to make my own readings, copy each date on separate cards, noting or bracketing everything doubtful, and so supply U Ka with evidence as accurate as I could make it.

U Ka, a pious Muslim born and bred in Mandalay, knew well the old ‘pōnna’ U Seinda and his son U Lokisara, who, like the sanhkraṇti Brahmans of Kyanzittha’s reign, have year by year been responsible for compiling the Burma Calendar. They followed the Makaranda or Śāṃdiṭṭha systems as set forth by the great Burmese mathematician of king Mindon’s reign, the Kanni Atwinwun (v. Makaranta-bedan-lakrui: – ṭhā (Yadanadipan Press, Mandalay, 1905).
U Ka’s first step was to test the inscriptional dates of the Pagan period by Irwin’s list in the Indian Antiquary. The great majority of Burmese inscriptions are content to give the year in the Common Era, often the year-name, the day of the waxing or waning month, and the weekday. If year and year-name agree, the only means of testing is by the weekday. If the weekday as stated agreed with the weekday required by the system, U Ka marked it 0. The maximum error was thus ± 3. Out of 359 dates tested, only 91 gave an 0 result. In 3 cases the stated month-day did not occur at all in the year required by the system.

In every 19 years (the old Greek Cycle of Meton) 7 leap-months (and sometimes leap-days) are added in the 2nd, 5th, 7th, 10th, 13th, 15th and 18th year of the cycle. But the Burmese Court was apt to take liberties, we are told, and sometimes substituted the 8th and 16th for the 7th and 15th. U Ka experimented with this substitution, but the results were worse and not better.

He then considered whether the weekday given in the inscriptions might refer to the tithi, lunar day, rather than the dinavāra, solar or planetary day. This appears to have been a common method in Indian inscriptions; but the word tithi does not occur, so far as I am aware, in Pagan inscriptions, except in horoscopes near the very end of the dynasty, where it is contrasted with the “religious day” (sāsanā ryaṅk) which was the normal day. The horoscope cited on p. 82 of the Text (I.B. V 609 a), where the “7th religious day” is equated with the “6th lunar day according to astrology, a Saturday”, is dated 664 s./1303 A.D.

After many fruitless experiments U Ka decided to give up the attempt to fit the Pagan dates into a pre-conceived system, but to compile instead an experimental calendar, breaking existing rules only when necessary, in order to suit the maximum number of the best data of the inscriptions. I went through my cards, marking as 1 those which I considered first class, 2 those that seemed good but (often owing to the absence of the year-name, or because they were not the final date in the inscription) not first class, 3 those of inferior quality, not negligible but open to some degree of doubt, and 4 those which could be safely neglected, often because they were not ‘original’, i.e. shown by their writing or spelling not to date from the Pagan period. This method, we both thought, led to much more satisfactory conclusions, though carelessness cannot be ruled out even in ‘first class’ dates. To establish the correctness of such a calendar, there must be a continuous minimum of good dates in each successive year. This minimum was not available before Caṇṇu II’s reign; and dates are none too numerous before the accession of his son Natoṁmya in 573 s., Āśvina year, on Thursday the 10th waxing of Tawthalin = Thursday, August 18th, 1211, according to U Ka’s calculation. The date is confirmed by more than one inscription. From that date onwards, if not earlier, it may be possible to reconstruct the Pagan calendar with probability, if not certainty.

I find among my papers (we had to leave Burma in a hurry) four pages in U Ka’s clear handwriting, giving the gist of his reconstruction of the calendar from 570-663 s. (Burmese Era)/1208-1301 A.D. It gives, year by year, the exact time of the ‘Thingyan Tet’ (Solar New Year), the number of days in each month (Tagu to Tabaung) including leap-months, with the Julian equivalent of the first day in each month. It was compiled in pre-War days; and at this distance of time I cannot recall if it was his final word on the calendar. But of its great value I have no doubt. It is reproduced in facsimile in pocket at end of this volume). In my own handwriting of the same period, I find the following notes which are perhaps worth quoting: –

“The beginning of the Burmese Era given at the head of Irwin’s table in the Indian Antiquary, viz. 2nd waxing of Tagu, 0 s. = March 22nd, 638 A.D., 11 hours, 11 minutes, 24 seconds – U Ka has verified and found correct”.

I.B. III 269\(^1\) – 645 s., Āśvina year, Sunday the 12th waxing of Nayon leap-month (adhimat namyun).

I.B. IV 395\(^{19}\) – 664 s., Vaiśākha year, Friday the 12th waxing of Mlwaytā leap-month (thimhat so mlwaytā).

I.B. V 609 a (2) – 656 s., Sunday night, 5th waxing of Nayon leap-month (thimhassa la namyun). – A horoscope.
Since Nayôn and Mlawytâ (= Wazo) are both mentioned as leap-months, it seems natural to suppose that the difference between these leapmonths would be equivalent to the difference between ordinary Nayôn and Wazo, viz. that the former should have 29, and the latter 30 days. U Ka, however, finds that in the two years, 645 and 656 s., when Nayôn leapmonth is explicitly mentioned, it is impossible, in view of the data, to give Nayôn less than 30 days. He has therefore come to the conclusion that since the leapmonth fell between Nayôn and Wazo, either name was used to designate it. As a matter of fact, in every case he has found it possible to give the leapmonth 30 days. The doubtful features in the Old Burmese calendar naturally relate especially to the leapmonth system.
What system there was, if any, can only be solved, it seems, experimentally with reference to the data of the inscriptions. After much experiment U Ka has constructed his calendar for this period on the following principles: –

(i) that in each Metonic cycle of 19 years (counted from 0 to 18), there were 7 leap years as at present, but fixed as the 2nd, 5th, 7th, 10th, 13th, 16th and 18th in the series.
(ii) the leapmonth had always 30 days.

'Now a Metonic cycle of 19 years should contain approximately 6940 days; whereas a cycle constructed on the above-stated principles would contain only 6936 days. There are therefore about 4 extra days to be provided for: not 4 exactly, since the cycle does not contain a purely integral number of days. U Ka's method has been to insert these extra days according as the data of the inscriptions required'.
